MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD FOR MICHIGANDERS.

The Naval Reserves Take Their Annua Cruise-National League of Republican Cinbs in Convention at Detroit -Uncle Sam Remembers the M. N. G.

The Michigan Naval Reserves—com-orising 86 officers and men—embarked on the U.S. steamship Michigan at Detroit for their annual cruise through Lake Huron. Gov. Pingree, accom-panied by Col. Eli R. Sutton, Inspector-General Case and Adjt.-Gen. E. M. Irish, of his staff, also went on board and was given a bugle salute, while the entire crew stood at "attention." The governor found it inconvenient to accompany the reserves farther than Port Huron, however, and it was probably well for his appetite that he disembarked there, for scarcely had the Michigan steamed into Lake Huron than it began to "rough up," and the 26 hours spent in getting to Mackinac island was a time for serious contemplation and study upon the frailty of the elements on the part of a number of the amateur tars who experienced the rather unpleasant feelings of the "mal de mer." The boys were put through a good "course of sprouts" including gun practice, deck scrubbing, rass polishing, etc. Then to counter balance the hard work they were given shore leave and a dance was held in their honor at the Grand hotel at Mackinae island.

Republicans From Everywhere.

Detroit the star convention city of Incle Sam's domains, has just enterained another mighty throng. Over ,000 visitors were attracted to-the city by the annual convention of the Naional League of Republican clubs Of course the principal feature of the convention was the speeches and the election offcers, but this was enough o maintain a lively interest. Gov. Pingree delivered a rattling address of welcome in behalf of Michigan, the state where the Republican party was born; Col. H. M. Duffield welcomed the delegates in behalf of the City of the Straits; and E. N. Dingley, of Kalamazoo, offered a welcome in the name of the Michigan League of Republican clubs, of which he is president. Then President D. D. Woodmansee gave the annual address to the league. Other speeches were made by Hon Charles Emery Smith, of the Philadelphia Press; Hon. Webster Davis, assistant secretary of interior, and ex-Senator Arthur Brown of Utah.

Orangemen Celebrate at Port Huron. The 207th anniversary of the battle of the Boyne was celebrated at Port Huron by Orangemen of Michigan and western Ontario in an elaborate manner. Over 20,000 visitors thronged the streets and about 8,000 were in the parade, which marched to Pine Grove park where appropriate exercises were held. W. J. H. Traynor, of Detroit, was marshal of the day and chairman of the exercises which were opened by Mayor Boynton with one of his characteristic speeches of welcome. was responded to by State Grand Master C. H. Lloyd. Other speeches were made by well-known Michigan and Canadian Orangemen. After the speak-ing athletic sports were the order of the day, and were largely attended. The celebration was conceded by all ent to be the largest ever held in the state, and although the crowd was large, there was no disturbances whatever.

A Murcer Near Ionia.

Moses Walker, a bachelor, who lived two miles west of Ionia, opposite the state house of correction, was shot and instantly killed by Wesley Bennett a farm hand on an adjoining farm Bennett had been keeping company with Lydia Vivian, Walker's niece, and they had just returned from the city. The woman jumped out of the buggy He ordered Bennett away, having previously objected to his presence, and is alleged that he threw a piece of to go and drew a revolver from which he fired three shets at Walker, all of which took effect, the third striking the heart. Bennett skipped home and was changing horses, apparently for flight, when the sheriff arrested him. Bennett was promptly arraigned and the justice refusing to allow bail.

lew Supplies for the State Troops Quartermaster - General White reeived from the war department for the Michigan National Guard two car loads of supplies, including caps, blouses, overcoats, leggings, tents, ammunition, etc., 50,000 rounds of ball/cartridge being included. Each of the 3,000 caps will be embellished with rossed rifles and the company and regiment designation, made in one piece of gun metal, which will retain te brightness. On the 19th inst. Quarermaster-General White and his asistant, Lieut-Col. Smith, will take a force of men to Island Lake to prepare the camp for the boys.

THE 55TH CONGRESS AT WORK SENATE. -85th day. -The session was

tion bill being considered throughout the day. Among its provisions is one accepting the invitation of France to participate in the Paris exposition of 1900 The bill was not completed up to the time of adjournment. During the day Mr. Berry, of Arkansas, of-fered a resolution requesting the President to demand of Spain the release of Ona Melton, one of the Competitor prisoners. The resolution was referred to the committee on foreign relations. House. The tariff bill was received from the Senate and immediately sent to conference, notwithstanding the efforts of the minority to se cure time for debate. The minority also attempted to make some political capital out of the refusal of the major ity to permit action on the Cuban belligerency resolution and the bank-ruptcy bill. Part of the day was de-voted to eulogies on the late Rep. Holnan, of Indiana. Conference.—The first meeting of the conferees of the House and the Senate was held in the room of the Senate committee on finance with a full attendance, but the Democratic members of the conference remained less than 10 minutes. They withdrew upon the intimation of the Republicans that they desired an opportunity to reconcile their differences before consulting with the Democrats. The Republicans representing the Senate and the House entered upon a gen eral exchange of views regarding the bill, and it was found that it would be a comparatively easy matter, apparently, to come to an agreement, so that the conference committee will be ready to report probably by July 21. The ers of the conference refused ab solutely to give out the details of the proceedings. The understanding was reached because of the conviction that any revelation of the rates agreed upon would add immeasurably to the work of the conferees.

Late in the day the entire subject was disposed of by the withdrawal of the paragraph to which Mr. Morgan had offered his amend-House.-On account of the death of Senator Harris, as soon as the journal had been read, the House, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Senator, suspended business for the day. CONFERENCE. -The tariff conferees have struck some snags The Senate conferees have laid before the House members the condition in the Senate where there is not an actual majority of the Republicans and where other than Republican votes are necessary to pass the bill or adopt a conference report The members of the House are stand ing by their bill, nevertheless, and have told the Senators that they cannot accept the Senate amendments on many important items. OVER 35,000 ENDEAVORERS.

The International Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E. at San Francisco

A Christian army of over 35,000 roung people invaded San Francisco, the metropolis of the Pacific coast under the banners and the purple and gold of the Young People's Society of Christian Eudeavor and took possession of the city in the name of "Christ and the Church." There were men, maidens and matrons from every quarter of the globe, nearly every nation being represented. Two of the largest buildings in the city, Mechanies' and Woodward's pavilions were utilized for the convention meetings, but were not nearly large enough. The formal opening was by Rev. F. E. Clarke, founder and president of the great Christian Endeavor movement. The first two days were devoted to praise services, reading and discussing of papers on interesting and important opics and listening to addresses by prominent Endeavorers. The state rallies, which are always a feature, of the C. E. conventions, were of great interest and pleasure. Never before has the California climate received so effective an advertisement, for, as though ordered for convention week, the weather was perfect every The first business transacted was to select Nashville as the place of meeting in 1898 and London in 1900. It is the ambition of President Clark and his millions of followers to show the old world something of the strength of their organization and this will be the opportunity.

With the end of the convention the thousands of visitors, delegates and others took advantage of the opportunity and the cheap rates to visit the many places of interest throughout the state. Arrangements were made for excursions to Los Angeles, Monterey, Mt. Hamilton, Yosemite, Santa Clara mountains, Stanford university and other interesting places, even taking in the southern country as part of their journey.

Very broken fillsides are sometimes utilized by planting them to fruit trees and especially to grape vines. Fine fruit can be grown in such locations, and in some cases it may be the best way of using such lands. It is however usually namine to plant the same time, a moderate land to the same time, a moderate land the same time, a moderate land. the best way of using such lands. It is, however, usually unwise to plant commercial orchards on land so rolling as to prevent rowing the trees and cultivating both ways, on account of the added labor in cultivating and harvesting where the rows have to circle the hillsides. Only high lying lands should be selected for orchards, especially of the stone fruits, not only on account of the better drainage, but because of the greater freedom from spring frost, and a less liability to loss from rot. High land fruit is finer colored and more attractive than that grown on low lands. A flat-topped hill with the land sloping away in all directions is an ideal location for an orchard, especially if there is a good red clay subsoit. The character of the top soil is not so important. It may be a little sandy, in which case the fruit will be a few days earlier; but a stiff red clay throughout, with only a small amount of vegetable matter, will give fruit of the highest flavor, best color and best shipping quality. AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

The writer of this has never come to be much of a fisherman, so he violates no confidence and imperils no reputation by openly averring that his first catch was a minnow-"minnie" in those days-and it was taken in an old straw hat after a brief pursuit in the placid waters of the Desplaines river, eventually being consigned to an amateur aquarium, along with a painted turtle as big as a quarter and two very This was the only really true story of a "first fish" on record until Mr. Bradnock Hall published a anda. book called "Fish Tales, and Some True Ones," which opens up a number of possibilities in regard to the subject sufficient to form a new chapter in oiscatorial annals.

There was once a boy who was very nxious indeed to become a fisherman. He had associated with him a number other boys animated by the same desire. They lived near a stream which was known to be filled with large salmon. It was also known that there were a number of men who did little or nothing but see that the boys did not

Well, upon a certain day this boy and the other boys were a good way up this ers visible in any direction. As they re crossing a bridge over the stream the boy happened to look down, and there, just beneath him, was a salmor that looked as big as a behemoth. No one had a hook and line in that juvenile party, but the boy saw a big bowlder a little way off. With considerable assistance he persuaded the rock over the waited a moment too long for his health and then he proudly waded in and caught his first fish. It weighed 15

Another boy went over to the house of a friend of his father's to learn how to fish in a pretty little pond there was on the property. His father had never fished, but he managed to scare up a hook that was almost big enough for sharks, a long hank of cod line, or its equivalent, a dozen champagne corks, and the boy knew where there was a dead sparrow and on the way over caught a frog, which died before he ar-

The boy did not find his father's friend in the least glad to see him. He was busy, for one thing, and there had not been a fish worth looking at in that narticular pond for a term of years. So, to get rid of the boy on the easiest terms, he tied the corks together and the hook with them, placed the expired frog thereon, fastened everything to the line, tied that to a tree, and told the boy to watch those corks and not say a word to him until they had been under water at least five minutes. Then he went back to the house with a good a delicate young baked shad, roasi ham with champagne sauce, a salad, coffee, sweets-all these things Mr. Folliott enjoyed because, in their way, they were perfect. And he was just culling out a few monster strawberries from among their green leaves when a footstep sounded on the ver-

He looked quickly up. A tall child of 13 stood there, her face flushed, her hair disheveled and her thick boots powdered over with the fine dust of the roads.

"I am so hungry," burst involuntarily from her lips. "Can't I have one of Mr. Folliott frowned and shook his

"If you are a beggar," he said, "you had better go around to the back door. Mrs. Hanford will give you something, I dare say.'

The child blushed deeply and drew herself up with something of unconcious dignity.

"I'm not a beggar." she said. "Can't girl be hungry without being a beggar? I have come here to look for Paul Folliott.'

"That's my name," said the old genleman, a little suspiciously.

"Then," she said, composedly, have come here to be your little girl. I am Gracie Bellaire. My papa was Colonel Bruce Bellaire, and when he died he said that you would take care of me. Here are his letters. And, now, side of the bridge, the fish obligingly please, let them give me something to eat."

And this was the way in which Grace Bellaire came to the house of her father's distant kinsman, Paul Folliott.

She was a pretty child, when the dust was washed out of her dimples and the shining brown curls were brushed into something like shape. She had Bruce Bellaire's large, dreamy eyes and exquisite Greek profile, and Mr. Folliott, even while he experienced a thrill of consternation at this new charge, felt his heart warm toward

"My dear," said the, "you are a nice "I could stay here and play, couldn't I?" said Gracie, innocently.

"But there is something else in the world for little girls to do besides playing," said Mr. Folliott-and so he took counsel with good Mrs. Hanford, his bousekeeper. "Dear heart, sir," said that kindly personage, "it seems to me plain enough. Why don't you send her to enough. Mrs. John Folliott? Don't you remember last summer, when she was here

"OH! TAKE ME AWAY!" and you helped her out with the debts that troubled her so badly, she declared she would do anything in the world to show her gratitude? And she's got daughters of her own, hasn't she? Who is there in all the world that could bring Miss Gracie up better than she?"

"Mrs. Hanford, you are a genius' said Mr. Folliott. "Why on earth didn't I think of that myself?" Mrs. John Folliott came to the Grange at once—a portly, smiling maron.

"The darling," she cried, enthusiastically embracing Gracie, who looked rather awed at the sight of so much splendor, "I shall love her as dearly as if she were my own! Poor, dear Cousin Bruce! How well I remember him! You sweet one, you are the very picture of your papa!" So Mrs. John Folliott, greatly reloicing returned to the brown-stone house in New York, whose rent was urnald and to the daughters, whose expensive dresses were yet written up on the wrong side of Mile. Surlitor's books. "It's positively providential," said Mrs. Folliott. "A thousand dollars a year clearly added to our income!" "But there is that great awkward child to bring up," said Madalena Fol-liott, a handsome brunette, who had just made her debut in society. "Oh, that does not signify," said the serene matron. "Her cost will be absolutely nothing."

And so, in the course of a few weeks Gracie Bellaire found herself settling down to the position of lady's maid to the three Misses Folliott. She sewed the buttons on Madalena's boots, she ran out on rainy days, when the very chambermaid objected on account of the weather, to match shades of worsted and filoselle for Alicette, the second daughter; she washed Florence's poodle for her, and wept many a tear of bitter mortification the while. And by degrees her shoes grew worn and rusty, her healthy young growth outstripped the limits of her coarse serge gowns, her bonnet and mantle became so shabby that she could not go out except under cover of the friendly dusk. Once, driven to desperation, she wore Florence's white chapeau and peated the experiment, for Mrs. Folliott met her on the stairs and flashed the light of her great, black eyes upon her in a manner that was truly appalling.

"If ever you presume to do such a occasion offers.—Atlantic, thing again," said she, in a low voice of concentrated wrath, "you shall be shut up on bread and water for a month!

"But I have nothing to wear!" pleaded Grace.

"Your clothes are good enough," said Mrs. Folliott, sharply. There is nothing so sinful as vanity."

"You are not going to school," said Mrs. Folliott. "It is your business to stay here and help Jane with the china and silver and make yourself useful. You are not a young lady, like Miss only a working girl." Child though she was, Gracie Bellaire comprehended the injustice of all this. Kind old Mr. Folliott hadn't meant this when he gave her over into Mrs. John Folliott's change. He must have forgotten to send-the money. Grace thought, or she never would have been treated thus.

"Sure, if she was the cat they couldn't take less notice of her," said Norah, the waitress. "And just look at the clothes of her."

said Fannie, the smart chambermaid. "She's kept me awake with her cough for two nights," said Bridget, 'and all the paregoric I give her don't loose it up a bit.'

For Mrs. Folliott, under an extra pressure of company, had ordered Grace to sleep with Bridget for a night or two, and when the company was gone nothing had been said about her resuming her little room again.

"The girls need it to keep their summer dresses in." said Mrs. Folliott. And Grace is just as well off with Bridget."

"They wouldn't care if she coughed herself out of the world entirely," said

"Worse luck to 'em " said Fannie 'Rut nobody ever yet ground down the orrhan and the fatherless without here was a judgment on 'em for it." Mr. Folliott all this time was beginning to be a little uneasy. His elegant city relative wrote at stated intervals but her communications were eminently unsatisfactory

"I should like to see the child," he said within himself. "And last night I dreamed that Bruce Bellaire came to me, just as he used to look, and asked me what I had done with his one ewe lamb. I don't believe in supernatural warnings. I never had any faith in signs and omens. But I believe I will go down to New York and see if

And so late one snowy December night, there came a tremendous peal at the doorbell of Mrs. John Folliott's mansion. That lady was absent at a fashionable reception with her three daughters. Norah and Fannie had gone to visit a friend in a neighboring kitchen, and Bridget, half asleep, stumbled to the front door and opened

"Miss Grace, is it?" she stammered, "Sure, if yez'll step in the parlay I'll send her up to you."

"Up!" repeated the keen old gentleman: "where is she?" "In the kitchen, sir," confessed

Bridget. "I will go where she is," said Mr. Folliotf. "Take me to her at once."

Poor little Gracie sat before the kitchen fire, the meekest and palest of Cinderellas, in an unconsciously drocping attitude. Her dress was worn and faded, her hair brushed back in a plain plait, her cheek transparently pale, and there was an expression in her eyes, as they looked into the red embers, that made Mr. Folliott's heart

"I've not come any too soon" thought, and then he said aloud: "Gracie! Little Gracie!"

With a sudden cry she sprang to her feet and ran sobbing into his arms.
"Oh, take me away!" she exclaimed. "Oh, I am so miserable here!"

The old man looked at her, with tears in his eyes. "I have made a mistake Gracie" said he. "No man can do his duty by proxy. I should have kept you myself. Never mind, little one, henceforward you shall be all my own." He turned to Bridget.

lose no time."

Bridget stared. "Are you going to away, sir?" said she. Mr. Folliott nodded.

"And it's glad of it I am," said the honest girl, "for though it's weariful onesome I shall be without her, it's no place for a gentleman's daughter, is this owld black-beetle-haunted kitchen. No more it ain't!"

And when Mrs. Folliott and her daughters returned, tired and cross, at 2 o'clock in the morning, there was no natient Gracie to do the duties of a lady's maid to them. And a note from their rich relative on the tall table explained the phenomenon.

Mrs. Folliott grew pale as she read the curt words in which Cousin Paul expressed his meaning.

"We shall never have a cent from him again as long as we live," said she. But Gracie, secure in his parental love, was happy, and when she looked. back_over those New York days they seemed like nothing-but a troubled dream.

in the Hot Weather, and How He Accomplished It.

Sitting at one's desk, singeing in the sizzling August heat which fre-quently comes in July or June, one's thoughts turn to something far more desirable, and one's ambition and de-termination, after the first four or five days of it, is to get away and find the onged-for coolness and escape from care as well. Having at length sens-ibly concluded that it is better to work well ten or eleven months in the year and rest and recuperate the balance of the time, the next thing is to determine what part of the universe we will grace with our presence. The west is ever a drawing attraction for those living in the eastern or middle sec-tions, and now come remembrances of stories our friends have told us about the beauties and grandeur of Colorado and the Rocky mountains. Slyly there creeps into the imagination a gurgling brook and we decide to try our skill at casting a fly on its riffles. mentally note that while we like society, we don't yearn for it alone, and fishing tackle doesn't encumber one very much, anyhow. Into the trunk she goes, along with a kodak, perhaps, for we are going to see the grandest mountains and most beautiful scenery of America. We may be home in two

Having made up our minds, we select the Missouri Pacific system as our means of travel, because we may as well enjoy its luxurious car service, and we want to get the coolness as quickly as possible. The Colorado Short Line from Kansas City to Pueblo suits our fancy, and we are gone on a never-to-be-forgotten trip, with dull care and heat left behind and the dust and the smoke of the city out of mind while we revel in the pure mountain air. We find that two weeks is a very short time, after all, and wonder how it ever occurred to us to do much in two weeks. There are more fishing streams and some additional scenery beyond, over there on the Gunnison, and in the vicinity of Wagon Wheel Gap and Animas Canon, and, finding that the Denver & Rio Grande road takes us through this greatest midst of scenery, we are bound to have a look at it. We go, perhaps extending our trip to Utah, we are charmed, we get prowned, we eat enough for the whole family, and we conclude to bring the whole family along when we repeat the trip, next year.

Thus are our lives lengthened, and we bring to business renewed energy and strength of mind, as well as body, and consider that we were He turned to Bridget.
