Now itis the easiest thing in the world to give this played out back "a blow" that will settle played out back "a blow" that will settle it, and put in its place a new one equal to any. It's just like this: hit at the cause; most backaches come from kidney disorders. Reach the kidneys, start their tlogged-up fibres in operation; when this is done you can say good bye to backache. Here is a case from Battle Creek: Mr. Josiah M. Shoup lives at 51 Broad Street, he was a member of the Battle Creek police force for many years. As a member of the settle wall but lice force for many years. As a member of the force he served the city well, but the rough weather he was often subjected to laid the foundation of kidney disorder, which has troubled him very much. Here

15 what he says about it:

"About three years ago, while on the police force, I contracted from exposure a sidney trouble, which has since given me no end of trouble. The pain was right through my kidneys and across the small of my back; if sitting down and I wanted to stand up. I had to arise very slowly and gently to avoid increasing the pain; I had such tired-out feelings all the time, and I was steadily getting worse. About two months ago, hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a box. Their action and effect ruis, I got a box. Their action and effect was most complete, they removed the old aching pains for good. I can now get around as quickly as anybody. Doan's Kidney Fills are certainly as represented."

A TALE OF A CIRCUS.

HE show was over. and the multiplicisounds had given way to the silence of night, broken only an occasional cry from the menagerie tent close by. The empty benches stared at the vacant ring, the scattered props and a strange commingling of ropes and poles. The odor of sawdust and tanbark, so dear to the circus man, floated upward to where a single droplight cast a dim light on the deserted interior, and the circus slept. A few short hours before and the scene had been one of glittering grandeur, pomp and pagentry. The flashing of lights. the grotesqueries of the clowns, the commands of the ringmaster, the blaring of the band, the dazzling beauty of the star equestrienne, the bewildering agility of the acrobats, and the astounding feats of the performing animals had blended in harmonious unison with the plaudits of the assembled multi-But now the color had faded, the walls of canvas, which had been dazzling in their whiteness, were gray in the shodowy half light and the chanted precincts had descended to the commonplace. It was just at that noment that some wee imp of Pandora's loosing crept into the queer little head of Taro, the nimble. Taro was only a plain brown monkey of doubtful ancestry and unknown history. One of a consignment which had been the feature of the circus in days gone by, he was the sole remaining survivor. All his companions had suc-cumbed to the climatic influences which are so fatal to the monkey tribe, and Taro was alone. Taro was the very beau ideal of a mischievous monkey, his propensities being entirely in the direction of gratifying his innate and overwhelming curiosity. His accomplishments were many, and Taro was always sure of generous applause from the children whenever he made his appearance in the ring. But the iron of captivity had entered his soul, and, although he was not caged, the little steel chain which held him when not performing, and the small, but biting, whip which he had so often felt when in the ring, were strong reminders of his impotency in combating the will of his master. So, when the wandering imp of mischief found his way into Tare's brain he found plenty of good material for a frolic. The cages in the menagerie tent were arranged in circular fashion, and to the wheel of one of these Taro was chained. He had chattered his usual remonstrance, which was marked more by fluency of expression than by any beneficial resuit, for the keeper had simply cursed him for "a limb of the devil" and gone to rest. Perhaps the luridity of Taro's remarks may have been the Ganges equivalent for profanity, but, whether it was or not, Taro was soon huddled in his heap of straw, and gibbering himself to sleep. It is not recorded in any work on natural history that monkeys are the possessors of con-

Taro had intruded his tail, and one of the scaly reptiles that had slowly wound his sinuous way to the top of the cage in a languidly persistent manner, mistaking it for some new species of tree limb, had wrapped a fold or two around it, and it was this attack upon his flank that had caused Taro's anguish. Escape was vain, and Taro was prisoner beyond release. It is said that people who are near death are witnesses of a panorama of events in their lives which passes rapidly before them. Perhaps Taro had some such premonition, for there was a thoughtful exression on his almost human countenance. Perhaps he thought of a far off jungle, where he had swung in the trees and chattered the hours away.

Perhaps he thought of some of the main tent, Perhaps he thought cruel things of his keeper, who stood convulsed ty of diversified laughter. Whatever his thoughts were, they were not long. The snake having a splendid leverage, the grating could not resist the strain any longer, and Taro was pulled through the opening. A few moments later he was a shapeless mass in the relentless folds of a boa constrictor. A few hours later and the snake's reptilian countenance seemed to wear a smile. A twinkle of contentment seemed present in his beady eyes as he lay stretched out at full length. Half way down his scaly body was a pronounced enlargement, and something in its obtrusive rotunlity seemed to say, "Hic Jacet Taro." 'Twas even so; Taro's chain knew him no more, for his obsequies had been consummated.

Work of a Sherlock Holmes 300 Year

Ago. Dr. John Donne, the famous English divine and poet, who lived in the reign of James I., was a veritable Sherlock Holmes in bent of mind, says a writer in Tid-Bits.

He was walking in the churchyard while a grave was being dug, when the sexton cast up a moldering skull. The doctor idly took it up, and, in handling it, found a headless nail driven into it. This he managed to take out and conceal in his handkerchief. It was evident to him that murder had been done. He questioned the sexton and learned that the skull was probably that of a certain man who was the proprietor of a brandy shop and was a drunkard, being found dead in bed one morning after a night in which he had two quarts of brandy.

"Had he a wife?" asked the doctor.

"What character does she bear?" "She bore a very good character, o y the neighbors gossiped because she married the day after her husband's funeral. She still lives here."

The doctor soon called on the wo-He asked for and received the particulars of the death of her first husband. Suddenly opening his handkerchief, he showed her the tell-tale nail, asking in a loud voice.

"Madam, do you know this nail?" The woman was so surprised that she onfessed, was tried and executed.

The late Frank Buckland, the natuall t, maintained that all flesh was eatable. He sought to give proof of this statement by tasting the meat of all nimals, reptiles and birds which he encountered in his career. He found the flesh of the rattlesnake delicate and nicculent. That of the blacksnake was not so good. Lizards were exceptionable, while panther chops were not equal to those of pork, which they somewhat resemble. Grasshoppers are proa great delicacy in New 700 land, when prepared according to the following recipe: One bushel of the insects is immersed for two hours in one-half gallon of pork brine. The insects are then broiled in the liquid for twenty minutes, then thoroughly rinsed in warm water and placed in an oven to become crisp. When cold the heads are removed and they are ready to be eaten. The flavor is said to esemble—that of shrimn

The sparrow population is rigonally kept down, not by want of fecundity for at the zoo, for instance, where food and shelter abound, the birds seem to breed at all seasons of the year-but by the operation of the natural enemy, that great fact in all wild life, which even the progressive London sparrow cannot avoid. The natural enemy in this case is the London cat. If any one will count up the number of houses in his or her knowledge which do not possess a cat, the numbers and ubiquity of the natural enemy will become apparent. Poor people keep more eats than rich people, so the small houses abound in cats. Rich folks' cats, which have large houses, as a rule, only catch the sparrows on their own estate, but poor cats have to poach at large, and their ravages
