BY FRANCIS SCOTT KEY. O say, can you see, by the dawn's early light...

On that shore dimly seen through the mists of the deep, Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes...

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion A home and a country should leave us no more?

O! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand Between their loved homes and the war's desolation! Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heav'n rescued land Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation...

And this be our motto—"In God is our trust!" And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

NEW ENGLAND FOURTH OF JULY. VER memorable and glorious Fourth! The sun went down last night beyond the hills, like an Olympian chariot, with unfurled streamers, flinging up golden clouds behind its wheels...

But the sun is up, and the "rock-ribbed hills" tremble at dawn with the boom of a hundred cannonading echoes. From yonder tall staff streams the banner high and gay in the morning light and breeze...

The Day We Celebrate.

If there is any day more dear than another to the heart of every patriotic citizen of this beautiful land of ours, it is Independence Day—Fourth of July—the day we celebrate as commemorating one of the most heroic and praiseworthy struggles for liberty in the history of the world.

After years of discouragement and defeat, years when hope seemed dead, and when the undertaking of the hand of brave men appeared in every way too much for them, the light came, the clouds broke away, and the sunshine of success streamed in upon their almost broken and dismembered hearts and fortunes.

With literally nothing left to begin with, with everything sacrificed upon the altar of their country, with the foe formidable, rich, respected on land and sea and known and tried of all men, the outlook for the Colonies was dark and disheartening almost beyond precedent...

Who shall tell of the hard work, the dark days, the weary hours, the aching heads and tired hands that this day, this red-letter day, the day of all the days of all the years of the history of this great nation, represent!

One day, one object, one spirit, one hope, one glory, and to make the most of this day, to fill it brimful of life, light, good cheer and a good time generally should be the purpose of every responsible American citizen who calls this beautiful country his home.

And it is a day for powder and cannon, bonfire, crackers and torpedoes, and small boys and games and uproarious fun; a day for long strolls through quiet meadows and along shady lines; a day for soldiery, and a day for sentiment, and in its honor let us burn powder and blow horns and make the very clouds vibrate with the reflex action of our patriotic enthusiasm.

THE SAME OLD STORY. A cartoon illustration showing a man in a top hat and coat, possibly a soldier or a man of authority, standing and looking towards the right.

As Badly Off as Before. The Cynic—Well, I knew it would result as it has. The Pessimist—How's that? The Cynic—Oh, no sooner do magazines drop to 10 cents than so many spring into existence that a person is broke if he tries to buy them all.

A wooden monument has been erected over George du Maurier's grave; over the place that is, in Hampstead churchyard, where the casket containing his ashes has been buried.

It has been telegraphed all over the country from Washington that the government still owes Grover Cleveland one cent. Why don't they pay it and shut up?

More than 20,000 tons of food for the starving millions of India have been contributed by philanthropic people of this country, but most disappointing is that on India, the United States government is absolutely unable to furnish the means for transporting their beneficence to the orient.

The young Khedive is described in a letter from Cairo as not the least distinguished-looking. He has a baby complexion of pink and rosy cheeks, naturally, shy, sleep expression, and walks with a sailor roll. "His double chin and laughing cheeks and the plumpness of his soft, white hands remind one of Dickens' fat boy." The Khedive's only wife is a former slave girl of his mother—the girl's business having been to stand at the door and remove the wraps of ladies on reception day.

No detective story emanating from the brain of an accomplished novelist has been more curious or interesting than the tracing of the identity of a woman suicide in New York the other day, merely by the torn corner of the telegram slip, on which the number of the telephone had been written. Letters of the operators also remained. Neither date, locality nor address were left—only the number of the letters of the operators also remained. Neither date, locality nor address were left—only the number of the letters of the operators also remained.

A foreign exchange says: "Australia at present is not 'tried' by a drought, and that the trouble is serious may be inferred from the great number of churches in making propitiatory appeals and the proclaiming of days of prayer for rain by the government." Western Australia the driest stretch anywhere. Within ninety miles of the coast all the timber, with the exception of river gum, has entirely dried out. From Ashburton to Goswore, should the drought continue much longer, all the crops of wheat expected, will perish. The last summer's rain that fell there was in February, 1935, and with the greatest of care, a fair yield of six inches in the winter of 1934, only enough rain has fallen in that district to keep the stock alive, although inland districts had no reason to complain.

Stephen Girard, the infidel millionaire of Philadelphia, to whom a statue was dedicated last week, one Saturday afternoon he had had a fair amount of money to keep the stock alive, although inland districts had no reason to complain.

The Mark Lane Express in its weekly review of the British crop situation, says: "We are unable to share the view that the wheat is making satisfactory progress. It is not thick, and the growth since Easter has been extremely slow, but last summer's warmth is still in the ground, and the autumn stores of moisture beneath the soil should protect us from absolute disaster. Thus the outlook is not so gloomy as it appears. A hot, dry June may improve the plant, but we are not yet in a position to say whether or not we should be satisfied."

The Adrian high school picnic at Sand Lake was spoiled by an incident on the program. The school principal, a display of his power by hypnotizing several of the boys. Miss Mary Chamberlain, daughter of Rev. G. H. Chamberlain, desired to put her under hypnotic influence and he did so effectually. When she awoke she was in a state of confusion and she was a half hour before she could be brought to her senses. The fainting continued all the way home, and serious results are feared. There are many amateur hypnotists in the high school, and it is reported that this has happened their art for the first time.

An Austrian officer who has been driven out of the Persian army is not one of the deserters who are being sent to the United States. He is a man of letters and his work is of a high order. He is a man of letters and his work is of a high order. He is a man of letters and his work is of a high order.

The Crown Prince Constantine, president of the Greek Archaeological society, which is the most distinguished in the world, is in Greece so clearly that the people are better informed as to the ground than at making holes in the earth's side.
