FROM SOUTHERN CAMP

Frederick Schmid Writes of Life and Experiences With Uncle Sam In Southland.

Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga., June 23, 1918.
Manchester Enterprise: When I read in the paper a short time ago the roll of honor of the Manchester boys in the service, you had my location down as "in transit," so will let you know of my whereabouts, as I am right in the letter writing game today.

I have been at this camp for seven weeks and am more than pleased with military life—it is great! The camp is a very pretty place, and large. The accommodations at present are for 60,000 soldiers, and it is being enlarged to accommodate 20,000 more, so you see it is no small place. The camp is five miles out from Augusta and it is a typical southern country around here.

In the Ordnance Supply School, there are about 2,500 and all a fine lot of men, and every one has determination written on his face to do all he can and make any sacrifice for his country. The spirit among the boys is fine and every one of us is anxious to go across and get into the real fight. Several of the boys have left for "over there" since we have been here and they were given a big send-off when they left camp, and were filled to the brim with "pep" and enthusiasm.

We are kept busy every day as we are going from 6:15 in the morning until 8:00 at night. Four hours of the day we drill and the rest of the time we spend in school, of which we have three more weeks, then we will be transferred—some overseas and some to the different cantonments of the U. S., for further training before going over.

There are a great many Michigan men here; 12 of us boys came down from Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, and we've met men from Detroit and other places. Walter Vogt is in the Famous Orchestra to Enliven Chautauqua

FISCHER'S EXPOSITION ORCHESTRA

Music lovers have a treat in store for them at the Chautauqua in the playing of C. L. Fischer's famous Exposition Orchestra.

This wonderful organization, which was one of the big musical features of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, the great International Fair at St. Louis, and the Jamestown Show, is to be one of the real joys of the coming Chautauqua. It is now in its twentieth season, and is one of the best known and best liked musical organizations in America. It is estidated that in the fifth of a century during which it has been in existence, between five and ten million Americans have applauded its efforts.

The selections which this popular orchestra will render during the Chautauqua will find favor with music lovers of all kinds, for they run the whole gamut of musical taste, from the most stately productions of the masters of classic composition down through the winning strains of popular melody, to the syncopated pep and rhythmic rattle of the latest rag-time and jazz creations.

The ensemble is splendid—the result of patient training through the score of years that the organization has been kept intact. In addition, several soloists render variety numbers that serve to add variety to the program. The orchestra can be counted on to include a number of startling surprise effects.

The orchestra gives the prelude on the afternoon of the fourth day of Chautauqua and renders a delightful concert that night.

SEED WHEAT PRICES

State Announces Schedule of Prices For "Pedigreed" Grains Next Fall.

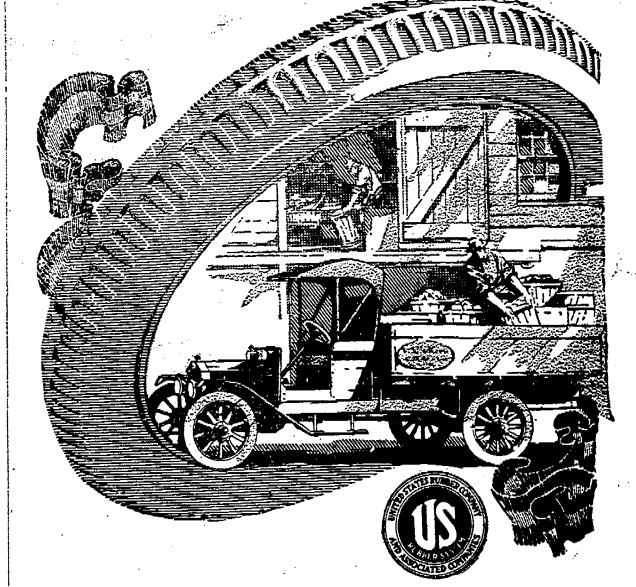

The following scale of prices was determined at a conference of the State Crop Improvement Association, attended by Food Administrator Prescott, was based on the government price plus the actual cost of inspection fees, rogging out weeds, cartage to the station, loss on market value of cleaned seed, cleaning the threshers and bins, cleaning and weighing seed and billing and correspondence, plus 10 per cent on the added cost of these items only.

Red Rock wheat, $3.25 for lots of over 10 bushels; $3.50 for lots under 10 bushels. Rosen rye, $3 for lots over 10 bushels; $3.25 for lots under 10 bushels; Winter barley, $2.90 for lots over 10 bushels, $3.00 for lots under 10 bushels.

The University is sending out bulletins of the summer schools and special training courses taken there. They can be seen at The Enterprise office or you might send for a copy.

Two deferred men of Chelsea and vicinity take a band with them to the Whitmore lake picnic on the Fourth.

same tent with me and Willis Silkworth is just five minutes walk from where we are, so you see we get all of the Manchester news and are especially anxious for The Enterprise each week.

The weather has been very hot since we have been here and now we are used to the heat. We find the southern people very nice to us and accommodating, especially in Augusta, which is a good southern city, but way behind the northern cities.

We also had a very good time at the colors and went to Spokane, Wash., for physical examination and from there was called to Camp Hancock, Augusta, Georgia, Tuesday, where he has been appointed bandmaster of Training Camp No. 1.

The Great Falls Tribune says: "Wuerthner is one of the most talented local musicians and is also prominent in masonic circles, being a 32nd degree Mason and a Knight Templar and Shriner. For the past year he has been musical director of the Algeria Temple, A. A. O. M. S., and organist of the Consistory at Helena. He has always taken an active part in local musical circles and during the past five years has been choir director and organist at the First Methodist church. His honors in the musical world have by no means been confined to the musical circles of Great Falls, for while yet a student at the University of Michigan, from which institution he was graduated in the law department in 1912, he had the added distinction of composing the entire score of the 'Awakened Ramesses,' the first one not a student of the school of music to be given this honor.

As a lawyer his successes have been as great as in the musical lines, and he is now secretary of the Cascade Bar Association, secretary of the Michigan Alumni Association and secretary of the Chautauqua Association.

Former Manchester Boy Receives Recognition of His Ability When Called to War.

explosion shook the ship as if it was paper on a tub of water. It was the destroyers dropping depth bombs on the subs.

These bombs are effective at a radius of a quarter of a mile. By the way they shook our ship over two or three miles away, the commotion under water must be fierce. This keeps up for about one hour, with the destroyers flashing signals and dropping bombs. It was a bright moonlight night and one could see

This is the story a ship officer told this morning: A sub. came up about 150 feet from our boat, directly between us and another ship. All that saved us was the sub. was too close to fire, as the explosion would have blown them up.

Signals were sent up as soon as she was sighted and destroyers which had come out to meet us two days ago, dashed for the spot and dropped depth bombs. The way that they worked is a wonder and I do not see how any sub. within a quarter of a mile can get away.

They say two subs. made the attack, and we are sure we got one, with a possibility of the second one being sunk.

None of our ships was struck and the only thing that saved us was that they were too close to fire. It was some excitement.

We are just going to land somewhere in England after being 17 days on the Atlantic.

ATTACKED BY U-BOAT

Son of Old Manchester Boy Describes Attack by Submarines When Almost Across Atlantic.

William E. Kirchgessner, son of William C. Kirchgessner, druggist, at 7 Division avenue N., Grand Rapids, and nephew of Mrs. Louis Lonier of this village, in a letter received by his father, tells of his thrilling voyage overseas. He is a member of the old hospital unit Q, composed of Grand Rapids men, now stationed somewhere in France.

His description of how the American destroyers fight the submarines, and how the depth bombs work is the first received here. One U-boat came to the surface 150 feet from Kirchgessner's transport. He writes:

On board ship, May 27, 1918. Today we expect to get 'oil' the boat. We will all welcome the change, as crossing the Atlantic on a transport is not very amusing, except last night, which I will tell you about later.

Up to last night our voyage was rather monotonous. Except two days of heavy seas, in which the boat rocked and rolled quite a bit. Following this weather the steering gear broke a couple of times and left us way out of sight of our convoy, but in a day we caught up with them.

Our food was anything but good on the ship. It is an English ship and their idea of cooking is anything but American.

Just now one of the boys came and told me that land was in sight. So I guess our voyage over is a safe one.

Last night we had a real taste of submarines. About midnight our ship was shaken from end to end by an explosion which I thought came from a ship in our convoy being torpedoed. We all got on deck as soon as we could. Explosion after

CITY BAKERY & GROCERY

SINCE first our sires stood beside the stream, And fired the shot that echoed round the world, Has come to pass the epoch of their dream When to the April breeze their flag unfurled.

TODAY, where floats the Stars and Stripes, we deem Each star defiance at the tyrant hurled; Each stripe a bar 'gainst despots, too, would seem To interpose for human rights imperiled.

TODAY, in foreign lands, the flag is flung Against a crimson sky across the sea, Where battle's bane from out the land has wrung Its dreadful toll. It promises to free Each nation, and to number each among All peoples in a worldwide liberty.

North Carolina Led Colonies in Freedom's Fight

It is popularly supposed that the independence of the United States began on a Fourth of July in Philadelphia, but down in the Old North State there were three of the British yoke more than a year before the first general step toward the freedom of the colonies. In 1765 the British parliament passed the Stamp Act, which was a direct assault on the rights of the colonies. The people of North Carolina were the first to resist this act, and they captured the stamp office from the governor. This act was the first step toward the freedom of the colonies.

Thomas Jefferson's Words of Appreciation When Great Frenchman Visited the United States. On the magnificent banquet tendered Lafayette on his last visit to this country, in the rotunda of the University of Virginia (Jefferson's pet hobby), James Madison, the "father of the Constitution," lifted his glass amid the compliments showered on Lafayette. He said: "To Thomas Jefferson and the Declaration of Independence, which was the result of his noble and heroic efforts, we owe the freedom of this country. He is the man who gave us the first step toward the freedom of the colonies."

It is expected that the Germans will make a desperate attempt to wipe out the Yankee forces in the vicinity of Chateau Thillois, but we will wager that our boys will give a good account of themselves. Government reports of profiteering stir one with indignation. When every laboring man, woman and child is apparently saving from wages to give to the government and other agencies, it is not surprising that a hell to learn that big concerns are reaping excessive profits from what they supply the government raises the dander of every true American and they want to know what it is to be done about it.

Big Ball Bearings; Better Light

LALLEY-LIGHT engine is equipped throughout with extra large ball bearings.

Plant is 27 inches long 14 inches wide 21 inches high

No other farm light-plant engine is so equipped.

These ball bearings help Lalley-Light to give better light by helping the engine to run more smoothly. They save fuel and oil. They cut down friction and wear.

Lalley-Light brings better light—bright, steady, safe light—to every farm. It brings power for a water pump, churn, separator, and so on.

We will be glad to demonstrate Lalley-Light free on your place. Call for the owners' testimonial book.

Newberry and Preparedness

Truman H. Newberry is no new convert to Preparedness. He has preached it for twenty years,—he has practised what he preached.

He stood for preparedness away back in 1896, when he helped organize the Michigan Naval Brigade.

As Assistant Secretary of the Navy under Roosevelt he urged preparedness. Speaking in New Orleans in 1907, he said:

"You can put it in the biggest type you have that we must have a bigger navy, and I hope such enlargement will come soon. It is for you people here to use your influence for more appropriations for the building of battleships and cruisers. There is no doubt that we shall need them and the sooner they are built the better."

While Secretary of the Navy, Newberry contended for a Merchant Marine as a preparedness measure.

"A large number of merchant vessels will be required in the event of a serious war," he pleaded.

He not only talked preparedness, but he prepared.

He put the Navy on a sure foundation. On our entry into the war it was the one branch of our national defense which was prepared.

He backs up his belief in preparedness by being in the service himself. His sons are in the service. His whole family is serving.

Newberry and Preparedness mean the same thing.

Truman H. Newberry is prepared to give Michigan and the nation wonderfully able service in the United States Senate.
