BRAVE CAPTAIN LOSES HIS LIFE

Commander of the William F. Sauber Goes Down With His Ship

SENDS CREW TO LIFEBOATS

Sticks to His Post to the Last, Going Down When Explosion in Engine Room Wrecks Vessel and Sends Her to the Bottom.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 27.—After battling with the terrific gale for twenty hours with the steamer Yale standing by for half that time unable to lend aid, the steamer William F. Sauber was sent to the bottom of Lake Superior Monday morning by the explosion of its boilers.

The Canadian steamer Advance, bound from Montreal to Fort William, Ont., with a cargo of merchandise, was destroyed by fire here. Tugs and cutter towed the steamer across from the Canadian Soo and assistance was given by the fire department. It was found necessary, however, to scuttle the boat. The loss will exceed $100,000.

Signals of Distress. The pumps fought the rising water all day Sunday, but without avail, and when night fell the food in the steamer's hold was gaining.

"We're in serious danger, boys," said Capt. Morris to his crew on receiving word that the pumps were losing their battle below decks. "Get out some rockets and red fire and start the whistle giving distress signals."

As the first rocket shot skyward the booming whistle of the Sauber was answered and the steamer Yale, five miles away, headed to "succor" the ailing vessel.

In the furious gale both captains knew the danger of bringing the boats nearer than a hundred yards, and at that distance megaphones were used in communicating between the struggling steamers.

"We're good for hours yet," was the message at midnight, but those which followed from the bridge of the Sauber grew less assuring. At 2:30 o'clock Monday morning Capt. Morris' last word to the Yale was that half an hour would see the end of the Sauber.

With that the Sauber's crew prepared the lifeboats and all steam was crowded on the Yale in preparation for rescue work.

PEACE MISSIONARIES ENGAGE IN FIST FIGHT

President Buchanan of Iron Workers' Union Resents Interference When Talking to Anti-Parks Man.

New York, Oct. 27.—The peace mission on which President Buchanan of the International Association of Structural Iron Workers is supposed to have come to this city was forgotten temporarily in a row at the Ashland house.

Buchanan went to an anti-Parks man on the settee. Jack McAuliffe of Hoboken demanded loudly if Buchanan was going to talk to a scab.

Buchanan walked up to McAuliffe and, shaking his finger an inch from McAuliffe's nose, said, his voice hoarse with anger:

"So you're looking for trouble, hey? I know you, you bag of wind."

McAuliffe swung an uppercut at Buchanan. The big fist only grazed Buchanan's jaw, and Buchanan, who is a big man, too, made a rush.

J. W. Johnson, the international secretary, who knocked Buchanan down five or six months ago, got between the two men and the fight stopped.

Robbers Get Silver. Springfield, Minn., dispatch: The Bank of Springfield was robbed. Nine hundred dollars in silver from the outer safe was taken. There is no clew.

Boy Murderer. Springfield, Ohio, special: Herbert Hutchings, 14 years old, shot and seriously wounded his mother and his sister's sweetheart, C. W. Murray, and then killed himself.

RAILROADS MUST OBEY THE LAW

Mayor of Joliet Determined to Enforce Track Elevation Ordinance.

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 27.—Attorney K. K. Knapp of Chicago was told by Mayor Collins to save his arguments for the courts when the attorney appeared before a meeting of aldermen to plead that the daily prosecutions under the track elevation ordinance, be discontinued so far as affects the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern and the Chicago, Lake Shore and Eastern Railway Companies.

His argument was based on the theory that the city intends to have some special plan for these two lines so as not to hurt the steel mill connections. The mayor said the ordinance would be enforced in its entirety.

Fix Margin on Wheat. St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 27.—At a special session of the board of directors of the Merchants' exchange the marginal basis for December wheat was fixed at 87 cents. The assertion is made by commission men that December wheat is already practically cornered in St. Louis.

Arrest Alleged Flyer. East Orange, N. J., Oct. 27.—Charles M. Leonard, who secured $10,000 on two forged checks and eloped with Miss Kate Miller, has been arrested at Vancouver, B. C.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEVITIES.

A grand jury has been summoned by Judge Hastings to meet Dec. 14 to investigate charges of corruption against city officials of Green Bay, Wis.

NEW INDUSTRIES ALONG RAILROAD

Illinois Central Secures Locations for Over 200 Factories and Mills.

COMMISSIONER ENDS HIS WORK

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Through the efforts of the industrial department of the Illinois Central Railroad there were located along the lines of that company during the year ended June 30, 1935, a total of 206 new industries, representing an investment of $8,964,500, and employing 10,416 people.

This remarkable record of industrial growth is disclosed by the report of the late George C. Power, industrial commissioner of the Illinois Central Railroad Company and its allied lines.

This report shows that on the Illinois Central Railroad proper 132 industries were located, representing an investment of $5,730,000 and employing 6,820 hands.

In the South. On the lines of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley 74 new industries were started, representing capital invested to the amount of $3,233,500 and employing 3,596 people.

Of the southern states industrial activity seems to have been the greatest in Mississippi. Illinois also shows a remarkable growth with forty-four new industries employing all the way from a few to 200 people.

The preparation of this report was the last work Mr. Power did. Word was received by the officials of the company that the commissioner had dropped dead on the street in the City of Minneapolis, where he had gone to spend his vacation with his sister.

Holders of Securities. "Are there a million owners of railway securities in the United States?" In reply to this Stason Thompson of the bureau of railway news said:

"The question was undoubtedly suggested by the interest and surprise excited by the statement of President Stuyvesant Fish that the stock of the Illinois Central Railroad company is held by 6,647 stockholders, of whom an overwhelming majority own less than 100 shares apiece. That much popular apprehension prevails in regard to this is proved by the manner in which Mr. Fish's statement has been received.

Two to Every Mile.

"Thirty-nine of the leading railway companies of the country, representing 107,640 miles out of the 202,471 of single track mileage in the United States, responded to the latter inquiry. These gave the total number of stockholders on their books as 191,387. This is pretty nearly equal to two stockholders to every mile of railway. The ratio on the Illinois Central, as given by Mr. Fish, is a little over 2 to 1. On some of the roads the ratio rises to 3 to 1, and in two cases as high as 8 to 1. In one case the ratio swung as far as 1 to 6 the other way.

Estimates Holders. "Applying 2 to 1 as the ratio, approximated in the total, would give 400,000 stockholders in round numbers for the 200,000 miles of railway in the United States, as owning the $6,024,201,295 of capital stock as reported June 30, 1932. Assuming that the $6,108,381,665 funded debt is as widely distributed among bondholders and the railway ownership would appear to be held in something like 800,000 hands. But large as these figures are and approaching the total of railway employes (1,189,315) as they do, they by no means represent the total of those interested in railway ownership."

ADMITS ASSAULTING A PRINCE

Ohio Farmer Who Struck Son of Korean Emperor Pleads Guilty.

Delaware, Ohio, Oct. 27.—The trial of Joseph Stout, the young farmer charged with assaulting Prince Yoo, son of the emperor of Korea, several months ago, came up for hearing in the Common Pleas court. Stout pleaded guilty and sentence was reserved. Stout's excuse for the assault was that he did not like the young prince's popularity among American girls.

GUARDS CANNOT FURNISH BAIL

Men Accused of Killing Insane Patient Fall to Furnish Bonds.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 27.—Edward A. Sorrels and Samuel Egan, held by the commonwealth for the murder of Thomas Hartley, an inmate of the Hartsville insane asylum, were taken before Judge Worthington on habeas corpus proceedings. The court decided to admit them to bail in the sum of $10,000 each, which they have not given.

Woman Is Murdered.

Milo, Mo., Oct. 27.—County Attorney Burgh has been notified of the murder of Mrs. Charles Wyman at Glasgow, twelve miles from Gulford.

Dog Raises Chickens

Bloomfield, N. J., Oct. 27.—Vic, a setter dog owned by Councilman W. F. Harrison, spends his time taking care of a brood of game chickens.

FARM DOCHAD AND GARDEN

PLANT SMALLER TREES.

No doubt in their hurry to have trees bearing many people plant too large trees. Smaller trees will be found to be better. The well known horticulturist James Meenan said:

There is an excuse for a person of some education to plant a large tree, but none for those who are young. And indeed, whether young or old, there is no excuse for planting a large tree. So many, many times I have seen the small tree outside the large one, that in not very few cases I would prefer a large tree to a small one. Consider the fruit trees. Two or three small trees of the right kind and with peaches, one year from the bud. It hardly needs saying that the primary reason for planting a tree is to get most of the roots can be dug with the hands, and those which are to be handled and reset make the transplanting much easier. A large tree is much more difficult to handle, and the replanting is not so easily accomplished, causing a check to growth which takes a long time to recover from. It takes a little philosophy, I am aware, to reject a fine, large tree for a smaller one, but it pays to do so. As a rule city merchants who plant trees in their yards and their groves will not plant small trees. An acquaintance, owner of a large nursery, says that he has seen a large tree, the largest tree procurable on the lot. He makes no attempt to offer trees of such size, and he would not sell them. For all this, set out young trees, for they will do the best thing for the best growth.

SHEEP DIP FOR CHICKEN LICE.

For destroying chicken lice, F. E. Dwyer of the Wyoming station recommends that the fowls be dipped in a solution of sheep dip. The material is a clear, colorless liquid, and is used for thirty to forty fowls. The plumage should be thoroughly wet, and the solution poured over the neck and down the back of the neck. The lice are killed by the action of the solution on the skin of the neck.

ORCHARD NOTES.

This is the month for getting over the winter. Look after the trees carefully, making sure that the chills do not get to the roots. If you want to get the highest market price for your grapes, be sure to get the vines in good shape before they are picked. Look after the vines carefully, making sure that the chills do not get to the roots. If you want to get the highest market price for your grapes, be sure to get the vines in good shape before they are picked.

THE FARM LABORER.

The man who says that he likes work is a liar or insane. In the sweat of his face shall he eat his bread, not given as a pleasant "stunt" but as a sentence inflicting punishment for the universal desire of those purchasing the laborer to do not something that he is laboring for the pleasure in this device, but see if it is not the same as the desire of the inventor to get more for those who are young. And indeed, whether young or old, there is no excuse for planting a large tree. So many, many times I have seen the small tree outside the large one, that in not very few cases I would prefer a large tree to a small one.

FRUIT AT BREAKFAST.

Fruit in some form should have a prominent place in every breakfast menu. Either the uncooked fruits may be employed in their natural state, or they may be cooked and served with sugar. All will be found to be equally beneficial. It is a well known fact that a diet of uncooked fruits is much more beneficial than a diet of cooked fruits. The uncooked fruits are much more beneficial than the cooked fruits. The uncooked fruits are much more beneficial than the cooked fruits.

REVIVAL OF THE BAGPIPES.

Two young women are bagging for the revival of the bagpipes. London society is threatened with an outbreak of that eccentric instrument, the bagpipe. Several prominent society girls have announced that they will play the bagpipe at their next parties. This is a revival of the bagpipes, which were once popular in Scotland. The bagpipes are a traditional Scottish instrument, and their revival is a sign of the resurgence of Scottish culture.

Lesson V. November 1—David and Absalom.—2 Samuel 13:1-12.

Golden Text—Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.—Ex. 20:12.

I. The Course of the History.—It is somewhat difficult to determine the order and dates of the events during the years that followed David's fall and repentance. If we take the forty years of v. 7 to be correct, the rebellion of Absalom must be placed in the last year or two of David's reign, and the events of 2 Sam. 21:1-14; 24:1-16 occur during the period when Absalom was plotting against his father. If, as most scholars think, the forty is a mistake of some copyist for four, then the rebellion occurred about eight years earlier, in the thirty-second year of David's reign.

II. The Double Current in David's Life.—Throughout the twelve years covered by this lesson we see the double working of the two sides of David's life.

1. The working of the evil leaven which David's sin brought into his life; we watch the unfolding buds and the slowly ripening fruit on the deadly Upas-tree his sin had planted in his home. The sin must be rebuked and branded as evil, even while the royal penitent is forgiven, lest men take from even the divine forgiveness, encouragement to sin. The lesson today records some of the effects of David's sin.

2. On the other hand, more good than evil flowed from David's life. The great good in his life, and his repentance, here fruits of paradise. The good in him was vastly greater than the sin; and the fruits were in proportion. Out of his experience grew some of his sweetest songs, whereby he was "able to comfort them which are in any trouble by the comfort wherewith he himself was comforted of God." See 2 Cor. 1:4.

III. Absalom.—Absalom was the son of Maacah, the daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur. He was born soon after David became king of all Israel. He was renowned for the beauty of his personal appearance (2 Sam. 17:28, 30) and for his marvellous head of hair.

He murders His Older Brother, Amnon, David's eldest son and heir of his throne, committed a most dastardly crime against his half-brother. David was very angry, but he took no steps to punish his son and heir. How could he?—This weakness was one of the results of his own sin. Then Absalom, Turner's own brother, after waiting two years, made himself the avenger of blood, and at least he gave to the king's sons sleep—Amnon.

The Exile. The assassination of the prince and heir shocked the community, and Absalom, fearful of the people and of his father's anger, fled to the court of his maternal grandfather, Talmai, king of Geshur, in Syria, a remarkable district south of Damascus and east of the Sea of Galilee. Here he continued in exile three years. David, being comforted concerning the fate of Amnon, began to long for his living son (2 Sam. 13:30-39). By an ingenious plan Absalom was brought back to Jerusalem, but for two years more he was a semi-prisoner, and was not permitted to see his father's face nor to be received at court. At length, however, there was a reconciliation, and Absalom was restored to favor, but only to misuse his opportunities against his own father. His exile made him a worse instead of a better man.

IV. Four Years of Plotting Against His Father.—Vs. 1-6. Motives. 1. His desire to become king as the successor of his father.

2. A sense of injustice. As an exile for three years in the heathen country of his grandfather, and out of favor for two more in Jerusalem, he would naturally come into a state of antagonism to his father. He felt the injustice of his position, for he had done only what he felt that his father had wrongfully neglected to do in avenging his sister's wrong. This sense of wrong, that would stir a man in the blood of age, and make the infant sinew strong as steel, was increased by David's displacing him from the succession, and making the good boy Solomon heir to the throne.

3. More than likely he was in antagonism to his father's religion, especially in the more somber and consecrated form it took in later years. "Oetike, Prof. Boecker, Crockett (Harmony) believe that the unpopular sentiment of the people (2 Sam. 24) took place during these years. This enmity was a political blunder. It was either for stricter military service or for extra taxes demanded by the growing expenses of the monarchy, even while David had immense treasures laid up for religious purposes. It was an evil hour when David enforced this unpopular decree, which was likely to trench upon the liberties of this liberty-loving people. It was a wrong in the sight of God as well as of the people.

There followed, as the judgment of heaven, for this sin, a terrible plague in which seventy thousand persons perished. The people were startled, and would easily rise against a king whose errors might be so costly to them; and all the more because they shared in the blame.

Absalom's Methods. In the well thus prepared Absalom sowed the seeds of treason and rebellion in two ways:

1. By a pitifully magnificence that became the heir of the throne in the eyes of the people. "And it came to pass after this." After the apparent reconciliation of Absalom to his father. "Prepared him chariots and horses." R. V., "a chariot," a state carriage.

2. By the wiles of a selfish politician. "Absalom rose up early." In the East, where the middle of the day is very hot, public business is always transacted in the morning. "And stood beside the way of the gate." By the side of the road leading to the gate of the king's palace, where he sat to transact business. "Any man that had a controversy."

"See, thy matters," etc. "He artfully flatters each suitor by pronouncing a favorable decision on his case."—Cambridge Bible. "There is no man deputed of the king." There is no official hearer appointed. It was impossible for the king to hear every case in detail. He implies that David was neglecting his duty in not providing judges. He was getting old and neglectful.

"Put forth his hand," etc. It was a great condescension in one so magnificent to express his affection by a kiss. He was the Julius of David's day.

"Stole the hearts." Robbed his father of the people's affection and transferred it to himself. His youth and beauty made him look "every inch a king." His courtesy that "could smile and smile and be a villain," while "he wet his cheeks with artificial tears," touched the feelings of the people.

V. The Open Rebellion.—Vs. 7-12. "And it came to pass after forty years" of David's reign of the forty is an error for four, according to Josephus and some ancient versions, in which case the meaning is, after four years of this plotting. "Let me go and pay my vow." "To blind the eyes of his father he became very religious in appearance." The sins of Absalom were many, and one of the most dreadful was this putting on of the cloak of religion. "He knew his father's piety; and that his sore heart would be delighted by any appearance of piety in his sinful son. And he plays upon this piety to gain his purposes." Hamlet, "In Hebron." His birthplace, and hence a natural place for paying his vow. And at the same time a wise place for his purpose, as the ancient capital, and some distance from his father and his officials, and a natural rallying place for the discontented.

"I will serve the Lord." Rather, to do a service, explained by Josephus to mean to offer a sacrifice.

"But Absalom sent spies." Secret emissaries had been sent out before he went to Hebron, to prepare all the disaffected ones for revolt. He could easily secure leaders in every place by promise of office or gifts to them when he became king. "As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet," Clericus believes that Absalom arranged a succession of trumpeters at proper stations from south to north, so that he could be proclaimed by a telegraph of sound, on the same day throughout all the land. "Absalom reigneth in Hebron." So the first news the people would have of the rebellion would be that it was an accomplished fact.

"Two hundred men" that were called "invited to the sacred feast as Absalom's guests." They knew not anything. This shows the extreme secrecy with which the conspiracy was conducted, and accounts for David's having no suspicions.

"And Absalom sent for Ahithophel, David's chief counselor; and a man of marvelous sagacity (2 Sam. 16:23). Absalom doubtless knew that he was disaffected with David; perhaps from the dishonor done to Bathsheba, his granddaughter; perhaps from his perception of the growing discontent among the people. "The Gilonite," belonging to Gilo, a few miles south or southwest of Hebron.

VII. Practical Lessons.—It is entirely wrong to judge of David's later life solely by the troubles that came upon him in these later days. God does not always pay his children for sainthood in the coin of riches, prosperity and outward success.

Example.—Job's friends were sharply reproved for insisting that his misfortunes were the punishment of some sin he had committed. God showed that there were other seasons, such as a test of piety, discipline, and a proof to the world of the reality of goodness.

Contrast the youthful training of Absalom with that of David as connected with their characters and careers.

Bad early training amid evil influences is a terrible misfortune. Gov. Rice says that seven-eighths of the prisoners in the state prison of Massachusetts are under twenty-one years of age, and they are not chiefly fallen good men, but those who had never had good home training.

Contrast the sin of David with the sin of Absalom. David's sin was a mighty eddy in a current flowing with righteousness and usefulness. The current of Absalom's life flowed in the wrong direction full to the banks of selfishness. David repented and returned to righteousness. Absalom kept on in his evil ways to the bitter end.

David's sin was his weakness. He could not condemn Absalom as he should. He was weak to resist his son's attack.

One Way to Do It. Little Willie—Say, pa, this paper tells about a man who paraded his misfortunes. How can a man do that? Pa—Well, he might do it by escorting his wife, her mother and her two maiden sisters to church, my son.

It Would Seem So. Digs—Crabby is a man who imagines he knows it all. Biggs—Why, he is always lamenting the fact that he knows so little. Digs—Why, isn't that ample proof?

Not Much to Them. They are speaking of the spitting orator. "He is a man who wrings his words," remarked the close observer. "If he does," said the cynic, "he gives short weight."

A New Target. "Do you really believe that lightning never strikes twice in the same place?" "Of course. After a place is rebuilt it isn't exactly the same, you know."

TRICK THAT DIDN'T WORK.

Diplomat Blundered in Trying to Escape Interviewers.

The late British ambassador, Sir Michael Herbert, had a horror of interviewers. He once told Senator Dewey that he lay awake nights thinking up methods to escape from them.

"Once on my return to America from London," related Sir Michael to the senator, "I knew I would find a small army of interviewers to meet me at the pier, seeking news of a political crisis in England. I fretted all the way over, until the last day of the voyage, when a happy thought occurred to me. I wrote on a dozen sheets of paper, 'I think so,' and slipped them into envelopes. These I handed to the reporters as I left the ship and hurried to my carriage. I rode to my hotel chuckling over my cleverness."

"But," answered the ambassador, ruefully, "when I got the papers next morning I read column after column of interview, in which I was quoted as answering 'I think so' to hundreds of startling questions. I never repeated that experiment."—New York Times.

WAS NOT MUCH TO TELL.

Simple Description of Hog's Lamentable Decease.

"Private" John Allen is responsible for this one: Last year there were a number of claims for damages brought against one of the railroads in Mississippi by the farmers in a certain county of that state. These claims arose out of the fact that many hogs had been killed by the trains of the railroad in question. A mixed commission was formed of railroad men and others to determine the equity of these claims. Among others questioned by this commission was an old dandy who claimed to have been an eye-witness of the annihilation of one hog.

Said the Chairman of the commission to Zeph: "Tell us, in as few words as possible, how this hog was killed." Old Zeph shifted a huge end of tobacco from one cheek to the other, cleared his throat, and then replied: "Well, sah," said he, "as nearly as I kin make it out, it was dis way." De train tooted and den tuk him!

NOT UP ON THE FASHIONS.

Society Man Was Surprised at Highwayman's Ignorance.

George Davis, a member of one of Baltimore's old families and one of the ushers at the wedding of the Earl of Yarmouth and Miss Alice Thaw at Pittsburgh last spring, has recently been visiting in Denver. He was returning to his hotel from a dinner party when he was held up by footpads. They went through his pockets and were much disappointed at the results.

"Where is your watch?" demanded one of the robbers, gruffly.

"My watch?" exclaimed Davis, with his highly cultivated English accent. "Don't you know, my dear fellow, that it is beastly bad form to wear a watch with evening clothes. You cannot be up on the fashions."

"Go on with yer fashions," drawled the robber. "Give us them pearl studs." Taking them roughly out of his immaculate shirt-front they went their way.—New York Times.

A Plague of Mosquitoes.

A correspondent from Sioux Falls, S. D., tells this story. He says: "For a few hours an evening or two ago the residents of Toronto, S. D., had reason to believe a section of New Jersey had temporarily been moved to South Dakota. Without the slightest warning a dense cloud of mosquitoes settled over the town, and for a brief period were practically in complete possession. There were billions of the insects, and they fairly swarmed about the electric lights and in front of every building from which a light shone through the doors and windows. Great numbers of the pests were destroyed by men and boys lighting newspapers and burning them. The next morning the sidewalks were covered with dead mosquitoes."

An Unanswerable Conundrum.

The thoughtful querist was thoughtful, and so they knew there was a trouble ahead. "Why is it," he asked at length, "that a woman who has trotted her daughter all over Europe in an effort to marry her to what she considers an eligible man—a woman who has devoted her whole time and her whole mind to throwing out nets—will weep bitter tears at the altar when her efforts are crowned with success and she has disposed of her daughter in accordance with the plans she has made and has struggled so hard to carry out?"

But no one felt competent to answer the question.

Loathsome Poisons.

The poisons of some of the common and also of some of the most loathsome diseases are frequently contained in the mouth. In such cases anything that is introduced by the saliva of the infected persons may, if it touches the lips of another, convey the disease. The most direct contact the greater the danger. It is believed that much can be done to prevent contagion by teaching habits of cleanliness.

Heart Disease in Young Men.

The Prussian war department finds that in every 1,000 young men serving at the age of military duty, seventeen are suffering from heart disease. Stricker, who has been studying the subject, declares that the cause of the great prevalence is the increasing degeneracy and nervousness of the youth of the land.

ROMANCE

"Magnificent creature!" exclaimed the younger member. "Of course you know who she is?"

The elder member sighed, then rang for cocktails. "Time was," said he, looking reflectively into the amber-colored drink, "when it seemed to me that my fortune would be to win that lovely being with—but she's a prize in herself, don't you think?"

The younger member started. Then he gave a look at his watch. "Really," he began, nervously.

"Remain!" commanded the other. "Fear not! My little story will not, when 'tis concluded, entail too great a strain on your credulity. In the meantime we will have a cocktail."

"It was not long after my arrival in New York that my eyes were gladdened by the sight of the exquisite creature we have just looked upon. My initial peep at her was obtained one beautiful Easter morn—in the Fifth Avenue parade. When they told me who she was I nearly fainted! After that I was almost afraid to look again. Thus endeth the prologue.

"About eight months subsequent to the time when this vision first swam into my ken," as the poet puts it, I was called away to Chicago. On the journey back I was, by some strange chance of fortune, assigned Pullman space next to that occupied by her father! I knew the old man by the pictures I had seen of him in the papers. Right here occurs the first situation of the little drama, for what should happen except that I should become real chummy with the father, who, as you know, by reason of his wonderful influence and power in this, our workaday world, is dubbed a mercantile Napoleon?"

"When I tell you that I became real chummy with the father I am putting it rather mildly. Don't think I am fibbing when I tell you that on our arrival the Great Man actually insisted upon my accompanying him to his home, there to stay for the night. I had casually remarked that I was staying with my aunt in Mount Vernon; whereupon her father-in-law invited me to put up with him for the night. It seemed to him, so he said, a total unnecessary not to say inconvenient proceeding on my part to travel away out to Mount Vernon at such a late hour!

"And so we were conveyed to the stately palace that is the town abode of the Napoleon. No sooner had the butler admitted us into that magnificent mansion, when the vision floated into the reception hall. Perhaps you will be unreasonable enough to ask whether it was not improbable that she should be up at that hour of the night. In such case I shall content myself by merely inviting your attention to the well-known devotion of this girl to her father."

"We were introduced, and it is a tribute to the tact of this beautiful young woman to say that not in the least, by word or gesture, did she evince the smallest degree of surprise at my rather unconventional visit. On the contrary, she was gracious herself. I felt, even at the moment she placed her little hand in mine, that I was gone—lost—howled out.

"In the morning I enjoyed the inestimable privilege of dining en famille with these exclusive personages. After chatting a while in the library with her I suddenly decided that it would not be well to overplay my hand; so I intimated my intention of immediately proceeding to my aunt's. They were most profuse in their protestations that under no circumstances should I take my leave in that hurried fashion. I thanked them with all the cordiality that I could and made ready to go.

"The beautiful girl hinted that she would be delighted to place an auto at my disposal. Although I was tempted to avail myself of her gracious offer, I firmly declined it, saying that a cab would suffice for my needs; and I added that I feared I had already too far transgressed upon her hospitality."

"So with one last look at the flower-like face of the gorgeous creature I tore myself away. In the midst of the best sincere expressions on her own and her father's part that I should on no account neglect to call very soon."

"Running down the steps of the mansion I hailed a passing cab, jumped inside, slammed the door and—

"That Lawdie, Sarabone was shaking me by the arm standing New York City Grand Central Station"—New York Times.

Divisions of the Week

Our Saxon ancestors, like most of our warlike nations, were great idolaters, and although the objects of their worship might have been numerous, they had seven deities more particularly adored than the rest, the Sun, Moon, Woden, Thor, Friga and Seater; to each of these the days of the week were respectively consecrated, and from them they derive their names.

Sunday (called by the Saxons Sunndæg) was dedicated to the Sun—the glorious luminary of day being with them like the Persians, the chief object of veneration. His idol was erected in a consecrated temple and represented the bust of a man set upon a pillar, his face darting bright rays and holding with extended arms a wheel before his breast to denote the circuit of "the golden orb around our sphere."

Monday (Monndæg) was devoted to the Moon; her idol represented a female standing on a pedestal, habited in a short coat and a hood with two long ears.

Tuesday (Tuesdæg) was consecrated to Tuisco, who, as legend reports, was father of the Germans and Scythians, from whom the Saxons sprung. His idol represented a venerable old man with a long, white beard, standing on a pedestal, the skin of a wild boar thrown across his shoulders and a scepter in his right hand.

Wednesday (Wodensdæg) was consecrated to Woden, supreme deity of the Northern nations, who considered him father of all the gods, and also the god of war, answering to Mars with the Romans. The god of Woden represents a warrior in a bold and martial attitude, clad in a broad crested sword and a shield in his left hand.

Thursday (Thor'sdæg) was consecrated to Thor, who was the eldest son of Woden, and answers to the Roman Jupiter. His idol was represented seated on a stately throne, his head decked with a golden crown, adorned with twelve glittering stars, and a regal scepter in his right hand.

Friday (Frigesdæg) was consecrated to Friga; or Frea, the wife of Woden, and mother of all the gods. Like Venus with the Romans, she was the goddess of love and pleasure, and bestowed a variety of unexpectable delights on her votaries. She is represented by an idol of a female figure with a naked sword in her right hand and a bow in her left—to signify that in time of danger woman as well as men must prepare for battle.

Saturday (Seater'sdæg) was by the Saxons consecrated to Seater. His idol represented him standing on a pedestal, upon the prebly back of a perch, his head bare and his visage leered. He is dressed in a long coat, girded about the waist and shoulders with a linen sash. In his right hand he held a pail of water, in which were fruits and flowers.

Riches in Humble Places

It is not always necessary to enter a museum or a millionaire's palace to find some treasure worth a king's ransom; for quite a number of cottages exist in which are concealed things so valuable as to be beyond price.

A notable case is found in the Elswick place, the finest collection of silver which is believed to exist. Yet this vast treasure is secured in the small cottage in which the owner, Mr. Wright, lives at Norton, he having acquired the collection upon the death of Lord Wentworth.

At Walton there is a small house known as Barker's cottage, so small, in fact, that the owner's servants reside in a separate cottage close by. But his house contains a collection of books which experts have seen them have valued at no less than $500,000.

Just outside Hamburg there is a five-roomed cottage which also contains untold wealth in the shape of the finest collection of Japanese china in the world. It consists altogether of 110 pieces in the highly colored figure pattern, the secret of which is lost and as the collection is said to be 800 years old, it is certainly not overvalued at $500,000.

Black and White.

Every crow is said to think its own nestling the whitest. But a white cat that had four kittens, of which three were white, and the fourth was black, gave the first place in her affections to Soety. Once they were all brought into the drawing-room to be shown off. Besides the humans the room contained a great Newfoundland dog. Hitherto the cat and the dog had been on friendly terms, but now pussy showed much anxiety lest the dog might harm her black pet, especially. At last she seized it by the neck and bore it beneath the lowest piece of furniture—where the dog could not possibly crawl—but she merely mewed to the others to follow her as best they could. The black kitten owed all this care to its color—more happy in

The owner, a man named Schloss, is a partner in a tannery business, from which he confesses to drawing only $20 a week.

One would hardly expect to find an art-treasure in a Belgian smithy, but a blacksmith at Malines has a genuine Titian hung up in his cottage adjoining his forge. It is valued at $75,000, and when an offer of that sum was made to him for the picture in order that it might be hung in the cathedral at Fruges some time ago, he indignantly declined it.

In the same way a genuine Memling may be found in a guide's cottage among the Alps. The picture in this case being an heirloom also. The emperor of Austria offered $40,000 for it without avail.

The Hadleys, a family of Lancashire farmers, own what is perhaps the most gorgeously furnished drawing room to be found in any farmhouse. It is an unbroken suite of Louis XIV. furniture by Buhl, and the owners have firmly refused every offer for a portion of it yet made.

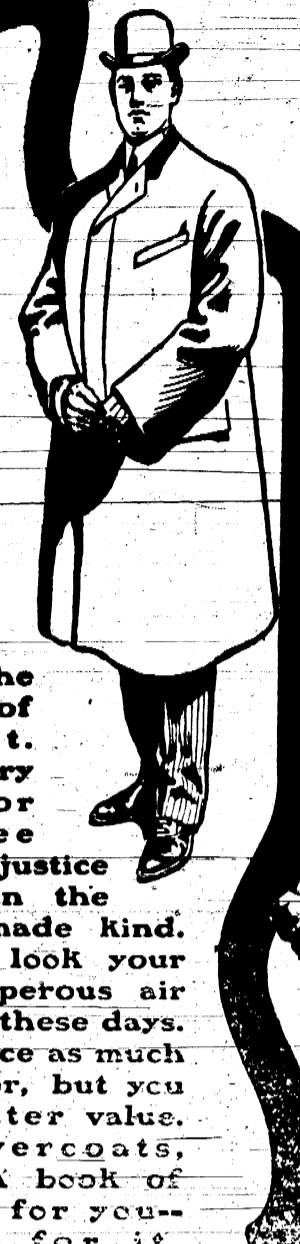

What its real value is it is impossible to conjecture, but some years ago a Facsimile suite fetched $70,000 in a London auction room.—Stray Stories.

Smart Tramp While walking up Eighth street one afternoon not long ago, says a Philadelphia real estate agent, I was stopped by a man who had the appearance of being a tramp.

"Say, mister," he said, "have you two nickels for a dime?" "No, out my pocketbook and found I had the required change."

"Well," I replied, "now where is your dime?" "Oh," he answered, "I don't want any dime changed, but I'd be much obliged if you would give me a nickel to buy a cup of coffee. Every other person I asked said they had no change."
