WITH BIG GUNS ON COAST

William Chase Writes of Surroundings and Experiences in Fort On Atlantic Coast.

Fort Hancock, N. J. Battery Gunnison, May 10, 1918.

Dear folks: Well, we have moved at last and are now living in nice wooden barracks, have a large Y. M. C. A., good eats, moving pictures and plenty of stores in which to buy anything we want.

We are on 6-in. disappearing guns and they are beauties. We can shoot out to sea 25 miles and we have range finders, or in other words telescopes with which to locate subs or enemy battleships.

Webster Schill and Alvin Clark are with me, but LeRoy Marx went to another battery of 10-inch mortars. Say, but this is fine after two months in the sand and woods. We have electric lights, pianos, talking machines, shows and all modern conveniences. Well, I must tell you more about our 6-inch Hun killers. They are about as long as our house and are on brass standards that raise the gun up over the fort and the fort is on the end of the fort. The fort is on the end of Sandy Hook and is made of heavy iron armor. The gunners are down in the fort and the gun is on top. All machinery runs by electricity. The fort is guarded on all sides and is capable of defending itself against these batteries along the coast and are about a mile or two apart.

My hands are hard and calloused and I am getting as strong as an ox; plenty of hard training and fresh air are doing wonders. You should have been here to see the 5th leave for France; some sight! The bands played "We won't come back 'till it's over over there" and amid tears and cheers the transport pulled out with two of Uncle Sam's destroyers alongside of her and with 1500 of the artillerymen going to the aid of France. Mother, I would give anything to be home tonight, but at the same time I would feel like a slacker after what I have seen and been through.

Determination is written on every face in camp and if the boys "over there" feel the same way, and I know they do, Kaiser Bill is due for an awful fall before the summer is over. I have received everything you have sent and it has been in good condition; some picture dad made about fishing. It made me wish I were there for a little while. Say, dad, those destroyers are ugly looking customers, low in the water and guns and torpedo tubes sticking out all over them, and they go like a streak of blue lightning. When I get a little closer to one I will describe it a little better.

Well, I've got to polish brass and nickel and the whole battery must shine, so guess I had better hit the red bed, one with springs, again. I sleep like a log now, am feeling fine and seems no chance to get sick. Be sure to get my correct address as follows: William Chase, Battery Gunnison, Fort Hancock, N. J.

With much love, "BILLIE."

MESSANGER WEARS SILK HAT

War Times Bring Many Quaint Characters Into Service in Washington.

Washington.—War times and the unprecedented demand for aides for Uncle Sam have brought many quaint characters to Washington.

WHAT IS WORSE THAN WAR?

Consumption Four Times More Deadly Than Bombs and Machine Guns.

Pierre Hamp, a French medical authority, estimates that of the 38,000,000 people of all ages still living in France 4,000,000 must die of tuberculosis. The war will have killed about 1,000,000. This means that man with all his inventiveness is far less efficient than Nature as a man killer.

The Question of Pensions. Of course first consideration is accorded to the ever popular wounded men. Therein lies the tragedy of the consumptive soldier. With the new cases coming in daily from the trenches the consumptives are not as helpless as the wounded men. When discharged from the army the severely wounded are allowed a pension by the government. The consumptives, however, receive no allowance unless they can prove that their illness is entirely due to their service in the army. This is not an easy thing to do, and consequently comparatively few consumptives receive governmental assistance.

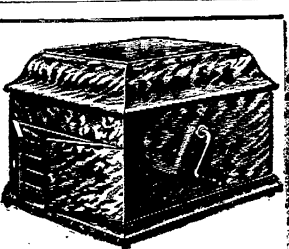

Until the American Red Cross began to extend its aid the plight of most of these men was often pitiful. When discharged from the hospital they are given certain instructions which would eventually bring them back to health. But conditions are hard. They are usually unable to earn much and so do not get proper or even sufficient nourishment. Perhaps they are in no way better off than they were when they were in the army. They do not pass on their disease to members of their families. The task is well-nigh hopeless. Even if proper living quarters are to be had sanitation and hygiene cannot be taught overnight. They sleep in air tight rooms, kiss their babies, drink out of the same cups and use the same towels as the rest of their families.

In spite of these appalling difficulties, however, the rapid spread of the disease must simply must be checked. Even to attempt this would be an impossibility without the tremendous facilities and aid of the American Red Cross. No other agency could conceivably face, much less hope to accomplish, such a task.

MOTHER GIVES SIX SONS

St. Louis Woman Offers Another Instance of Sacrifice Mothers Are Making.

St. Louis, Mo.—Another outstanding instance of the sacrifice mothers are making in the war is shown in the announcement that Mrs. Adele Wightman of this city, has given her six sons to Uncle Sam. Three of the boys, Thomas J., William R. and Charles M. are serving in the flying service, while the other three, Richard M., Joseph S. and Paul V. have enlisted in the infantry.

GOOD IDEA THAT IS SPREADING

Few Places Now in the Country That Do Not Recognize Need of Beautification.

Time was not so very long ago when the thought of civic beauty and the recognition of the importance of city beautification belonged to a few people only.

When the first of the larger cities of Texas set about the process of making beauty where only ugliness had been before, many taxpayers objected on the ground that it was not wise to expend public money for such purposes.

But that larger city persisted. A landscape architect was employed. A comprehensive plan for future development was drawn up. Appropriations looking far into the future were planned. An educational campaign to teach the people the need for beauty was gotten under way. Today the city is far to the front as an example of what may be accomplished in a few years of labor intelligently applied.

Other cities followed. One by one the centers of population fell into line. Directly the smaller cities began to lay plans for that day when they, too, shall be large cities. Only recently the city of Denison, urged on by patriotic citizens, employed a well-paid expert to make a survey and lay down a comprehensive plan of artistic development. And within the next few months practically every Texas city will have proved that even in the stress of war Texas people recognize the value of beauty and the importance of the artistic in the everyday life of the people.—Houston Post.

WHERE CENSOR IS NEEDED

Successful Outcome of Allotment Development Depends Largely on Intelligent Forethought.

The successful outcome of an allotment development as an asset to the neighborhood largely upon the type of neighborhood established by the person selling his property.

It is true, however, that some priorities are assured of ultimate realization before development on the part of their natural location. The average allotment, however, depends on the method of sale, separate lots and the restrictions imposed upon them, which have an important bearing on the ultimate building.

But the character of a neighborhood is far from assured because imposed restrictions as to price of house to be erected, as is shown in various cases about Cleveland.

Perhaps the most apparent reason for a development not proving as originally intended are, first, the building operations (to be pace, so to speak) were not expected, and second, the cost of building plans.—Cleveland

Camp Coit, Gettysburg, Pa., May 14, 1918.

Well, at last we are here at our camp, and say, it is "some" place for size for as far as one can see are army shacks, and all on this old battlefield.

We have a fine bunch of officers, all young men, and some of the fellows one could meet. We left Columbus, Ohio at 1 o'clock yesterday and got here at 10:00 this morning.

The Red Cross gave us splendid attention all the way and if anyone says the Red Cross is not all right, why you just tell them they are in wrong. They gave us a good send-off at every town and city we passed through and a big "feed" at Pittsburgh. They also gave us cards on which to write our wants and they "did the rest."

The trip here was the finest I ever had—lots to see and enjoy. Some places we ran around the base of the mountains and one could not see the tops. I wished you were along with me to enjoy it.

ACCLAIM AS THE LIVING CLINTON SCOTT OF THE VIGILANTES

Bum fires, Upon your hallowed altars! And, winds, attune from all your patriot psalters Words fitting for our choirs!

Today there should be singing, Not only for the dead, And their upyielding lives of sacrifice, But also for the living, in whom lies The selfsame spirit as was theirs who bled

In such unselfish wise Wherever our brave battleflag was flinging Its folds unto the skies!

And, too, there should be flowers— Flowers for the feet and flowers for the brows Of those who hark and vows To guard the shrine of Freedom overseas. Theirs the dark hours, Theirs the stark agonies; Theirs, it may be To shed their precious blood for Liberty. So while we hail those gone, with high thanksgiving, Let us acclaim the living!

A NOVEL BY REX BEACH

O'REILLY MAKES LOVE BADLY, BUT WELL ENOUGH TO WIN THE HEART OF ROSA.

Synopsis.—Don Esteban Varona, a Cuban planter, hides his wealth—money, jewels and title deeds—in a well on his estate. The hiding place is known only to Sebastian, a slave. Don Esteban marries the beautiful and aristocratic Donna Isabel, who tries unsuccessfully to wring the secret of the hidden treasure from Sebastian. Angered at his refusal, she accuses Sebastian of being a traitor. Sebastian is arrested and imprisoned. Don Esteban, in the course of a gambling orgie, risks everything and loses. Craved by the loss of his daughter, Sebastian kills Don Esteban and hides the treasure. Don Esteban and Donna Isabel are unable to find the hidden treasure. Don Esteban, rich sugar merchant, seeks to marry Rosa, who has returned from school in the United States.

"Good!" Don Maria rose to leave, as the attention of his ride had fallen on him. "You may name your own reward for helping me and I will pay the day Rosa marries me. You may advise me of my intentions and tell her I shall come to see her soon."

The fellow was effectively screened from view by a growth of platanos, palm, orange, and tamarind trees over the top of the hill. He was a man of middle age, with a high forehead, dark eyes, and a mustache. He was dressed in a simple, practical manner, with a white shirt and dark trousers. He was looking towards the speaker with a serious expression.

"I see," O'Reilly puffed his cheeks and nodded. "But why, in that case, haven't you seen me often?"

"I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home. I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home."

"I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home. I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home."

"I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home. I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home."

"I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home. I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home."

He regarded the speaker with such a sinister, unblinking stare that she could scarcely stare at him. "I can no longer afford to retain you as a time-served," he said.

"Impossible! I tell you I'm bankrupt!"

"So? Then the remedy is simple—a part of your land."

"I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home. I'm going partly because of something else. I tried to tell you that I was going to see you, but you were not at home."
