Hence the department is friendly to the movement through the United States for consolidated rural schools. intended to take the place of the district schools. One consolidated rural school can be established in a township and the children can be taken to it. They would be housed in better buildings and given better teachers and better instruction than under the system of one small school for each school district of a few square miles. There are about 300 consolidated rural schools in the United States, but the tendency is for the number to increase, thus supplanting the old-time district school and making the "little red schoolhouse" a relic of the past.

graded schools, city high schools and colleges and universities. It is the purpose of the department of agriculture to build parallel with them a system in which education in serioultural nursuits coupled with a good geograf.

That Sir Mortimer-Durand is too slow for the That Sir Mortimer-Durand is too slow for the energetic diplomacy of Secretary Root is the explanation given for the retirement of the British ambassador. The friction came about it is said, through the failure of the Briton to cooperate satisfactorily with the secretary in the negotiations for a treaty with Canada which would end all disputes between that country and the United States. Mr. Root has made this subject his hobby and seems determined to leave such a treaty as a monument to his administration. seems determined to leave such a treaty as a monument to his administration.

Secretary Root, concluding that his great aspiration could not be realized by having air the negotiations pass through the hands of the British ambassador, "by the circumlocution route,"

ROOT MAY URGE CALVO DOCTRINE.

That Secretary of State Root will perform another great interpational mission, in representing this government at The Hague Peace Congress next spring, is expected by public men who know most about the motives back of his recenture of South America.

There is a strong impression that, as head of the United States delegation to The Hague, Mr. the United States delegation to The Hague. Mr. Root will present vigorously, on behalf of the governments of all the Americas, the demand that the Calvo doctrine be recommended for a place-in accepted international law. This is the doctrine to which the minor republics of the Americas are just now so devoted, that debts of a government, or of its citizens, may not be collected by force or of its citizens, may not be collected by force by another government.

Diplomatic authorities new recognize that the United States must either espouse vigorously and effectively the Calvo proposition, or else have the less powerful governments of the continent strained and convinced that the United States are not sincere in their projectations of friendship.

Latin America is prepared to array itself behind the United States if the United States will take up their contention in this matter. It is willing to accept the Monroe doctrine as merely the beneficent guarantee against Enveropean interference, provided that doctrine be supplemented, in the policy of the United States, with advocacy of the Calvo programme. But if the United States are unwilling to make this concession, Latin America, will regard the Monroe doctrine as simply the threat by the United States of ultimate intent.

The county road institute for Washtenaw county will be held at Ann Ar-bor on December 8th, beginning at 10 a. m: at the court house. Highway commissioners who attend will receive their expenses and one day's pay, so it is likely that there will be a large at-tendance. We presume that state offi-cials will be present to talk on the road cials will be present to talk on the road question and perhaps it will be the means of improving our highways.

There is a good deal of comment being made through the different newspap rs in regard to kev. John Roderick Phelan, of Cement City, who was proven guilty of forgery and sent to Ionia. Simply because he was a professed minister of the gospel, doesn't excuse him. Nicolai Looks Backward. Nicolai has been very music im-pressed with his Sunday school lessons, especially those telling of the creation of the world. He asks his mother numerous questions concerning the original state of things, and does not seem quite satisfied with the replies, as is evident from a recent prayer he made, which included a pe tition asking the Lord to "please tell me what there was way, way back, in the years before there was any backs to the years."—Harper's Wees

Shakespeare derived the character Shylock from an actual occurrence which took place in Venice. Accord ing to the works of George Lett, we mind that a wager of a pound of fiesh was laid between a Christian and a Jew on the discovery of Santo Do-mingo. It is believed that Sankespeare took this incident for the plot of the Merchant of Venice.—The Sunday Magazine.

Keen Scent of Dogs. Sometimes what seems marvels of instinct may be only proof of remark-ably keen senses. A dog carried far from home in a closed wagon or in a box may go back, quickly and uner ingly, by following the odor of the wheels of the vehicle in which he was taken through unfamiliar roads. Not all dogs can do such things, but some have powers of scent which are almost beyond belief.
