

CHILDHOOD OF THE HEART.

By MAT D. BLOSSER.
 THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1893.

It has been discovered that the new Columbian postage stamps can be used to replace old ones as well as on each occasion. One stamp on each wall and two on the ceiling give a fine rococo effect unless the stamp has to be cut in this space.

The English house of commons nearly had a conviction of its own guilt because the venerable Mr. Forster had been found guilty of being entirely too English in his occupation of the house.

As item of news that naturally finds a place about half way between the pugilistic and social columns is that the fighters who so vociferously evade fist contention, is out of jail. He is under the same roof as the man who has been so long in the same place.

A Newark boarder made disparaging remarks about the cooking set before him, and much to his surprise he found it was a set for $10,000. His remark died away when the jury brought in a verdict that he was to pay for it.

Now that the hasty friends of Ireland have exhausted their means for or less had breath in denunciation of the home rule bill, come the day for the hasty friends of Gladstone to state the summaries published up to date are principally gossamer.

The speaker of the house of commons proposes limiting the number to be admitted to the ladies' gallery. The speaker of the house of commons proposes limiting the number to be admitted to the ladies' gallery.

There is some significance in the report which comes from London that the navy review to the extent at first contemplated, because the government does not intend to review the navy review to the extent at first contemplated.

If the dressmaker is to be conceded the endowments of some of our presidents, cabinets and the other paraphernalia of a republic doing? This seems to be the question.

It has sometimes been argued that nations are not apt to imbibe the same lessons from their own history as they do from the history of other nations.

WILL BE GARRIED IN PROVISIONS ON THE HAWAII ANNEXATION TREATY.

The treaty of annexation concluded between Secretary of State Foster and the Hawaiian provisional government's commissioners has been transmitted to the Senate. The President also sent a brief message favoring annexation.

It is essential that some of the great powers shall secure these lands. Such a possession would not only be a great addition to the territory of the United States, but it would also be a great addition to the power of the United States.

There was a pathetic look in her gray eyes that first drew Mr. Kendall's attention to her. She had been looking at him with a look of intense interest.

THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1893.

KING HUBBERT has made Verdi the Marquis of Basseto, but the world will always know him as the Verdi who composed the opera.

It is an American syndicate that has gobbled up San Domingo. As it calls itself an improvement company, there is a field for that sort of enterprise on the island.

The New York pianomakers seem to be rather high strung. Their demands for space at the world's fair were not fully complied with, and they are kicking like foals.

AMONG the estates left by persons who died in Vienna intestate, and whose heirs have not been found, is one consisting of an opera glass. Another man's estate consists of a scarf pin.

M. ZOLA, the French novelist, has realized $400,000 from the sale of his works during the past twenty years. That ought to console him a little bit for his failure to break into the Academy of Science.

THE well-meaning but disappointed Isabella society cannot repair their inability to get a bronze statue of the queen by consenting to take a gelatine one. This would be only to bring ridicule on failure.

A LONG distance telephone between Chicago and Boston is an absurdity on its face, so far as the possibilities of conversation are concerned. The vernacular of neither could be understood at the opposite end of the line.

CHARLES HENRY PEARSON, an Englishman, has written a book in which he claims to have proved that the great races of the world are losing ground, and that the Chinese, Hindus and South American half-breeds are the coming leaders of civilization.

REMEMBER now the days when the thoughtful and dignified W. Goat used to vary his diet on tin labels with the cast-off hoopskirt and the sportive cow used occasionally to step into a discarded one in a back alley and then run amuck-down-busy thoroughfares.

WHILE the deaths in Marseilles number scores daily from something very like cholera, survivors are welcome to extract what comfort they may from medical assurance that the malady is not cholera, but only an imitation. However, there is something distressingly realistic in the imitation.

AND deep down in the sporting breast arises a little cloud of suspicion no larger than a man's head. Its nebulous outlines concentrate and form the question: How much did "Pompadour" Jimmie Corbett have to do with the immigration commissioner's refusal to let Pugilist Charlie Mitchell land on American soil?

THE underwriters are asking a prohibitive rate for insuring the tinder-box hotels which are crowding up around the world's fair grounds to the danger of the exposition buildings and the city itself. The authorities should have asked prohibitive rates for the permits in the first place, and a great peril might have been avoided.

CLEVER idea that of the man who carries an expensive umbrella. He has the handle made so that it can be taken off, and whenever he has occasion to leave the umbrella in a public place he takes the handle off and puts it in his pocket. Of course nobody would care to appropriate an umbrella without a handle.

A BURGLAR reeled over from heart disease upon being harshly accosted by the householder whose premises he had invaded. This circumstance recalls the necessity of dealing gently with the erring. It is well also to remember that the average burglar is not so weak of heart as he is handy with his gun.

A YOUNG Australian traveler claims to have discovered that the waltz was the creation of neither a German nor a Swiss, but of the ostriches of Africa. He asserts that every morning at sunrise these amiable birds assemble in groups and begin a regular and graceful movement which is none other than the waltz.

WHILE this country has been suffering from the severity of the weather this winter, it is reported that there has been a phenomenal absence of snow in the Swiss Alps. Transportation has been seriously hampered, and the sledges, it is said, are useless, and the Julier pass is traversed on wheels. A midwinter circumstance said to be previously unknown.

JIM CORBETT, already a pugilist, actor and bank clerk is also trying to become a monopolist. The terms he dictates for a meeting with either Mitchell or Jackson couldn't be met by anything less costly than an English syndicate or an American trust.

THERE is getting to be something wrong with the French diet. Another man has been hurt in one of them. To be sure, his injury was much less severe than would have been caused by a silver under the thumb, but it tends toward a wholesale defiance of precedent.

FRANK CRONIN, of West Chester, Pa., has brought a suit for $8,000 damages against the Seventh avenue hotel, Pittsburg. He was a conductor in the Pullman service and lost his position because the hotel clerk failed to call him in time to take his car.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

A Remarkable Cure in This Town. First the use of a Patent Medicine. Mr. Theodore Cross is the son of S. O. Cross, Esq., the well-known writer on political and domestic economy, as well as a noted lawyer. He is one of the firm of Cross & Durkee, engaged in the insurance business in Cleveland, Ohio. He is a family man, predisposed to scrupulous consumption, which has made sad havoc in an insular, and available family, of which none are better known in this section of the state as well as Kingsbury. Two sons and four daughters succumbed to the terrible disease, consumption, and led the family and friends to dread and tremble at the first symptoms of a cold, or exposure, that would have a tendency to bring on the disease.

Theodore (the subject of this article) married one of Kingsbury's attractive maidens, Jessie W. Vaughn, a daughter of Orville Vaughn. About three years after they were married they went to Bradford, Erie Co., Pa., where a severe cold resulted in typhus malaria which changed after ten days into a relapsing fever, which was accompanied with him for five long painful weeks, before any change was perceptible.

The most skillful medical treatment was employed. Then followed a dry hacking, wasting cough, paroxysms of which would drive him into insensibility, and torture his devoted companion. For nine months such a condition continued, which was attended by a fish, devoted wife and family suffered can only be understood by the who had seen her husband daily losing his hold on the world, and life gradually fading away in spite of medical skill and tenderness.

His parents were wretched with the ever present, vivid recollections of a loved one, over whose graves summer flowers and wintry winds struggled for supremacy. Weighing the matter, making hourly incursions upon his waning body, Mr. Cross bought a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, containing 50 pills, and took them for a few months before he had felt any relief. He then bought another bottle, and took it for a few months before he had felt any relief. He then bought another bottle, and took it for a few months before he had felt any relief.

So distressing was his cough that his sufferings were almost intolerable. He took position of a weakened forces, body and mind, as to make him like a drowning man, ready to be caught upon anything that had the shadow of relief he so much needed.

One day, the village drug store of Dr. James B. Flood, his attention was attracted to the green wrapper that contained the remarkable remedy, "Kemp's Balsam." Its color took his eye. He read a small circular which met his case exactly, and he had tried many others without relief. He purchased a bottle. The first dose thrilled him with its healing effect. He bought another bottle, and took it for a few months before he had felt any relief.

The above is a true story, as published in the Herald of January 13, 1888. It was written by the editor of that paper before he had seen the medicine that could bring such suffering ought to be brought to the notice of everyone. Sandy Hill is in each county of Washington County, N. Y.

WAITING FOR MY OWN.

Severe I told my hands and wait. Nor care for whether I am or sea; I have no more 'gainst time or fate. For lo! my own shall come to me.

I stay my haste. I make delays: For what avails this eager pace? I stand awhile for the clear way. And what is mine shall come to me.

Asleep, awake, by night or day, The friends I seek are seeking me; No wind can drive my bark astray. Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matter if I stand alone? I wait with you for the coming years; My heart shall reap where it has sown. And garner up its fruits of tears.

The waters know their own, and draw The brook that springs in yonder heights; So flows the good with equal law Unto the soul of pure delight.

You frowny nodding in the wind Is frowny plighted to the breeze; And maiden, why that look unkind? For lo! thy lover seeketh thee.

The stars come nightly to the sky. The tidal wave unto the sea; Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high, Can keep my own away from me.

Lucindy's COURTSHIP. Cyrus allers wuz bashful an' retirin' anyway. Why, he wouldn't be married terday if it hadn't be'n fer me a helpin' uv him out.

Now, when he fust used ter cum ter see me he uster make out that he cum ter see pa on some errand or other, an' he an' pa would set an' talk, talk till I got disgusted an' went off ter bed.

"I was on one o' these fateful occasions that I wuz just a takin' up my candle, an' wuz a goin' ter retire ter my bedchamber when Cyrus cum a sidin' up ter me, lookin' kinder sheepish, an' sez he ter me, sez he: "Lucindy, yer hain't a goin' off ter bed so quick, be ye?"

"I'm orful tired an' sleepy," sez I, "besides I don't see nothin' ter set up fer." "I knowed all the time I wuz a tellin' an orful fib."

I reckon pa took the hint fer he swashed out on mighty sudden. "Lucindy," sez Cyrus, a lookin' at me an' a speakin' low an' meditatin' like, "Lucindy, what makes yer allers try ter run away from me? I wouldn't hurt ye for the world."

By this time I wuz blushin' like sixty but I tried ter appear calm an' composed. "Suppose yer come into the front room, Cyrus," sez I, "with more pleasantin' in there."

He didn't need much urg'n, I could see that on the start, so I got a match an' lit up the candles, an' purty soon he comes.

Now Cyrus allers wuz tremenjous sharp an' long-beaked, so what does he do but go plank hisself down on the sofa the fust thing. There he sot for five or ten minutes in deep silence. I could see by the workings uv his countenance that he wuz in deep thought an' had suthin' he wished ter say.

"Lucindy," sez he, at last, "le's trade handkerchers." So I tlost my handkercher over ter him an' he tlost his back ter me; an' so we sot a throwin' our handkerchers back an' forth fer some time. At last we got tired a tradin' handkerchers, an' as I noticed his eye lit on the album over in the corner, I walked over an' got it.

"Shall I show yer the picters, Cyrus?" sez I. "Oh, do," sez Cyrus. "I knowed all the time he wuz a tryin' ter git me over there on that er sofy side o' him. Now, I had nothin' ag'in Cyrus, so I goes over an' sets side o' him an' shows him the picters, an' if you'll b'leve it from that night forth till we wuz jined in holy matrimony we looked at them er picters every time he cum ter see me."

One eventful night, I remember it as though it wuz yesterday, we wuz a settin' on the sofa as usual. Cyrus come reg'ular now—when all of sudden he kinks up his face as though he wuz in orful pain.

"Oh, Cyrus," sez I, "what ails yer? Shall I ca pa ter git the doctor?" "I got an orful cramp in this arm next ter yer," sez he. "Straighten it out, Cyrus," sez I, "it's the best thing for a cramp."

"I b'leve yer right, Lucindy," sez he, a straightenin' it out behind me. "You can keep yer arm that way, Cyrus," sez I, "if it makes the cramp any better." An' keep it there he did, only I s'pose it wuz tiresome a holdin' it out straight fer so long, so by degrees he got into in a more easy position until his hand rested gracefully upon my hip.

(But! I never should have told him he could keep his arm there if I had know, how subject he wuz ter cramps.) "Lucindy," sez he. "Yes, Cyrus," sez I. "Lucindy," sez Cyrus ag'in, "Lucindy."

"I b'leve that's my name," sez I. "Lucindy," sez Cyrus ter the third time, "Lucindy, do yer like me?" At this I wuz orful disappointed fer I wuz in hopes he wuz a goin' to say love instid o' like. Howsomer I appeared not to show my feelin's.

"I never had nothin' ag'in yer, Cyrus," sez I. He never opened his face at this remark o' mine, but set ez still as a mouse fer some time.

"Bime-by I gits tired o' sich stillness an' fearin' my reply wuz too cold an' distant, I sez, sez I. "Cyrus, hain't there nothin' yer wish ter say ter me?" I seed his face light up in a minnit an' I knowed I'd seed the proper thing.

"Lucindy," sez Cyrus, "do you know the word 'love' bears more meanin' than the word 'like'?" Now, I never wuz slow ter take a hint, if I do say it, an' I seen in one minnit what he wuz a drivin' at, so I sez, sez I: "What makes yer beat about the bush so, Cyrus? Why don't you come out fist-footed?" An' I do b'leve he wuz just on the pint o' poppin' the question right then an' there, but all of a sudden we wuz both startled by I sounded clearer and further away. I wuz nigh out faintin', fer the life uv me I couldn't tell what it wuz. I felt Cyrus' knees tremble, I mean I saw 'em tremble, an' I knowed he wuz as afeard as I wuz, but! yer never can gita man ter own up he's feared o' nothin'!
