clerical demonstrations are leading to more and more vigilarit caution on the part of the pope's household. The 11th of February, the filleenth hundrodth anniversary of St. John Chryevision, should naturally have been the occasion of splendid ceremonies in St. Peter's, but, is that largest Christian church on earth easily holds some 50,000 people at once, and a crowd of that size would be practically uncontrollable in case of any sudden act of violence, the services were not held there at den act of violence the variations were not need there in all, but inside the Vatican palace, where attendance was necessarily limited, so that cards of admission could be given out with much more strict knowledge as to who

be given out with much more strict knowledge as to who would use them. The precautions seemed to optimistic people quite needless; but events reported within that week seemed to show that they were merely prudent. The anniver-sary of the execution of Giorando Bruno (he was put to death in Rome in 1600 for teaching unorthodox riews), was made the occasion of impassioned specches by so-cialist and revolutionary orators in the square where the execution took place. It is a mile or so from the Vatican, but italians know italians pretty well so the Vatican, but Italians know Italians pretty well, so the evernment took no chances of letting any excited throng we over towards the papal palace; troops were sta-ned at various points to head off any attempt at innstrations in that line, and at the Vallean itself extra guards were detailed for duty.

The Vatican itself, the greatest palace in the world, has seen, in times past, its share of exciting experiences but it is not actually likely that it will see any more of but a is not actually inkery that it will see any more of the same tragic sort. American tourists in Rome have had pointed out to them a certain long, covered passage-way, a sort of walled bridge, leading crookedly down from the papal palace to the ancient fortress by the liber known as the Castle of St. Angelo. In the middle ages, when the popes took a hand in European politics, more than one of St. Peter's vicars found that long, pro-tected passage way a useful path to the safe shelter of the cliadei. But today all is different. Nobody (outside half-

Lansing—Quite a few people were under the impression that the Demo-craic state convention forgot to name presidential electors, but such was not the case, as they are chosen at the fall convention. The machinery of the two parties differs on this point. In the Republican party the congression al district is the unit and the presi-dential electors are regarded as na-tional officers, while in the Democrat-Reparty, the county is the unit and the electors are regarded as state of ficial who can travel beyond the bor ficers. The absolute defeat of D. J. Campain has caused no end of com mient. It was the culmination of a movement that began four years ago when Campair dout years ago when Campair deuse to comport the state central committee. Henderson at that time, was very close to Cam-pau. and while he did not want the by oposition, itering suite that that was defined. This broke their friendship expense to attend a ball or to some expense to attend a ball or to some other city to attend a civic function if the governor takes his staff or any of its members to the launching of the said staff cannot be paid from the public reasury. For can these officials at tend the unrelling of the monument to stevens of the taxpayer.
