CHAPTER OF THE DOINGS OF MICHIGANDERS.

Marders His Wife and Bal Ice at Menominee Other Items, Etc.

Fire was discovered in the home of Dan. J. Trombley, of Bay City, and with little trouble it was extinguished. Then Chief Harding began to investigate the cause, and was almost, overgate the cause, and was almost, over-come by the smell of burning flesh. On a bed in a little room on the first floor he found Mrs. Trombley's body, partially burned, and her year-old babe beside her. The lower part of the woman's body was badly burned and toth were dead. An examination of the woman's body showed that her throat had been out in three places or the woman's oddy showed that her throat had been cut, in three places, the murderer evidently having jabbed the blade of a knife in and then twisted it about in a determined effort to find the jugular vein. There were no marks of violence on the child's Trombley is 33 year of age, the son of an old settler who is quite wealthy. His wife was from Duluth. He was a lumber inspector and for several years did a good business, but lately he had been going down hill and was regarded as a mild lunatic. The couple had another child, a boy about nine years old, who stayed with his grandparents on the fatal night.

Better Protection for Game and Fish.

About thirty sportsmen from various sections of the state attended the meeting at Lansing at which the organization of the Michigan State Fish and Game Protection League, was perfected. President Judge John J. Speed, of Detroit presided. As the result of the session, the bills will be prepared and presented to the legislature prohibiting all spring shooting; making a uniform open season for deer in both peninsulas from Oct. 10 to Nov, 1; making the open season for grouse, quail and partridge from Oct. 1 to Nov. 1: prohibiting the killing of rabbits; save in the month of October, and prohibiting the use of ferrets in hunting-rabbits; making violations of the game laws circuit court offenses, prohibiting sheeting from sail or prohibiting shooting from sail or steamboats or naphtha launches; pro-viding a penalty for killing more than steamboats or naphtha launches, viding a penalty for killing more than two deer a season by any one person and prohibiting the shipment of deer unaccompanied by the person who killed them; fixing the open season for trout from May 15 to September 15; providing that bass shall be taken only by hook and line; requiring the meshes of nets to be large enough to permit the escape of undersized fish; prohibiting spearing in inland waters:

D. Kinne, of Ann Arbor, spoke, and Judge Carpenter, of Detroit, advocated more careful work on the part of the courts in granting naturalism.

Priests Cannot Control C. M. B. A. Affairs. Rt. Rev. Bishop Foley, of Detroit, has rendered a decision of importance to the C. M. B. A., in which he is sustained by Mgr. Satolli. At the recent election of officers of Branch No. 17, C. M. B. A., of Kalamazoo, T. P. Gleason, of the Kalamazoo Daily News, was elected president. Rev. Frank A. O'Brien, pastor of the parish, informed Mr. Gleason, that he would object to his installation unless he did his full duty toward the church by sending his installation in less he did his full duty toward the church by sending his children to the parish school. Mr. Gleason appealed to the bishop and the papal delegate, submitting his case. He declared that he took his children from the parish school because their progress was not satisfactory to him, but that they received proper religious instruction both at home and in Sunday school. Bishop Feller has decided ay school. Bishop Foley has decided favor of Mr. Gleason.

Two years ago the liquor dealers failed to pass their amendments and since that they have been steadily working towards securing influence enough to pass the bill. Frank Kirsch, the treasurer of the Detroit union, said: "We will ask for amendments permitting us to keep open on all holidays excepting Christmas and Thanksgiving Day. We will also ask that our places of business be permitted to be kept open on Sundays after 1.p. m. until 7:30 p. m. These amendments are already prepared and will be placed immediately in the hands of the Detroit delegislature." egislature.

Want Michigan to Annex Mickinae Island.
Col. J. S. Rogers, of Orchard Lake Military academy, has a plan for the annexing of Mackinae island to the state of Michigan, to be used as a military and naval camp for the state troops. The scheme is to obtain the transfer of the island from the United States to the state. The colonel speaks of a precedent in the transfer of Baton Rouge. La., and has little doubt as to Rouge, La, and has little doubt as to the ultimate success of the plan. It has been said by Surgeon-General Hammond of the army that the island is one of the healthiest spots in the country, and it would make an ideal place for the state troops, arranged with fortifications, etc., as it is. ### Coal Famine in Ohio Coal Districts

With the temperature, hovering around zero at Massillon, O., many of the striking coal miners are without fuel to heat their houses. Coal is so scarce that there is not enough to keep the pumps going at the mines, and the operators will soon be com-pelled to buy outside fuel in order to keep their property from going to destruction.

The Massillon operators held a meeting at Cleveland to take action on the refusal of the miners to abide by the decision of the wage arbitration committee. Resolutions were adopted declaring that they would stand by the award, and under no circumstances negotiate on any other basis.

HE following his-tory of Rose Manillawegleaned from the driver fancy.

Five years before she had been most lovely girl of Dosoliro and the surrounding countryside, and the young men of Gravedona spoke with enthusiasm of her matchless beauty.

They named her "The Mountain and even the dreaded custom house officers fell, one and all, a prev to the charms of the peerless daugh-ter of Manilla the smuggler. But the latter guarded her with the most savage ferocity, giving her this brief rself as mucl as you please with these young fools; eware of seriously encourag ing any one of them, more especially one of my own calling; for should you ever become the fiances of a smug gler the lives of both of you shall pay the forfeit."

All knew from the determined and desperate character of the man that he would keep his word. As yet Rosa had felt no temptation to disobev the imperious mandate of her father, for the young men of the neighborhood had each and all failed to awaken the slumbering passions of the dark-eyed beauty.

"I care for none of them," she said with a proud indifference, not unmingled with contempt. 'But if ever I meet with one whom I can truly love the case will be different. I shall take my destiny in my own hands."

About this time Constantino Valfassina, a daring smuggler, and famous hunter of the mountains, whose name was well known as a desperado in all the country round, appeared on the scene. He was strong, courage-ous and handsome. The hitherto cold and impassive heart of the village beauty was stirred to its depths. and she determined that, come might she would wed no other than this one hero, this Napoleon of the forests. What did the bold and young smuggler care for the threats of Manilla? He resolved that he would winthe splendid Rose of the Mountains, and he kept his word.

She was just 20 years of age, and, perhaps, had tired of the lonely life she had hitherto been compelled to lead, or it may be that her affections, like some marvelous mountain plants. were late in flowering; for never before had Rosa Manilla's heart been stirred by that mysterious passion which men call love. The first time she met the hunter she only blushed deeply, and then turned pale. He noted the sigh, and then ventured one evening at sunset, on returning from the forest, to place a bouquet of mountain flowers on her balcony Instead of receiving them with indifference or marriment, as was her blossoms to her lips and kissed them

From that moment Valsassina felt he had conquered, and the lovers lost, no opportunity of being together. Soon the neighbors began to gossip, and those who had at first nitied the girl, condemned to live a solitary and loveless life, with strange inconsis-tency now blamed her severely for her disobedience to her father. Her companions, the village maidens, began to experience the pangs of jeal-ousy, for the handsome smuggler had won other hearts besides that of the Mountain Rose, while the men felt Mountain Rose, while the men felt quantities of snow fell from the wounted because each imagined that mountains that the whole region in past days she had shown some preference for himself, and hate i his victorious rival accordingly. While the cottage of Rosa Manilla was buried they had all felt that she beneath a falling avalanche. It was could be the bride of none of they had been resigned them, they had been resigned sent from home at the time of the to their fate: but the sight of the catastrophe. But when the snow was newcomer, the adventurer, winning at length removed, and the myster, the prize over their heads, was too solved two hodies. great a strain on their generosity of beneath the ruins, that of the poc weakness was revealed to the ferocious and vengeful Manilla. At first he refused to believe the report, for already certain young men, whose had been gently but firmly repulsed by the young girl, had en-deavored to calumniate her. No. he would not give credit to the idea that his pure and stainless Rosa could be enamored of a desperado, after having refused the offers of so many re spectable young men, any one of whom would have made her a good and suitable husband. He either ould not or would not entertain such a unlikely and humiliating idea. ace he mentioned the subject to his affair into less and ridicule.

But one exeming when Manilla passed the bor er with his smuggler's sack on his shoulders, the guard, who had hitherto (thanks to the charms from his false dream of security! He should be no flowers, and so the start-doubted no more the tale of his ling answer came: "I hate chrysandaughter's disobedience, but with his themums."-Westminster Gazettecaution, he kept his own counsel, breathing not a word of his own suspicions to Rosa, for he wished to ascertain the bitter truth for him-aelf, determined that when he had records self, determined that when he had pe done so his vengeance should be swift TWO NEW GOVERNORS.

The two lovers, entirely engrossed by their passion, had gradually re-laxed their habit of watchfulness. and having been so far fortunate in lulling the old man's suspicions, had become somewhat imprudent and careless. To surprise them in one of their stolen interviews was therefore ed from the driver and from others who had known the village beauty from her infancy.

Five years behis pretended absence. Rosa and Valsassina were supping happily together, although from long habit the latter still kept his loaded weapon by his side. When they least expected it, a knock was heard at the door. "Ah!" cried Rosa, seized by an over powering sense of impending mis-fortune, "it is my father!"

"Open, Rosa!" cried the old man open immediately. I am hotly pursued by the officers!"

"At last," cried the enraged father, den him?

"Hidden whom? In the fiend's name, what do you mean?" replied Rosa, striving, as usual, to laugh the matter off, though she grew as pale as death.

"Ah! you think to deceive me, do you! You will see-for if you love him, now is the time to utter a prayer for his soul." Quickly approaching the door of the chamber, he burst it open with one blow. But the hunter was prepared for him. Two shots exchanged almost simultaneous ly, and with a fearful oath Manilla fell dead at the feet of his young antagonist.

And thus it was that the courage ous and devoted lover of the beautiful Rosa became the murderer of he father, while the terrible shock had such a fearful effect upon the sensiive soul of the daughter that reason tottered on its throne, and the maniac ve had watched scaling the dizzy heights was no other than the swee had been caused by the selfishness of her father and the cruel malignity and jealousy of the people among

Nevertheless, as I looked on the oft eyes and pale, intelligent face of this humble heroine of the mount-I could not help asking myself the questions, "Is Rose Manilla inbereft of reason, or is her supposed madness only assumed for a purpose? Is it certain, beyond the possibility of doubt, that her outneath the rocks at the foot of the precipice? Is it the madness of love which leads that poor creature up those dizzy heights, and strengthens that slight form to endure those altrue heroic love which thus enables her to brave every danger, and to endure obloquy and disgrace for the sake of that one beloved object?" -But if the hypothesis of the death of Valsassina be a false one, and her madness only assumed, how could he possibly exist on these mountains, or in those forests, during the frost and now, and amid the fearful tempests of winter, without being obliged to descend into the valleys, and thus excavery by the officers of justice? But was it indeed necessary that he should return to the Italian territory? Could he not descend on the other side, and known in some remote village of "La belle Suisse?" This was certainly not impossible.

urally find many accomplices and protectors among them, and would certainly prefer a country of smugglers, who delighted like himself in evading the law. An abode, therefore, in this well-known region would offer a more secure refuge for such a character than the great well-guarded routes to England and America.

These and similar considerations arose spontaneously in my mind, but the driver and other tellers of the story only shook their heads and laughed. For them Rosa Manilla con-tinued to be the mad woman of the mountains, and her lover a crushed form long buried beneath the rocks.

That same winter such enormous greatly suffered and many fatal disasters occurred. Among generally supposed that she was absolved, two bodies were discovered feeling, and at last his daughter's girl and that of a man still young whom she held in a last passionate embrace -Romance.
