6. "At midnight." The coming was late and unexpected. "There was a cry made." Either the cry of heralds, as was sometimes the custom, or the noise of the approaching crowds, with shouts and snatches of song and the flash of the iorches. Dr. Trumbull, in his "Studies in Oriental Social Life," says the women sounded those peculiar shrill, quavering cries of joy, called Zugaret, which are heard throughout the East on occasions of special repoticing. See Rev. 18: 6-9. "The bridegroom cometh." This parable will obtain a wider application if we keep in memory that while it is quite true that there is one great coming of the Lord at the last, yet not the less does he come in all the great crises of his church, at each new manifestation of his Spirit; and at each of these, 400, there Spirit: and at each of these, 400, there is a separation among those who are called by his name, into wise and foolish.
