

By MAT D. BLOSSER. THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1895.

A railroad company makes just as much of a corn crop whether it sells at 10 or 15 cents a bushel.

Mr. Corbett has gone into training, but he is not using the nose of Mr. Fitzsimmons as a punching bag.

In twelve of the twenty-eight largest cities in this country the total number the men exceeded the census of 1890. The cities were the men outnumber the women as those whose growth is the most rapid.

It is reported that this year's peanut crop will be only a pound and a half for every man, woman and child in the United States. But could not this have been suppressed until after this circus season was over?

In no other city in the land are people packed so close in shelters as on the east side of New York. A remarkable instance of sardine-like stowage was developed during the trial of a neighborhood in the Essex police court. The evidence was that the trial of a neighborhood in the Essex police court. The evidence was that the trial of a neighborhood in the Essex police court.

The style of New York journalism which meets across the country in a box car to write up tramps is not elevating to tramps or journalists. The subject has been treated extensively in newspapers and magazines, and a book has been published thereon. It is a hackneyed subject. If a newspaper correspondent is found beating his way about he should be treated like any other tramp. Possibly his punishment should be a little more severe. The use of "scurrilous" is not commended by reputable newspapers.

An unusual case of business furnishes a living for a man in Washington. He owns a large number of bulldogs, which he sends to the yards of the city to go away in the summer. Each dog is chained in the back yard and intruders are given a very curious reception. The dogs are effective guardians of the premises entrusted to their care. The price of a dog is $3 a month, and the owner, who is known as Billie Dog, feeds the animals. Up to the present time he has never been troubled by any party in the absence of the owner has been discovered.

The plague scheme grows in favor in Detroit. Over two hundred acres have been plowed in the city, and the soil is being prepared for the growing of potatoes. It is the rule to give one-third of an acre to each family and about 1,500 people have applied for land to cultivate. One of the states of the union where the death penalty has not been inflicted for any offense is Wisconsin. The people in Michigan, through the legislature, have expressed the belief that life imprisonment for murder is a failure; for the state senate the other day passed by a nearly two-thirds vote the law restoring to the state the death penalty. It is a measure that means that it means for the restoration of the death penalty to the state. It is a measure that means that it means for the restoration of the death penalty to the state.

You occasionally meet a man who entertains you for a half an hour with an account of his wonderful adventures. The only impression he makes upon you is that he is a bore. You give him a great deal, but who gives you, in a few minutes, a keen appreciation of their good sense and their good sense. You give him a great deal, but who gives you, in a few minutes, a keen appreciation of their good sense and their good sense.

If a girl has been at home, and her friends haven't seen her for a month, it is the proper thing to give her the ordinary greeting, but if she has been in Rushville two weeks and hasn't been seen, she demands that she be kissed. A kiss.

Three hundred young women in Danbury, Ct., have signed a pledge not to marry any but total abstainers. It's a little comfort even for an old maid to feel herself a martyr.

Lady Henry Somerset tells us she is forced to say that she is not as advanced as the American women in the capacity for independent thought and in the determination to do the "great questions affecting the nation." She says that she is not as advanced as the American women in the capacity for independent thought and in the determination to do the "great questions affecting the nation."

AT SLEEPY HOLLOW. IT MAY BE ABUPTLY but truthfully stated that there is little love lost between the negro and the Indian. The Indian regards the negro as a veritable object of civilization. The negro looks upon the Indian as a being who is in a state of barbarism, unwedged with freedom and free-will. The Indian regards the negro as a veritable object of civilization. The negro looks upon the Indian as a being who is in a state of barbarism, unwedged with freedom and free-will.

It was as long ago as the summer of 1880. Harney's war against the Indians was in its progress. The Indian had been settled in the fall of 1879. It was settled in a manner similar to that adopted by a boy who goes out in the middle of the carpet and builds a card-board town and people all the growing parts of the territory were divided into lots, artificially as the white man. There is, instead of pioneers and frontiersmen peering shyly into the homes of the wilderness, making a division between the civilized and uncivilized and unalloyed barbarism.

It had been arranged that the troops should mass themselves in the square in front of the Indian hotel, there to await the attack of the Indians. They were to dash up from across the street and surround the Indian hotel, there to await the attack of the Indians. Case has his carriage out of the shop and it looks as good as new. An excursion train from Jackson to Toledo passed through here Sunday. A large and pleasant company of ladies and gentlemen, both young and old, great and small, assembled at the home of Mr. & Mrs. George Watson on the evening of June 25, 1895. It was the midnight meeting of the reading club of Bridgewater Center, it being the 10th year since the club was organized. James Benham, the president, gave the welcoming address. Mrs. Henry Biner read an interesting essay describing the work and subjects taken up at different times. The influence exerted by one and all for the general good and instruction of the whole community by the several presidents, also an eulogy on the character of the two departed ones who avail of the original poem on the same subject. The happy way alluded to the kind of refreshments allowable at the club meetings, which is popular, so we name it the "Popcorn Ode." Miss Ada Stanfield read a very able and clear review entitled "Bible." The books we should read and the ones we should allow our children to read. This presents should guard their children from the influence of the evil literature, and that in her capacity of teacher she had often found books in children's hands that they were reading with evident enjoyment, dime novels, and other trashy literature. Mr. Bawson and Henry Parker were called upon and responded with brief but forcible remarks. There was the music interspersed with the other exercises, both vocal and instrumental. Miss Lizzie Tate presiding at the piano. The closing song, by all, "God be with you till we meet again." God be with you till we meet again. God be with you till we meet again. God be with you till we meet again.
