"Give Savings Stamps for Christmas" is a slogan adopted by the Michigan War Savings committees. Banks, manufacturers and business houses who are in the habit of making presents to their employes every year are requested to make at last a part if not all of the gift in Thrift and War Savings Stamps. This plan was successfully carried out by big industries last Christmas and it is believed it can be done again this year to even greater advantage. "The need of saving is more urgent today than it was while the war was on," says Elijah G. Poxsen, vice state director of war savings. "Are we going to say to our boys in France: Tellows, you performed mighty good work, in fact won the war, and we're gratified but now the war, and we're gratified but now "The letters are being sent from the W. S. S. headquarters in each county. With let letter is enclosed a post card asking the recipient to report on the number of stamps that have been purchased.

"Early returns show that in most instances the pledges are not only being kept but those who subscribed are now increasing their holdings. 'In other words' says an officer of the committee, 'the general public is learning how to save. Thrift Stamps even 25, cents worth at a time, provide the easiest method. Before the Thrift Stamp campaigns are over America will have become a nation of savers instead of one of spenders."

FARMERS' GREAT ENEMY

The record of the crow is like its oat-about as black as black can be It may be that in the great plan of Nature, sometime in the past the crow served a useful purpose—like the hawk and the buzzard. Take the buzzard for example. Once protected by human laws everywhere because useful for removing carrion, the stench of which offended the nostrils of all animal life, it is now outlawed because man realizes that it is better to burn or bury the dead, thus leaving no excuse for the existence of the disease-carrying buzzard. So, in the beginning, the mission of the crow, we may conjecture, was to preserve, some equilibrium, some balance in the economy of nature. It may be he was placed here to hold in check, the weedseed and grain-eating birds, because the weeds were a factor in the past in covering the waste places of the earth and making them fertile. However that may have been, there seems to be no excuse for his existence now since man, the agriculturist, seeds the waste places too useful grains and grasses, and needs the help of the insectivorous birds, says C. O. Le-Compte. zard. So, in the beginning, the missyrain-eating brids, because the weeds grain-eating brids, because the weeds in the waste places of the earth and making them ferdle. However that may have been, there seems to be no excuse for his existence now since man, the agriculturist, seeds the waste places to useful grains and grasses, and needs the help of the insectivorous birds, says C. O. Le-Compte.

Probably no one has ever had a better opportunity to observe the crow and study its life through every period of its existence, says the writer. I was reared on a farm in a country where crows were plentiful and on account of my heath I spent every hour of my life for years in the open. When I was nine years old my father bought me a gun and one of his first admonitions was: Never shoot a farmer's triend. Always the robin, the meadew lark and the other insectivorous birds were as safe near me as they could have seen anywhere.

But, believe me, the crow was never on our protected list, because we knew from observation and experince that the crow did a maximum of harm and a minimum of sood. Years ago I wroje: "You see the crows hopping here and there over the pastures and liftiting along the hedgerows, and you think they are only looking for train or insects, but did you see behind them, as I often have seen, the train of desolated bird homes, you too wo did cherish in your heart an undying harded for these winged devils ay the fields and them of the pastures and liftiting along the hedgerows, and you think they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for train or insects, but they are only looking for trai scarecrow in the newly-planted corn fields. Later on the damage they do to the corn crop can hardly be estimated, because they peck the end of the young ears, allowing the water to enter the shuck and rot the corn.

They are destructive to melons, pecking holes in them and causing them to rot on the vines. It is no uncommon sight to see small cotton uncommon sight to see small cotton cords encircling and across the melon fields of the South—stretched there to keep away crows, because the crows fear a trap when they see white strings. They pull young rabbits from their nest, destroy young birds and chickens and even sometimes young pigs. They are very dstructive to the pecan groves and men are employed on some of the big pecan plantations to keep the crows away. All in all, the crow is the farmer's principal enemy and there is now a movement on foot to hold a national crow shoot during the coming year, which will undoubtedy prove a factor in the conservation of grain and the protection of game and insectivorous birds.

chickens suffer severely from their depredations and the pheasant preserves are the frequent victims of their manding habits.

In the olden days the corn-planting farmer said:

"One for the black-bird.
Two for the crow;
One for the cut-worm.
Two for to grow"

So he would put five grains of corn in every hill. Most commonly, the crow is hated by the farmer because it pulls up the young corn to get the soft seed kernels at the root, and everywhere is to be seen the

Low Meat Prices High Cattle Prices

If the farmer cannot get enough for his live stock, he raises less, and the packer gets less raw material.

If the consumer has to pay too much for his meat, he eats less of it, and the packer finds his market decreased.

The packer wants the producer to get enough to make live-stock raising profitable, and he wants the price of meat so low that everyone will eat it.

But all he can do, and what he would have to do in any case to stay in business, is to keep down the cost of processing the farmer's stock into meat so that the consumer pays for the meat and y-products only a little more than the farmer gets for his animals.

For example, last year Swift & Company paid for its cattle about 90 per cent of what it got for meat and by-products (such as hides, tallow, oils, etc.)

If cattle from the farm were turned miraculously into meat in the hands of retailers (without going through the expense of dressing, shipping and marketing), the farmer would get only about 11/8 cents per pound more for his cattle, or consumers would pay only about 21/4 cents per pound less for their beef!

Out of this cent or two per pound, Swift & Company pays for the operation of extensive plants, pays freight on meats, operates refrigerator cars, maintains branch houses, and in most cases, delivers to retailers all over the United States. The profit amounts to only a fraction of a cent, and a part of this profit goes to build more plants, to give better service, and to increase the company's usefulness to the country.

The government is now urging a greater purchase of War Savings Stamps, as by so doing more money is secured for carrying on the war program. We are not positive yet that the war is over. The expense of the great army and navy must be met and in buying these stamps you are only loaning money at good interest.

The secretary of the treasury has determined upon the issuance of a new series of War Savings Certificates and Stemps to be placed on pole early in 1919. The new series will have a maturity date of January 1, 1924, and in practically all respects will be issued on the same terms and in the same manner as the present series of 1918.

There appears to be a difference of opinion as regards emigration after the war. Some think that the demand for laborers and even skilled mechanics to rebuild Europe will call a large number of men from the United States, while others think that thousands of people of all European countries will want to come to America. If they succeed in giving the Europeans our form of government, what will be the use of emigrants coming here?

President Wilson was informed that Premier Ebert and Foreign Secretary Haase of the Berlin government were about to make an effort to get him to visit Germany. The president is quoted as having wired this reply from S. S. George Washington: "Only by long years of repentance can Germany atone for her crimes and show sincerity. No true American could think of visiting Germany unless forced to do so by strictly official obligations. That is to say I decline in advance to consider any suggestion of the kind."

Great preparations are being made to give President Wilson a cordial welcome to France. He will land at Brest. Friday. The steamship George Washington, on which he and his associates are traveling, was formerly a German vessel and is the only one interned whose name has not been changed. American war vessels and a large number of others will escort the George Washington into harbor where an enthusiastic welcome will be had, including a military parade. The president will reach Paris Saturday and will probably experience a demonstration such as but few have ever enjoyed.
