MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

Radical Changes That Have Taken Place in England.

Marriage customs have changed everywhere with the advance of civilization. Anglo-Saxons in ancient times, it is said, used to capture their wives by force from their fathers or their husbands, it did not matter which.

This was before Augustine came to preach Christianity. Then purchase was more common than capture, although the latter seems to have been frequent enough to the reign of Ethelbert to need regulation by law. By this law a man might run away with a woman, provided he afterward paid her previous owner, be he father or husband, 50 shillings. If it was husband who had thus been deprived of his wife, the woman's captor had not only to pay him the fine, but also to buy him another wife. In any case the stolen woman belonged to her captor.

If a man had purchased his bride in the days of Ethelbert and afterward concluded he had paid too much for her, it was lawful for him to return her to her former owner and claim again the purchase price, provided that he had not previously expressed satisfaction by making the bride a present on the morning after the wedding.

The next step was the "foster lien," when the bride price was paid on the day of espousal and was supposed to compensate the parent for the cost of bringing up his daughter. It seems, however, that this soon fell into disrepute, as there was no law against the father's engaging his daughter to some mercenary suitor, taking from each the "foster lien" and, of course, cheating all but one on the wedding day, which, at that time, was only the day of betrothal, when the suitor gave a "wed" or pledge for the future performance of his contract. If the suitor did not claim his bride within two years after the wedding day, he forfeited all right to her and to whatever money or goods he had paid for her. If the woman or her father broke their promises, the father had to give the suitor four times as much as the suitor had already paid him.

As civilization advanced the bride price was given to the woman herself and became her dowry, while now days the father frequently turned and the bride settles the money on her husband. —Kate Field's Washington.

THE WALRUS ON LAND.

He is Just as Helpless as a Canibalist Would Be.

As might be expected, a walrus is about as helpless on land as a canibalist. It is with no little difficulty and much hitches and frowns that he drags his huge bulk upon a sandy shore even with the breakers as they roll in and dash against him. His hind flippers are of little use on land, and on sand or pebbles, where his front flippers do not hold well, the labor of floundering forward is so great that he never stirs beyond the edge of the water and usually lies with his body half awash, with the salt spray dashing over him like torrents of rain. On solid rock or ice he gets along much better, and often a herd will spread several rods back from the water's edge.

The females and younger walruses have far less development of neck to encumber them and therefore enjoy more freedom of motion than the old males, who actually seem a great burden to themselves. These creatures are strictly social in their habits and always go in herds, whether traveling, feeding, fighting or resting ashore. In the days before the slaughter of all living creatures became a ruling passion in the breast of man the Pacific species inhabited the whole of Bering sea and straits in herds which often contained thousands and even tens of thousands of individuals. —St. Nicholas.

Themistocles.

Themistocles, the hero of Salamis, was sent into exile for the practice of the art of extraction. This was a purely Athenian device to prevent any citizen becoming too great. When any man acquired such prominence as to be unsafe to the state, a number of citizens demanded a vote, which was taken by writing on shells the name of the too prominent citizen. If a majority voted against him, he was sent into exile, not because he had done anything, but for fear he might do something. He staid away from five to ten years, then returned and resumed his standing as a citizen without loss of property or reputation. Themistocles was ostracized and went into exile, where he was soon accused of treasonable correspondence with the Persians. He was about to be arrested, but fled to Persia. He gained great influence at the Persian court and projected an invasion of Greece, but died, it is supposed by poison, before his plans could be realized. —Exchange.

When They Meet and Part.

An Englishman salutes his friend with: "How do you do? Goodby. Farewell." Similarly the Dutchman, "Vas wel," and the Swede, "Farvel." A Frenchman says: "Bonjour! Au plaisir!" —I. e., "de vous revoir." An Italian, "Buon giorno! Addio! A rivederci!" A Spaniard, "Buenos dias! Adios! Hasta la vista!" (French "Au revoir!") The Turk folds his arms and bows his head toward the person whom he salutes. The common Arab says, "Salam aleikum" ("Peace be with you"). He then lays his hands on his breast in order to show that the wish proceeds from his heart.

A Moral Power.

Queen Victoria is said to have become somewhat fractious, and age is telling on her at last. Irritable as the queen may be under the pangs of rheumatism which now afflict her, no one desires to see her place filled by another. She has done the balance of moral power in her share of Europe as no crowned head has done before her or will be likely to do after her. —Boston Herald.

No Difference.

Mrs. Esmond—You are no unlike my first husband.
Mr. S.—I hope the difference is in my favor, my dear.
Mrs. S.—Oh, it is very much.
Mr. S.—Thanks. What is it?
Mrs. S.—You're alive. —Newport Mercury.

The Store

The Store

FLUSHED WITH SUCCESS!

The Store presents itself, Friends and Patrons, this week clothed in its gala garb to make its announcements for that greatest of all Christian festivals—the Christmas time.—The time of giving and receiving, the time of joyous anticipation and delightful surprises, freighted with emotions that are sacred in their recollections—lightening our present care, soothing our passing sorrows by its "God will to all men."

We hope it may be pardonable in us if at this time we feel a pride born of conscious power that in some measure we can show the appreciation we feel in the generous support we have received from the Citizens of Washtenaw County for many years past but more especially for the past twelve Months. Animated by this desire we place before our readers BARGAINS taken from every department of our business that have no suggestion of profit or value. We want every one to feel who makes a purchase at THE STORE during the next two weeks, that we are contributing in a large measure to a gift for themselves or their friends.

With gratitude for past favors and a hope our efforts may receive equal recognition in the future.
