A GREAT TIDE OF PROSPERITY.

Canadian Loan Companies Getting Money on Mortgage That Had Been Written Off.

Probably in the history of the continent there never was such a tide of prosperity enjoyed by any country as the Dominion of Canada is being favored with. That portion of Canada known as Western Canada is attracting thousands of people, who are seeking homes on the arable lands of that new but rapidly developing country. Possessed of exceptionally good railroad privileges, the best school systems in the world, churches in every small settlement, while in the towns and cities all denominations are represented, and with markets in close proximity to the grain fields, most of the requirements for a comfortable existence are met. The development of the past few years in the mining districts gives an impulse to agriculture, and good prices, with good crops, bring about a state of affairs that the crowded districts of more populous centers are taking advantage of. The Associated Press dispatches a few days since had the following telegram: Toronto, Feb. 4.—(Special.)—Loan companies that made advances on Manitoba property years ago report that the returns from the land during the past three months have exceeded expectations. One company has taken from Manitoba over $20,000 interest, and discharged mortgages, many of which had been written off a year ago. Directors of leading loan companies are taking greater interest in business of their institutions, and are inquiring into many properties on which advances have been made. The climate in the western provinces of Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Saskatchewan is excellent, there being no healthier anywhere. The Canadian government is now offering special inducements for the encouragement of settlers, and they have their agents at work throughout the United States for the purpose of giving information and distributing literature. Among those going to Canada are many ex-Canadians, who have failed to make as good a living as they expected in the United States.

Wherever souls are being tried and ripened, in whatever commonplace and homely ways, there God is heaving out the pillars for his temple.

For some time the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway company has been experimenting with crude oil for kindling in locomotives. In place of using cord-wood, and the results obtained have been so satisfactory that it will hereafter be used on the whole line. During the month of November, 1897, at the company's shops, which are located at Washington, Ind., and Chillicothe, Ohio, 1,256 fires were started with crude oil at a cost of $17.32, or 1.41 cents per fire. To have started the same number of fires with wood the cost would have been $306.00, or 24.95 cents per fire. This represents a saving of $288.68, and is very satisfactory.

OH, WHAT SPLENDID COFFEE. Mr. Goodman, Williams Co., Ill., writes: "From one package Salzer's German Coffee costing 15c I grew 300 lbs. of better coffee than I can buy in stores at 50 cents a lb."

THE LADIES KLONDIKE.

Many Testimonials from Ladies Regarding Olive Branch.

See what is said of Olive Branch by those who have used it. Thus, a lady in Merkel, Texas, writes that she was cured of feeling of the womb which had existed for 35 years, when all else had failed. A lady in Bryantville, Tenn., says she suffered 14 years and had tried all that the doctors could do, without relief, and was unable to cross the room, and Olive Branch cured her speedily. A lady from Genesis, Tenn., writes that the package we sent did her more good than $100.00 worth of other medicines had done for her. A lady from Hunt, Idaho, writes that after using three boxes she felt better than she had for 12 years. A lady from Cody, Neb., writes that it cured her of female disease of many years standing that her physicians failed to relieve. A lady from Drayton, N. Dak., writes that it cured her of inflammation and falling of the womb that the doctors could not relieve. A lady from Camden, N. Y., says after 19 years of suffering she was given up to die, but Olive Branch saved her from the grave. A lady from North Adams, Mass., says Olive Branch cured her after two physicians had given her up. A lady from Bayard, Del., says a few boxes cured her after three doctors in six years' treatment had failed, and so on from every state in the Union.

Cure guaranteed with full treatment or money refunded. Ask your druggist or send $1.00 for one month's treatment to Dr. Kilmer, J. St., South Bend, Ind.

"Are you giving me straight goods?" asked the young New Yorker. "The fabric's truly unbiased," replied the Boston maid.

NO KLONDIKE FOR ME! Thus says E. Walters, Le Raysville, Pa., who grew (sworn) to 252 bushels Salzer's corn per acre. That means $5,500 bushels on 100 acres of 200 a bushel equals $7,500. That is better than a prospective gold mine. Salzer pays $100 in gold for best name for his 17-inch corn and oats prodigy. You can win. Seed potatoes only $1.50 a barrel.

Send This Notice and 10 Cts. in Stamps to John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., and get free their seed catalogue and 11 new farm seed samples, including above corn and oats, surely worth $10, to get a start.

CHANGED HEADS.

I DON'T believe there ever was a man who hated another man as I hated Copp. One reason for this I imagined to have been, that there never was a man half as hateful as Copp was.

Copp was a captain a military man—a boaster, a blusterer and a bully; a coxcomb, a fop and a libertine. His ways were regular, his acts dishonest, his word wholly unreliable. While I was in the army, I was quite the contrary. I was distinguished from other small boys for my goodness and piety. Before I could speak plainly I began to lecture bad boys on the subject of their sinfulness. They used to punch my head in return. I can, indeed, with deep and heartfelt pleasure, look back upon a pure and spotless life. Gentle reader, go thou and do likewise.

This fellow Copp, however, was in the end the cause of undoing. From the first moment we saw another we began to disagree. How could it be otherwise—I so good, he so utterly depraved?

I was the chief of the paper-weight and pounce-box department of the circumlocution, and Capt. Copp's accounts came before me for regulation. It was Christmas time, and we were somewhat in arrears with the checking of the Ladyday payments. Copp came and tried to hurry us.

We endeavored to show him how unreasonable he was. He wouldn't be shown. We told him his affairs did not rest with me. He asked whom it did rest with, and I referred him to another department. The other department, as is customary in such cases, referred him back.

Eventually his papers were found under a paper-weight on my table, where hitherto they had been accidentally overlooked. Whereupon Capt. Copp kicked me; but fortunately this circumstance occurred in the privacy of my own apartment, and therefore did not matter so much.

I was, however, seriously displeased. I ought to have told you before this that the above I have all along been speaking of the great grand duchy of Schlochenbschenstein, and that the Copp aforesaid would come in occasionally.

He kept on coming and wanting to know. He was a captain in the great grand duchess' army.

Her majesty was at that period at war with the great grand duke of the next kingdom but one (about ten miles off), and we were having it out—if I may use the vulgarism—upon the kingdom of the great grand duke next door, who was threatening an action for trespass against both parties.

Relative to this action for trespass, Capt. Copp and his company, and myself and a couple of junior clerks waited upon the great grand duke next door, and took a few field-pieces with us by way of backing up our arguments.

The great grand duke with some more field-pieces, met us to arrange preliminary matters. In this transaction are of no moment to the coming narrative. Suffice it to say, when that son of shot only was fired, and that shot was fired by the enemy, and by mistake, unfortunately, Capt. Copp and I, being at that moment in advance of the soldier, and within range of the said shot, having a little private quarrel on our own account, we lost our heads.

Affairs were then amicably arranged without further bloodshed.

In this year of grace (1897) the world is disturbed by all sorts of absurdly preposterous and wholly impracticable theories. One maniac is talking of the probabilities of steam locomotion. Another suggests the utilizing of forked lightning to send messages on a wire from one end of the world to the other. Another asserts that at some future time—probably far distant—hair powder and hoops will go out of fashion; and that in some time yet to come, it won't matter a button whether or not a man has well-shaped limbs, as leg-bags will take the place of knickerbockers. But this is too ridiculous.

At the period of which I write—when I and Capt. Copp had our heads blown off—there was a scientific man who had had the misfortune to like a theory before his time, and who had a theory and a perfectly reasonable one, too, about sticking heads on again. This theory he put in practice upon this occasion. The heads had to be put on while yet warm. He put ours on warm, and the experiment was, with but one exception, in every respect most satisfactory. The only error he committed was that he stuck Copp's head upon my body.

I don't so much blame the doctor. It was not altogether his fault. It is true he might have had the sense to know that Copp's head could never have belonged to me; but personally he was unacquainted with us. We were both about the same size.

Hitherto I had prided myself on the beauties of my mind, while Copp had been vain about the shape of his legs. Copp had never had large ones either.

The cause of the error I take it to have been that our bodies were un-

RESTAURANTS IN LONDON.

It is difficult to get anything to eat after midnight.

From Harper's Weekly: Americans who have penetrated as far away from home as London remark, as one of the more striking peculiarities of that metropolis, the extraordinary difficulty in getting something to eat there after midnight. There are perhaps fifty open all night restaurants in New York, and in all considerable American cities provision is made for people who have occasion for food when most people are asleep. The restaurant wagons, which, during the last two or three years, have come to be familiar in most American cities, do business from sunset to sunrise or later, and in themselves form a sufficient safeguard against nocturnal famine. London seems not to have developed even these "liberal" means. Arthur Ralph lately communicated to the London Mail a distressing narrative (though happy in its ending) of the anguish of an American gentleman who left Paris with nothing more than a cup of coffee in him, omitted to take food at Boulogne or on the boat ("I find it's throwing money overboard to eat crossing the channel"), and who found himself in London after midnight, "so hungry that I was all in clamorous appetite with a hat on and a suit of clothes." There was not a bite of anything at his hotel. He had not telegraphed. He was recommended to consult a cabman. Cabby took him to a proprietary club, where he was refused admittance, and afterward told that he could get it by signing an application for membership and paying an initiation fee, but as there was no food in the house except a few sandwiches he retired. A house near by was said to contain food, which could be had at a cost of a guinea for a chop, a guinea for a potato and so on. That didn't do either. Then the cabby, touched by the anguish of his fare and assured that the plainest food would more than satisfy a man the sides of whose stomach were knocking together like castanets, drove to a "little green cabin" stranded in the roadway in Piccadilly, frequented and sustained by cabmen, and there the suffering American got the steak and potatoes and bread and tea that his system clamored for. The food was good, and the company congenial and well-mannered, so the story ended with the return of a happy man to his hotel, but he still wonders that the habits of London should be so very different from the habits of American cities. Other Americans have been heard of whose experiences have stirred in them the same surprise. One of them is Mr. Ralph himself, who says: "Why London does not demand all-night restaurants I don't know, except it be that the English have developed the habit of staying in, and its capacity for giving satisfaction to other people here. And England, be it remembered, is all English."

My head, meanwhile, was doing all it could to help Copp's carcass to get on in the world. You had no idea what excruciating bad handwriting Copp's body had, whereas mine had always been a perfect picture, elegant, so round, so neatly finished off with dotted lines and crossed ties, and all the commas where they ought to be. But after all, it mattered little. Before Copp's head got tacked on to my body, my head and body combined had laid the foundation of a fortune which that miserable unworthy carcass was destined to enjoy. No sooner had Copp's body usurped my office-chair than a deputation waited upon it from the great grand duchess, and bestowed upon it a vacant seat in a higher department of the civil service.

From that time forward Copp's head literally heaped upon my head, and Copp's body got all the benefit of it.

Copp's body was feasted and feted. It rolled in luxurious carriages, it lolled in voluptuous ease; while my body was marching with the troops, badly clothed, worse fed and half the time without any boots; for that terrible struggle between our duchy and the duchy next door, which is now a page of history, was then commencing.

What had my body got to do with such matters. I should like to know my hand, which had hitherto but wielded a pen, had now a musket thrust into it, and everybody but myself was much surprised to find what a bad shot I was.

My regiment marched onward. I hung behind. The general called after me, and I came limping up.

Copp's head had always had rather a bad name for drink and debauchery, but these failings had been excused because he was a good soldier. You can imagine what a raze Copp's head was in when I missed the target, bungled over my sword practice, and even marched out of step.

I presently came to a pitched battle between Copp's head and my body. I wholly disapproved of Copp's head's moral principles. One thing I objected to was that it would drink liquor. My body was not accustomed to strong liquor, and it made it ill.

Copp's head also wanted to carry on with the other sex. I wouldn't stand it. Copp's head winked at the other sex. I said it shouldn't. It persisted. I said if it did it again, in revenge I would shave of its mustaches. It did it again, and I clutched it by the nose and shaved them off. I'd have cut his head off altogether for two pins.

To spite my body, Copp's head refused food, and cleaned his teeth all dinner-time. I was determined, then, if it wouldn't swallow anything on my account, it should not do so on its own; so I upset all the wine and beer it asked for. This style of quarrelling, though, grew presently to be rather ridiculous, and we made it up again.

But very soon Copp's head began going on worse than ever. His feelings at the opposite sex I have already alluded to, and this, with certain forward persons of the sex aforesaid, more than once got me into a good deal of trouble.

That, however, to which I most strongly objected, was his strong language. He took to calling his brother officers thieves and liars, and some of them didn't like it.

As I expected they would, one of them at last challenged me to fight. Copp's head chose swords, and the result was that Copp's head's antagonist ran me through my body.

I write this upon my death-bed. I am as resigned as I can be with the reflection that my body will suffer the torments which, without that fool of a doctor's error, would have been reserved for the body of Copp.

One thing consoles me in my dying agonies—Copp's head is aching dreadfully.

But I cannot die in peace when I reflect that my body will be buried under the same mass of earth that it belonged to Copp, and that the grave-diggers will bear Copp's hated name.

Wanted to Get Civilized. A number of strange looking specimens drifted into the office of Clerk of the Court Paul O. Guerin to be naturalized, but one of the strangest of the species came in a few days ago. He was six feet tall, wearing clothes that just naturally seemed to drift over his huge proportions; he had the careless frizzled whiskers that belong preeminently to the jay, and he spoke in a voice that was much smaller as a whole than he was a man. He walked up to Mr. Guerin, deposited a bulky valise on the floor, and said: "I want to get a civilized paper. I want to be civilized. Are you the man?" "Yes," responded Mr. Guerin. "I am the man. But I cannot give you a civilized paper unless you have been in the United States for five years and in Louisiana for one year." The aspirant after civilization scratched his head. "Well, I ain't been here that long," he said slowly. "I came from over the water only a few months ago, but if you will give me a civilized paper I will pay for it." It was impossible to get mad with such simplicity. "My friend," said Mr. Guerin, solemnly, "you couldn't get a civilized paper if you paid $500 for it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NOTED WOMEN.

Mrs. Patt delights in the game of billiards, and is a skillful player. Her billiard-room at Craig's-Nos is one of the handsomest in existence.

Sarah Bernhardt is a total abstainer from all alcoholic drinks, and to this she attributes much of her wonderful energy and mental power. Her favorite beverages are milk and water.

"Ouida" has been beautifully formed hands and feet, and to keep the latter from being distorted by unnatural pressure on the bones she wears open, buckled shoes, summer and winter alike, instead of boots.

Mrs. Melba never suffers from stage fright. She attributes her calm repose to a simple diet, and believes that the frequent cause of nervousness among singers and actors is indigestion, brought about by careless or self-indulgent eating.

The princess of Wales has no particular liking for outdoor games, excepting croquet, of which she is very fond. At Sandringham, and also at Frensham, the good old-fashioned game is a great favorite, which perhaps accounts for its coming into vogue again. It is now often played at smart garden parties in preference to tennis.

Mrs. Wagner is nothing if not active and possessed of exceptional foresight. Already she has taken time by the forelock and has drawn out the program of the Bayreuth festival for the initial year of the next century. In 1901 will be given an exceptionally grand performance of "The Flying Dutchman," one of Wagner's early operas. The maestro's widow speaks of mounting the work in a style hitherto unheard of with any piece that has yet been produced at the Bayreuth "festspielhaus."

A JOYFUL MOTHER OF CHILDREN.

Mrs. Pinkham Declares that in the Light of Modern Science no Woman Need Despair.

There are many curable causes for sterility in women. One of the most common is general debility, accompanied by a peculiar condition of the blood. Care and tonic treatment of the female organs relieve more cases of supposed incurable barrenness than any other known method. This is why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has effected so many cures; its tonic properties are directed especially to the nerves which supply the uterine system. Among other causes for sterility or barrenness are displacements of the womb. These displacements are caused by lack of strength in the ligaments supporting the womb and the ovaries—restore these, and the difficulty ceases. Here, the Vegetable Compound works wonderfully. See Mrs. Lytle's letter, which follows in this column. Go to the root of the matter, in this column, and nature will do the rest. Nature has no ally than this Compound, made of her own healing and restoring.

Write freely and fully to Mrs. Pinkham, Her Address is Lynn, Mass. She will tell you, free of charge, the cause of your trouble and what course to take. Believe me, under right conditions, you have a fair chance to become the joyful mother of children. The woman whose letter is here published certainly thinks so:

"I am more than proud of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and cannot find words to express the good it has done me. I was troubled very badly with the leucorrhoea and severe womb pains. From the time I was married, in 1882, until last year, I was under the doctor's care. We had no children. I have had nearly every doctor in Jersey City, and have been to Belgin Hospital, but all to no avail. I saw Mrs. Pinkham's advertisement in the paper, and have used five bottles of her medicine. It has done more for me than all the doctors I ever had. It has stopped my pains and has brought me a fine little girl. I have been well ever since my baby was born. I heartily recommend Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to all women suffering from sterility."—Mrs. LUCY LYTLE, 255 Henderson St., Jersey City, N. J.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MOTHERS. We are asserting in the space our right to the exclusive use of the name of "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," as our Trade Mark. PITCHER'S CASTORIA, a good Trade Mark. Dr. Samuel Pitcher, of Hymettus, Massachusetts, was the originator of "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," the name that has become so famous. It bears the fac-simile signature of CHAS. H. FLETCHER on every wrapper. This is the original "PITCHER'S CASTORIA" which has been used in the homes of the mothers of America for over thirty years. Look carefully at the wrapper and see that it has the signature of CHAS. H. FLETCHER on the wrapper. No one has authority from me to use my name except The Centaur Company of which Chas. H. Fletcher is President. March 8, 1897. SAMUEL PITCHER, M. D.

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous membrane of the middle ear. When this tube is inflamed, hearing is lost, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of the ear, hearing will be destroyed forever. It is often a good thing that you do not practice what they preach.
