JESSECA, the 20-year-old Japanese girl who had been standing in groups in the street of the city, turned abruptly to face the four members of the Japanese Youth Committee. Her face was lit up with a smile, and her eyes Sparkled as she greeted them.

"Hello, boys!" she exclaimed. "I've been waiting for you."

The boys were an interesting group. They were in their teens, and they were all Students of the University of Tokyo. They dressed in casual clothes, and they had a loving interest in the welfare of the Japanese people.

"What can I do for you, Miss Jesseca?"
asked the leader of the group.

"I want to help you," Jesseca replied.

"Help us?" the boys exclaimed.

"Yes," Jesseca said. "I want to help the Japanese people."

"But how can you help us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by telling you what I know," Jesseca said. "I've been living in this country for years, and I know a lot about Japanese culture."

"That's great," the boys exclaimed.

"Thank you," Jesseca said. "I'm glad you
like it."

"What else can you do for us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by teaching you about

"That's wonderful," the boys exclaimed.

"Thank you," Jesseca said. "I'm glad you
like it."

"What else can you do for us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by telling you about Japanese art," Jesseca said.

"That's wonderful," the boys exclaimed.

"Thank you," Jesseca said. "I'm glad you
like it."

"What else can you do for us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by telling you about Japanese history," Jesseca said.

"That's wonderful," the boys exclaimed.

"Thank you," Jesseca said. "I'm glad you

"What else can you do for us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by telling you about Japanese politics," Jesseca said.

"That's wonderful," the boys exclaimed.

"Thank you," Jesseca said. "I'm glad you
like it."

"What else can you do for us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by telling you about Japanese economics," Jesseca said.

"That's wonderful," the boys exclaimed.

"Thank you," Jesseca said.

"What else can you do for us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by telling you about Japanese sociology," Jesseca said.

"That's wonderful," the boys exclaimed.

"Thank you," Jesseca said.

"What else can you do for us?" the boys asked.

"I can help you by telling you about Japanese philosophy," Jesseca said.
