Mrs. Alma Valleau of Detroit is visiting her friend, Mrs. Orissa Markillie for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Swets and brother of Chicago visited at Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Metzger's last week.

The County Association and School of Instruction for the L. O. T. M. will meet in Gobles Thursday, May 14.

Odd Fellows attention! Special meeting next Monday night. Business of importance. Lunch. All members urged to come.

The Marble & Granite Works are installing a new 20-horse motor and larger air compressor. They sure keep up to their slogan "The Big Shop in a Small Town."

The road west of town is nearly completed and may be travelled with safety. Now if M40 gets improved through from Paw Paw to Allegan we will be on the map all the year round.

Word comes from Kalamazoo of the death of Mrs. Edward McNamara. She was a graduate of the Gobles schools and has many friends here who will learn with regret of her untimely demise.

The Freshman class and class advisor, Mrs. Hamilton met at the home of Arthur McGregor Saturday night. All report having a fine time, the only regret being that it was their last Freshman party.

Gobles high lost to Hartford last week by the score of 9 to 18. While our boys hit well and opportunely they seemed unable to tighten up on field work, yet some clever plays proved we have the material could the same be properly coached.

Mrs. Ruth Kingsley Hossman of Wabash, Ind. passed away at her home Tuesday after a short illness. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kingsley. The latter was formerly Netta Nichols of Gobles. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from Gield's Chapel Kalamazoo.

Mrs. Martha Sheldin, Mrs. Orissa Markillie, Mrs. Arvilla Mead and Aunt Mate Brown were the friends who helped Mrs. Jane Thayer to have a very pleasant May day at her home on East Exchange st. The combined age of these 5 young ladies is 407 years. We doubt if any little village can boast a younger group of their years.

On Friday the junior high went to Paw Paw to play the junior high of that place and a 17 to 6 victory resulted. After the game the losers denied that they were the junior highs but the victors were full of pep and told them to bring on their regulars any old time and they would play them, so watch for a real game when they come.

Glenn Lamphere passed away at the home of his mother in Kendall Monday night, after a siege of typhoid. While many knew of his illness, few realized his serious condition and his death comes as a shock to his many friends. Funeral will be held from the home in Kendall tomorrow morning at 10:30. A more extended notice next week.

Mrs. Steve Starks and children of Midland are visiting her mother, and with other relatives and friends here.

Jack and Bob Graham passed their second milestone Monday and their mother entertained several little folks in honor of the event. All had a happy time and the fortunate mothers were surely as glad that they had little ones that required their presence as well. Jack and Bob are enjoying the world at its best thus far.

Gentlemen's Night

Agreeable to their established custom the Gobles Woman's Fortnightly Club had the mere men as their guests last week Wednesday evening. At the appointed hour their president, Mrs. Homer Connery, in well chosen words, gave a welcome that put all at their ease.

Knowing the weakness of the sterner sex the hostesses had prepared a banquet that left nothing to be desired for both quality and quantity and developed a peaceful and happy condition which obtained for the whole evening.

This event was followed by a musical program consisting of vocal selections by Mesdames Harrelson and Guy Graham, a saxophone solo by Luther Howard and piano selections by Prof. Gorder, all of whom responded to well merited applause, which was ample proof of appreciation.

Last but not least the ladies presented a farce that was a scream from start to finish and proved their years of literary effort to have not been in vain.

From the sounding of the gavel calling court to order until the last of the jurors and the defendant escaped the watchful eye of the clerk of the court and departed to tend to the home demands the hearers and often the participants were convulsed with laughter. With proper management, yet who could manage so many women, these would go far in big time, but because of the breaking up of so many fine homes we believe they will be discouraged from future appearances except on special occasions.

So worlds of talent, though appreciated must continue latent that the welfare of our homes be preserved.

In behalf of the guests we thank the Fortnightly Club and its members for a perfect evening and trust the appreciation shown will warrant the continuation of gentlemen's night throughout the future years.

POULTRY FACTS

POULTRY DAMAGED BY DISINFECTANTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of the widespread use of cheap coal tar products with a strong carbolic acid odor for disinfecting poultry houses and coops, large quantities of poultry contaminated with the odor have been received at some of the big markets. The bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, has received complaints from handlers of market poultry who have suffered heavy losses because of the unsalability of tainted fowl, one large firm reporting a loss of $10,000 on four cars.

Because of the appearance of European fowl pests in certain parts of the country, farmers throughout the East and Middle West, through fear of this disease, have been doing much more disinfecting than usual. In many instances chemicals with strong and offensive odors have been used, many of them not in the list approved by the department, and in some cases the results have been aggravated by the failure to dilute the product. Birds kept in houses so treated, or shipped in crates reeking with the odors, absorb them into their bodies, where they remain after the birds have been killed and dressed. It is thought that another source of the contamination in dressed birds may have been feed on which the chemicals have been sprayed. When such penetrating odors are present in the disinfectant used the birds should not be marketed within less than two weeks of the time it was used and then not in crates recently so treated.

Coops and poultry houses should always be thoroughly cleaned before disinfecting. A good plan is where possible to scrub the interior with hot lye solution or scalding hot water. Such cleaning solutions are themselves good disinfectants. If scalding hot water is not available, the coops may be disinfected with a 4 per cent solution of formaldehyde. While this disinfectant has a very pungent, disagreeable smell, the odor soon disappears. If the poultry are marketed for several weeks a three per cent solution of compound solution of cresol or a product of similar composition may be employed. Any coal tar disinfectant is apt to leave an odor which will gradually disappear.

Many cheap products are now being sold in response to the unusual demand which has arisen since the appearance of the fowl pest. In certain sections peddlers are taking advantage of the situation and are going to the farms with a great variety of cheap disinfectants, sometimes doing the work for the farmer. Some of them are selling strong smelling by-products from local gas plants.

The department wishes to encourage efforts at disease prevention, even though much of this work is being done in regions far removed from any point where fowl pest has been found, but urges farmers to use the above-mentioned methods, which will not leave a taint in the fowls when offered to the consumer.

Sodium Fluorid Useful in Treating Poultry

Sodium fluorid is an insecticide used in treating poultry for lice by placing just a small bit of it at different points in the feathers of the fowl where lice are usually found. Although it is a poisonous substance, the poultry do not seem to get enough of it into their digestive system to cause trouble. If used on cattle there would be more danger of poisoning, because cattle would be more likely to get it into their digestive system by licking themselves.

Poultry Facts

- Caponize the cockerels.
- Goslings never eat much during the first few days.
- Chicks given the right kind of start life have many advantages over those receiving only indifferent care.
- It is very important not to feed the poult too heavily, especially the first few weeks. Keep them just a little hungry.
- Buttermilk is an almost indispensable feed for growing chicks and may be given in any one of a number of forms.
- Pullets which are well grown and matured are the ones which make profitable layers during the coming winter.
- Young turkeys seem to have a great fondness for new corn when it is just past the milk stage, and they probably could not get anything that is worse for them if they wanted to.

Incubator Useful in Hatching Geese

Machines Have Gradually Come Into Use Where Fowls Are Raised.

For many years after incubators came into general practice they were not used for the hatching of geese, but they have gradually come into use where geese are raised in large numbers. The general requirements for successful incubation of hen's eggs are needed in hatching geese eggs. In addition the majority of operators believe that they require more drying out in the early part of the hatch and more cooling than hen's eggs.

Required Temperature.
The temperature required does not need to be so high but no change needs to be made in this regard if the eggs are given more cooling. During the last part of the hatch it is generally necessary to supply moisture. Some advocate dipping the eggs, others sprinkling and others supplying the moisture to the machine. One of the main reasons for the need of additional moisture at that time is so that the shell and membranes will not stick to the gosling when it is trying to get out of the shell.

Some adjustments will need to be made in the thermometer as the thickness of the geese eggs will place them higher in the incubator and therefore an allowance is made for it. An inch in height will usually make a difference of a degree in the temperature.

Hatch Slow Under Hens.

Goslings will hatch out slower under hens or in an incubator than under geese. However, where attention is paid to proper cooling of the eggs and a proper supply of moisture, there should be no trouble in getting a successful hatch. The beginner will sometimes become uneasy over this delay in getting out of the shell and attempt to help the goslings. This should not be done except in occasional cases where one or more goslings are much later than the others in hatching. Even then extreme care should be taken in removing the shell bit by bit and stopping at the least indication of bleeding. Usually the bird that cannot get out of the shell is not worth saving, and if the goslings are given plenty of time and are supplied with moisture so that the material of the shell will not stick to the body, the big majority will come out successfully.

Wide Market Opened for Capons of High Quality

On the Eastern market buyers are bidding from 30 to 35 cents per pound for capons. This opens up a wide market for breeders of heavy chickens. Capons are making strong competition for turkeys on many of the markets on account of the high quality of their meat. Then, too, some consumers want a larger bird than the ordinary fowl.

The capon is more easily raised on most farms than turkeys. The birds grow rapidly and the caponizing operation is not difficult to learn. The instruments can be purchased from $2.50 up, depending largely upon how much nickel plating there is on the instruments. The cheaper sets will do the work in a satisfactory manner and will last if they are given proper attention.

A capon will usually grow two pounds heavier than if left in the natural state. The selling price is considerably stronger so that the total returns are generally from three to four times that of ordinary cockerels sold on the market. There does not seem to be much danger of an oversupply of capons, so that it forms a market outlet that a good many breeders should seriously consider.

Fowls Need Protein to Keep on Producing Eggs

Many farm flocks get little or no protein in the winter and as a result are overfat and make a poor production. Farm hens are often given a whole carcass to feed in one month and no meat the next. As a result they are thrown out of condition and often are poisoned by spoiled meat.

There are three ways in which animal protein can be secured. A steady supply is essential. Rabbits or dead farm animals when available can be cooked and ground or chopped up, dried and put in a box where hens can eat when they want. Skim milk or buttermilk can be put to no more profitable use on the farm than in producing winter eggs. Where a box of meat or a supply of milk are available all of the time, it may not be necessary to put meat scraps in the mash, but if there is a shortage of these it will pay to buy meat scraps.

Road Pushes on Campaign for Efficiency and Peace

Roads rule the world—not kings nor congresses, not courts nor constables, not ships nor soldiers. The road is the only royal line in a democracy, the only legislature that never changes, the only court that never sleeps, the only army that never quits, the first aid to the redemption of any nation, the exodus from stagnation in any society, the call from savagery in any tribe, the high priest of prosperity, after the order of Malchisedec, without beginning of days or end of life. The road is umpire in every war, and when the new map is made, it simply pushes on its great campaign of help, hope, brotherhood, efficiency and peace.

Pure Bred Animals Not Prone to T. B.

One Breed Is as Susceptible as Another.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is no relation between the breeding of cattle and their susceptibility to tuberculosis. One breed is as susceptible as another, and grades are as likely to become infected as pure breeds.

These are conclusions of veterinary specialists of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, based on several years' experience in eradicating bovine tuberculosis. In support of the conclusion the bureau veterinarians have compiled a large number of statistics arranged according to the various breeds and whether the animals are pure breeds or grades.

From July 1, 1921, to April 1, 1924, tuberculin tests were applied to 1,424,302 pure bred cattle, of which 4.7 per cent were found to be tuberculous. During the same period 4,456,439 grade cattle were subjected to the test, of which 4.8 per cent reacted. Among the pure bred and grade cattle representing the various breeds the federal specialists have been able to find no evidence that any breed is more susceptible or resistant than any other. These conclusions apply to large groups representing conditions for the entire country. It is well known that certain localities have more infection than others, but the management of cattle, extent of buying and selling without paying proper attention to health, the control of sanitary conditions, and the individual resistance of the animals appear to be the principal factors that determine the degree of infection. Breeding apparently has nothing to do with the extent of tuberculosis.

Set Strawberries Early in Spring Is Best Plan

As a rule it is best to set out strawberry plants in the spring quite early, and give them good care throughout the season. They give their maximum crop of fruit the second season after planting, though they will give more or less fruit for several years; but after the first crop, the berries are likely to be small.

In the fall after the ground is about ready to freeze a mulching of bean straw, clover hay or some other kind of straw should be applied, to give some protection during the winter and keep the fruit clean at bearing time. The mulch should not be applied very heavy, however.

Strawberry plants may also be set out in August if good plants can be secured and provided the ground is not too dry to get them started. But August planting will not give as much fruit the next year after setting as will the plants set out in the spring.

Many Farmers Overlook Potato Patch in Spring

Many farmers forget their potato patch until the weeds force them to give the crop a thorough working with the ordinary cultivators. By this time the weeds have secured such a foothold that they will be a trouble throughout the season and if there have been rains, the soil has become hard and crusted. To prevent this, and to start the young plants off right, our best growers are cultivating their potatoes immediately after the field is planted with an ordinary weeder or a spike-tooth harrow with the teeth inclined backward so as to prevent dragging out of the seed pieces and later the young plants. This practice is usually followed until the rows can be plainly seen across the field, when the only deep close cultivation is given.

Price Quite Important in Cattle Feed Venture

The cost of gains alone does not determine profit in cattle feeding. Selling price is equally important. Selling price is determined very largely by finish, hence the problem of the feeder is to produce as much gain and as rapid gains as possible as cheaply as possible. Most gains cost more than is necessary, but on the other hand the cheapest gains are not necessarily the most profitable. This emphasizes the complexity of the cattle-feeding business and the absolute necessity of using definite information relative to the comparative feeding value of different feeds and how they may be combined to make the most profit in a cattle-feeding venture.

Farm Hints

- Hope springs eternal; so do weeds. Plan to use one to kill the other.
- The radish is one of the old stand-bys of the home gardener.
- The best time to plan the attack against insects is while they are in winter quarters.
- Barley generally produces more pounds of grain per acre than any other small grain crop.
- A tractor that is properly broken in will wear many years longer than one improperly used at the start.
- If it is good enough to take prizes at the fair, it will sell well and is good enough for foundation for future production.

The DAIRY

PROPER FEEDING OF BULL IS IMPORTANT

Proper feeding of the herd bull is just as important as the proper feeding of the milk cows. Too often the spoiled or musty hay is put to one side to be fed to the bull. Again we find dairymen giving the waste feed, left by other animals, to the herd sire. All of which is a very poor practice, writes R. D. Canan in the Indiana Farmer's Guide.

The herd bull old enough for service should be fed enough to keep him in a vigorous, healthy condition, free from any excess fat. Most breeders feed their regular grain mixture to the bull at the rate of four to ten pounds daily depending upon the size and condition of the animal and the variety of roughage. A good grain mixture to use consists of three parts ground corn, three parts ground oats, three parts wheat bran, and one part linseed oil meal. Ground oats are especially good for bulls. Cottonseed meal is generally looked upon with distaste, since it may cause impotency.

Legume hay, whenever available, should be fed at the rate of ten to twenty pounds a day. Legumes are high in protein and mineral matter, and will keep the heavily used bull in excellent condition. When nonlegume roughages, such as timothy hay, fodder or straw are fed, it is necessary to feed more linseed oil meal than with the legume roughages.

Breeders differ as to the breeding powers of the bull when silage is fed. Silage fed in large amounts will have a tendency to distend the paunch, which is very undesirable. However, ten to fifteen pounds of silage daily may be safely fed along with other roughages.

It is essential that the herd bull receive plenty of water, and where it has been found necessary to keep the bull in a stall or pen, he should be watered at least twice a day.

The value and importance of using good bulls is essential to the economical development of the dairy industry. The present use of good bulls is entirely too limited, and when a good bull is once in service his usefulness may be prolonged for an indefinite period through proper feeding and plenty of exercise.

Milk Flow Falls Off in Fly Weather in Summer

Flies on the cows on hot days often cause an actual decrease in milk production. A good fly spray, correctly applied, will not only quiet the cows and help the milk run freely, but will also save the temper of the milker.

A good spray for this purpose can easily be made at home, according to the cow man of the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. The ingredients are 4 1/2 quarts coal tar dip; 4 1/2 quarts fish oil; 3 quarts coal oil; 3 quarts whale oil; 1 1/2 quarts oil of tar.

Dissolve three pounds of laundry soap in water, add the ingredients of the spray, and bring up to 30 gallons with lukewarm soft water.

This spray, applied twice a day—in the morning after milking and in the afternoon while the cows are in the barn for silage or other green feed—will keep the flies away and keep the hair coats of the cows soft. Thirty gallons of this mixture will spray forty cows twice a day for six days, at a cost of one cent a cow a day. Two men with a portable half-barrel cart carrying a spray pump and nozzle can spray forty cows in five minutes.

Danger in Cross-Breeding

Cross-breeding in reality is a twinged sword. One cannot mate a Holstein cow with a Guernsey bull and expect the female progeny to take on a type or evidence a function or produce milk with the quality of the Guernsey and the quantity of the Holstein. Actually, straight cross-bred animals of this mating are quite as apt to inherit the quality of the Holstein and the quantity of the Guernsey. It is difficult, indeed, to establish a type under such circumstances.

Feeding Cows Minerals

A dairy cow giving a large flow of milk will need some added minerals. Especially is this true if she does not get legume hay, wheat bran, wheat middlings, cottonseed meal or linseed meal in her ration. Milk contains a large amount of lime and phosphorus which makes it necessary for the cow to get a liberal supply in her ration if she is to continue to produce milk very long.

Treat Warts on Teats

Bathe warts on cows' teats several times daily with warm water containing a tablespoonful of washing soda per pint, or immerse the teats in the solution for five minutes or more, night and morning. After the evening immersion cover the affected parts with a thick paste of cold-pressed castor oil, salt, and flowers of sulphur. Warts that have slim necks may be snipped off with blunt scissors, a few at a time, and tincture of iodine applied.

AFTER HER BABY CAME

Mrs. Hollister Unable To Do Her Work for Six Months

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

MRS. HENRY HOLLISTER
WYANDOTTE, MICHIGAN

Wyandotte, Michigan.—"After my baby was born I did not do my own work for six months and could hardly take care of my own baby. I always had a pain in my right side and it was so bad I was getting round shoulders. I would feel well one day and then I would be in bed. One Sunday my mother came to see how I was, and she said a friend told her to tell me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So the next day I got a bottle and before it was half taken I got relief. After I was well again I went to the doctor and he asked me how I was getting along. I told him I was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and he said it did not hurt any one to take it. I am always recommending the Vegetable Compound to others and I always have a bottle of it on hand."—Mrs. HENRY HOLLISTER, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 7, Wyandotte, Michigan.

Another Woman's Case

St. Paul, Minnesota.—"I have a little girl three years old and ever since her birth I have suffered with my back as if it were breaking in two, and bearing-down pains all the time. I also had dizzy spells. I had read several letters of women in the newspapers, and the druggist recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my husband for me. As a result of taking it my back has stopped aching and the awful bearing-down feeling is gone. I feel stronger and do all of my household work and tend to my little girl. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for constipation. I have recommended these medicines to some of my friends and you may use this letter as a testimonial if you wish. I will be pleased to answer letters of other women if I can help them by telling them what this medicine has done for me."—Mrs. PRICE, 147 West Summit Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota.

WHAT STATE LAW MAKERS ARE DOING

Passage of Bills Permits Detroit To Plan Transit Lines

Lansing, Mich.

With the Callender Rapid Transit Bill passed by both houses of the Legislature and the Darin Super-Highway bill passed by the House and apparently sure of passage in the Senate, Detroit is in a position to go ahead with the plans of the Rapid Transit commission if the voters so desire.

Erroneous reports from Lansing that the Callender Bill contained limitations which would prohibit Detroit spending more than $60,000,000 for a rapid transit system, or approximately 12 miles of subways, disturbed the Wayne delegation agreed after talks by leading manufacturers and businessmen, to support the Callender Bill without any limitations on special assessments, which meant an act permitting Detroit to build a 40-mile system costing $200,000,000 if the voters wanted it.

Previously members of the Wayne delegation had written into the new draft of the bill, as prepared for the Governor after the commission's original bill was found unsatisfactory by him, a provision limiting special assessments. The Governor's draft contained no such limitation.

Reapportionment of representative seats in the legislature was agreed to by the house of representatives by a vote of 68 to 29.

Under the Howarth bill Wayne county will be entitled to 21 seats in the next legislature, instead of just 14 as at present.

The vote ended a bitter legislative battle that has been unremitting in its intensity for two years. Harsh personal recriminations have been passed. Other legislation has been sacrificed by one side or the other as they pressed for victory.

And even as the anti-apportionists conceded defeat, they lashed at the governor, the lieutenant governor and members of the legislature who have persistently fought for reapportionment with verbal invective that stung.

The Wood Bill to reapportion the Senate, is still in the House Apportionment Committee. Gov. Groesbeck who made a personal issue of Wayne county's demand for Constitutional representation and brought about the passage of the Howarth bill is already working for the enactment of the Wood Bill. If it passes, all of the Constitution's demands will have been met.

The House passed the Evans Bill designed to curb extravagance in municipal improvements and to regulate municipal bond issues. The measure was part of the administration tax program. It has gone to the senate. The important features of the bill are those which insist that municipalities must provide adequate funds for the retirement of bonds. Bonds must either be issued serially or a sinking fund must be built up, periodically and consistently. The state treasurer would be required to approve all bond issues.

Michigan Federation of Labor workers' compensation bill has been killed. The committee on labor, by secret ballot voted against reporting the bill out on the floor for consideration of the house as a whole. The vote was nine to three. The committee split on the issue of amending the measure before placing it before the house. John Crutchfield, of Saginaw, a miner, and Edward R. Carter, of Delta county, freight brakeman, stood firm against any amendment.

The second of the trio of railroad bus bills introduced by Senator Horatio H. Karcher, of Rose City, was passed by the Senate by a vote of 20 to 7. The bill gives steam or electric railroads permission to establish motor bus or truck lines in conjunction with or supplanting their rail lines. It was originally provided that they could be established in extension of the rail lines, but that provision was killed in committee.

The state's prohibition enforcement in Wayne county and other parts of the state will be crippled as the result of the house's action on the department of safety budget. The house passed the senate bill giving the department only $450,000 for the next two years. More than $1,500,000 was asked. The $450,000 appropriation is little more than what is needed for work other than prohibition enforcement.

Opposition to the vast appropriations being made by the legislature without providing the funds to meet them, has appeared in the House. Rep. Loomis K. Preston, of Berrien county, objected when the House adopted 16 measures carrying more than $3,000,000 without the formality of discussion or a record roll call. The failure of the legislature to attach tax clauses to scores of building appropriation bills promises to force the State administration to increase the State tax rate next year.

Michigan News Tersely Told

Frank Jermin, meteorologist of the United States Weather Bureau station, at Alpena, is sending to Washington photographs to illustrate the spectacular drop in lake level here during the last few days. The water has fallen to a new low level of three feet, two and one-half inches below the lowest previous mark. The photographs were taken with the view of revealing the effects of the withdrawal of lake water by the city of Chicago for sanitary purposes. Jermin has warned captains of lake vessels that sharp fluctuations in the lake levels and pronounce currents may be expected.

The general offices of the Detroit, Bay City & Western railroad have been moved to Caro and the operation of trains over the road from Caro east to Roseburg has started with one train a day in each direction. This service will cover a distance of 49 miles and will take care of the freight business of the towns of Daytona, Wilmot, Hermans, Becker, Snover, Elmer, Watertown, Stillson, Peck, Kerr and Roseburg, with connections with other railroads at Carp and Sandusky, Becker and Wilmot.

Installation on the lighthouse tender Amaranth at Alpena of a new radio compass, accomplished during the last few days, marks the beginning of a new era in vessel navigation on the Great Lakes, in the opinion of shipping men, and should result in a decreased loss of life and property in the future. During times of poor visibility each station will send out a distinctive radio call for the guidance of vessels, much in the same way that lights now are flashed from the various lighthouses.

Efforts to create new lakes in Oakland county by damming creeks and the outlets of small lakes was brought to attention of the supervisors when an Orjon company petitioned to have the damming of Paint Creek and Marl lake stopped. It was maintained that the demands have lowered water levels in Lake Orion 14 inches, creating an insanitary condition.

The county agent has sent out a warning to all orchardists in Ottawa County telling them to spray their trees. The cause for the alarm is the appearance in large numbers of the aphid bug.

The Michigan State Normal College has prepared a list of 10 teachers of physical education who will graduate from the college in June and has sent a copy of this list to every school superintendent in the state.

Play Had Little Part in Puritan Training

"It is not inconsistent even with the American mind that myths should flourish among us," says Caroline E. MacGill in Scribner's Magazine. "Perhaps the subtlest and most widespread of all our myths is that myths cannot exist in the freedom and vigor of the 'great open spaces.' It is a peculiarly dangerous myth, because of its mind-closing tendencies, blinding us to the better concealed of the popular fallacies.

"Many of our myths center around liberty and freedom, until one would suppose that they were something indigenous to the soil of this western world. Yet we know that 'freedom,' except for the few, was about the last thing the original settlers wanted. An examination of the records of the northern colonies will show how exceedingly little freedom there was of any kind from the ordinances of Plymouth to the famous statute of 1636, which removed the last vestige of freedom from children above six, compelling them to be employed, even doubly employed, after that age. It is very well to talk about the stern economic conditions which made it necessary for each child to be so far as possible self-supporting, but the statute itself, alas! makes it quite clear that the real thorn was the sight of children presuming to play. Such lasciviousness on the part of the innocents was utterly at variance with the puritan temper."

"City" of El Dorado Nothing But a Myth

Some time ago, when the ruins of an Aztec city were discovered in the Amazonian forest, they were popularly supposed to be those of El Dorado, the golden city to which Raleigh and many other adventurers were said to have been lured, some to their death, and a few to fortune, in Elizabethan times, when the wildest stories of the New world found credence.

El Dorado sounds like the fanciful names which the Spaniards and Portuguese gave to the cities they established, such as Buenos Aires, Santiago, Los Angeles, and so on.

But the fact is that El Dorado is not a city at all, and never was, although it would make a fine sounding name for some new capital.

The story goes that Orellana, the lieutenant of the great Pizarro, pretended he had discovered a land of gold between the Orinoco and the Amazon, but when these high hopes proved delusive, the ruler was smeared with oil and rolled in gold dust, and dubbed El Dorado, the gilded man. Whether there is truth in the story is difficult to determine.

Dog's Self-Determination

Has a dog the right to select his own master? This question arose recently in a case brought before a London court when the owner of a valuable dog sued a neighbor for illegally harboring the animal. The defense set up, was that if a man had what was described as "an instinct for dogs," and a dog liked him and followed him, he was not legally bound to communicate with its owner if he knew the owner's name and address. In other words, the defendant attempted to extend the law of self-determination to animals. The same dog, he said, had followed him home on three occasions. Twice he returned it to the lawful owner, but on the third occasion he allowed it to remain. The court fined him $10.

The Orange in London

Oranges made their first recorded appearance in this country in 1290, when a Spanish fruit ship arrived at Portsmouth and the queen, Eleanor of Castile, purchased from its cargo 15 citrons and seven oranges. The next mention of them does not occur until 1398, when "pomes d'orring" figured among the delicacies at the coronation banquet of Henry IV, who may have become acquainted with the qualities of the fruit during his exile. By the sixteenth century oranges seem to have become common, and it is recorded that the lords of the star chamber in 1509 had them served daily at dinner at a cost of 2d per day.—London Mail.

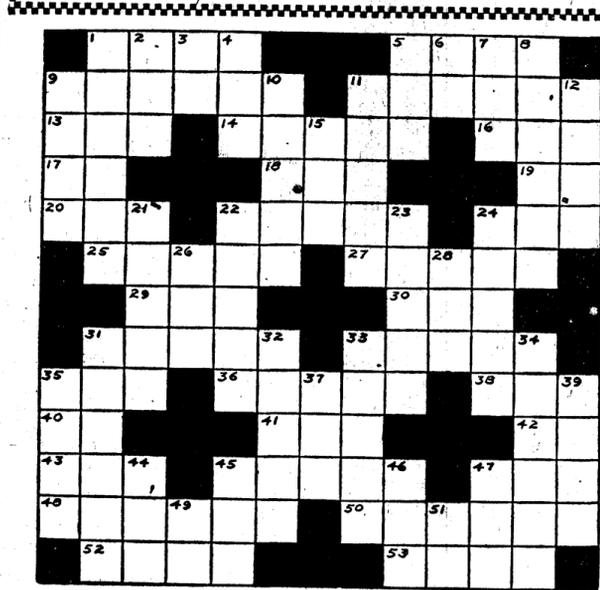

Valuable Air Cargoes

Precious stones will be part of the cargo of the airplanes now ready to fly over the 1,100 miles of tropical jungle between Kuchasha, the capital of the Belgian Congo, and Kutango, in the interior. No fewer than 25 airdromes and landing grounds have been built in the swamps and jungles around the Congo, providing a continuous chain of alighting grounds. The principal "cargoes" on the air route will consist of diamonds, gold and ivory, which will be brought from the interior to the capital in a single day instead of in a week as by present transport methods.

Feudal Dinner Custom

Many of the curious things connected with the service of the medieval dinner table were the result of the peculiar social system. Although widely separated in rank, the feudal baron ate daily with his retainers. But at a feudal banquet the lord of the castle and his chief guest occupied seats at the further side of the table or dais. They were said to sit at the dais, instead of at the table upon the dais. This feudal fashion of arranging the tables for a formal dinner survives in the modern custom of having a "raised table" for guests and speakers.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

HARBORD TELLS OF GOLDEN AFTERNOON

Colonel Dawes, with whom I have many tastes in common, and I had decided to have luncheon together at the Tour d'Argent, Paris, eating duck No. 48,921, I believe, and then go to Brentano's and pore over the old books, Major General Harbord writes in the Saturday Evening Post. Dawes is fond of Napoleonal, as I am also. He is a man of wealth—and he bought what he saw that he liked. He tossed into a pile book values that would have been earnest subject of prayerful deliberation with me for half a year, left $100 with Brentano for the afternoon's work, and gave me about half the books he bought—old rare editions of "History of the Bastille," "Martyrs of the Bastille," and so on. We went to his room at the Ritz and gloated a few gloats, and then attended a tea given by Mrs. Sharp, wife of the ambassador. For dinner we went to the little cozy apartment of Colonel and Mrs. Boyd, and after dinner we went to a circus and saw a very interesting performance—two good acts with trained Arab horses, especially.

Dangerous Job

News photographers are accustomed to working in dangerous places, but G. A. Shoemaker of the army air service is said to be the only one who risks his life regularly by falling in order to take pictures, says Popular Science Monthly. With three small motion-picture cameras strapped to his back, belt and a parachute on his back, this daring photographer, a senior instructor in parachute jumping, leaps from the wing of a Martin bomber. As he falls, he looks about him calmly, taking photographs of bits of scenery or other objects of interest. If the parachute opens properly and he lands safely, he then has for sale several photographs that are of unusual value and interest.

Finds Guests Honest

At Pearsall, Texas, the sheriff of the county, H. L. Brooks, has put into operation a "help yourself" hotel and the guests appear to like it. The guests register without assistance, erasing from a nearby blackboard the number of the room they select. When they leave after a day or a month, they put the money to pay for their stay in an envelope and drop it into a locked box near the door. The hotel owner seldom appears, there is no cashier and servants give unobtrusive service. Mr. Brooks says he has been cheated out of only $2 thus far.

POTATO LOOKED ON AS RARE DELICACY

The potato went through a long season of doubt and suspicion before it was accepted as a wholesome article of diet by the British consumer. A Seventeenth century Scot's treatise on "Husbandry Anatomized" had recommended the cultivation of the potato on a large scale, with hints as to its preparation for the table. But it was long before the potato emerged from the sphere of tentative horticulture. It continued to sell by the ounce as a rare delicacy; and as late as 1740 two sacksful of potatoes sufficed on a market day for the 5,000 inhabitants of Paisley. Consternation reigned in South Ulster when the chief of the clan proposed to cultivate a potato crop, and only under threat of imprisonment were the inhabitants induced to lend their aid for the sowing. Years of famine played their part in reconciling the Highland crofters to the consumption of this uncanny new-fangled product.—Montreal Family Herald.

Going a-Milking

The farmer's pink-cheeked daughter was coming up the lane. She was clad in a grimy pair of overalls, from the pockets of which bulged bunches of waste and sundry wrenches and pliers. In her hand was a dirty satchel rattling with an assortment of iron tools. "Where are you going, my pretty maid?" I asked. "I'm going a-milkin', sir," she said. "But why the tools?" "Trouble," she said, "with that darned old milking machine again."—Life.

Polka Revival Attempted

Farmers in the Marysport district of England have attempted to revive the polka and other old-time dances, much to the joy of the younger generation, who seemed willing to drop the modern steps somewhat upon being taught the polka and the lancers by the older dancers. William Smith inaugurated the novelty at a dancing hall, with the aid of the more mature residents of the community.

Crow an Ideal Thief

The crow is an ideal thief. It never bungles its job. Naturalists say that it can carry away the egg of another bird without spilling a drop of the contents. To do this it accomplishes another difficult feat, that of driving its bill partially through the egg without breaking the shell on the other side.

Hedgehog and Porcupine

Strictly speaking, the hedgehog is a small insectivorous animal of nocturnal habits which lives in the Old world. There is no true hedgehog in the United States, but the American porcupine is popularly called hedgehog. So, in this country "hedgehog" and "porcupine" refer to the same animal.

EUROPE FREE OF RIOTS MAY DAY

Russia Holds Big Military Review—One Killed, Several Hurt in Mexico.

London.—Moscow propaganda for May day collapsed utterly throughout Europe. In nearly every section government machinery went ahead as usual and no challenge was heard throughout an unusually uneventful day.

Trade unionists in nearly every country stopped work for the day and held street parades and peaceful demonstrations. Police preparations prevented outbreaks in the few countries in which Red activities had been expected to be prominent.

A number of Left Wing Socialists and Communists in London marched to Hyde park to stage demonstrations, but returned soon in bedraggled condition because of heavy showers. They then tried to march to the Bulgarian legation to demand the liberation of political prisoners, but police turned them aside without any trouble.

Riot in Mexico City.
Mexico City.—A girl was shot and killed and several persons were wounded in a clash between Communists and labor union paraders which climaxed the Mexican capital's May day. The Communists had devoted the day to denouncing the government.

Moscow.—All the ordinary activities of Russia stood still on Friday while endless legions of workers, soldiers, Communists, and boy and girl scouts, forming mile long battalions and carrying inflammatory banners, celebrated May day in true Bolshevist fashion.

Government offices, stores, and factories were closed, the workers being given a three-day holiday. Moscow was a riot of red, and every public building flaunted flaming lithographs of Karl Marx, Lenin, Rykoff, Kallinin, and other Bolshevist leaders. At night the city was aglow with red electric lamps, dazzling banners of red and white, and huge illuminated signs.

In Red square a great parade embracing all branches of the army and navy filed past Lenin's tomb.

Red army recruits took the oath of allegiance in front of Lenin's tomb to support the revolution.

$300,000,000 LOAN TO GREAT BRITAIN

Gold Credit Given by Federal Reserve and Morgan.

New York.—Coinciding with England's official return to the gold standard and establishment of the pound sterling at the highest price in ten years, it was announced officially that the Bank of England, fiscal agent for the British government, has arranged two credits in the United States aggregating $300,000,000.

Two-thirds of the credit has been established with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in behalf of the entire federal reserve system.

The other $100,000,000 is through J. P. Morgan & Co., fiscal agent for Great Britain.

The private credits, the largest ever granted in peace time to any nation, emphasize the position of the United States, as the supreme power in the finances of the world.

These credits mean that England, before the war financial center of the earth and controlling factor in monetary affairs throughout the world, is depending on the United States to help her maintain her pound sterling at the gold parity.

Thousands Vaccinated in War on Smallpox

Washington.—Thousands of Washingtonians have sore arms, and it is reported that not the least of these is the one belonging to President Coolidge. This situation is the result of a smallpox scare of such proportions that the United States public health service requested all government employees to submit to vaccination.

Since January 1 there have been 19 deaths from smallpox in Washington and 54 cases. Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings of the public health service declares the disease is appearing in a specially virulent form. Doctor Cummings said, however, that he did not believe it had as yet reached the epidemic stage here.

He pointed out that smallpox had been prevalent in many eastern centers. Philadelphia, he said, had had a bad scare, and Detroit had been visited by a bad epidemic last winter. Other cities which have suffered within the year are Denver, Los Angeles, Kansas City, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

U. S. TRADE BODY ENDS PUBLICITY

Business Firms Will Be Given Private Hearing—Thompson Protests.

Washington.—Final action of the reorganized federal trade commission was taken with respect to the long troublesome question of publicity regarding complaints against American business firms.

Hereafter business firms will not be subjected to publicity regarding complaints of illegal practices until they have had a chance to be heard.

Huston Thompson, one of the members of the commission, objected strenuously to the new policy and charged that it would permit "star chamber" proceedings. The commission, however, adopted the following rule:

"From and after this date, in the settlement of any matter by stipulation before the complaint is issued, no statement in reference thereto shall be made by the commission for publication. After a complaint is issued, no statement in regard to the case shall be made by the commission for publication until after the final determination of the case.

"After a complaint has been issued and the answer of the respondent has been filed, or in case the respondent fails to file an answer by the rules provided, the papers in the case shall be open to the public for inspection, under such rules and regulations as the secretary may prescribe."

"It has been the rule," said a statement issued by the commission, "which is now abolished, to issue a statement upon the filing of a complaint stating the charges against a respondent. In the opinion of the majority of the commission, this statement, which is given wide publicity, has resulted in many cases in damage to the respondent, and if such a case is later dismissed, the publicity given the dismissal does not repair the damage thus resulting in injustice. Of course, proceedings in the case must become public, but the majority believe it to be fair to withhold publicity until the respondent's answer is filed, and then to make the complaint and the respondent's answer available to the press and the public at the same time."

Kidnaped Girl Declares Convict Was Kind to Her

Middlebury, Vt.—Earl Woodward, ex-convict, is in jail here awaiting a hearing on the charge of kidnaping. He had been hunted for a week by more than a thousand armed persons. Rewards were offered for his seizure, dead or alive, and the mountains for miles around had been searched by posses and militiamen ready to fire on sight, for Woodward was supposed to be a desperate fiend.

In other quarters in jail is eleven-year-old Lucille Chatterton, daughter of Woodward's former employer. She was the supposed victim. But the story she tells has turned the anger of the populace against Woodward to sympathy. She says the ex-convict—the quarry of the hundreds of pursuers—took her from home to protect her from cruelty and guarded her as a brother would in all the long flight. They were brought here from East Brookfield.

Physicians who examined the girl and officials who questioned her say she was unharmed, physically or mentally.

The fugitives were trailed to their hiding place in an abandoned barn in South Brookfield by a police dog.

Father of President Is Examined by Specialists

Boston, Mass.—John C. Coolidge, eighty, father of the President, submitted to examination by two Boston specialists. Then he took the first train for Plymouth, Vt. His personal physician, Dr. Albert M. Cram of Bridgewater, Vt., who accompanied Colonel Coolidge, said the examination had disclosed nothing more than slight weaknesses incidental to advancing age.

The statement of the examining physicians, Drs. Paul D. White of the Massachusetts General hospital and Arthur L. Chute, said the patient showed a slow pulse, varying from 38 to 56 per minute, and that this condition, known as "heart block," is sometimes found with advancing age. Doctor Cram added that nothing of a serious nature had been discovered.

New York.—A certified check for $146,000,000, the largest ever drawn by an American banking house, changed hands in payment for Dodge Bros., in the board room of the Central Union Trust company at 80 Broadway.

The check, drawn by Dillon, Read & Co., the bankers who purchased the company, on the Central Union Trust company, was to the order of "Dodge Bros., that being the designation of the old company. The new company, formed by Dillon, Read & Co., is known as Dodge Bros., Inc.

Uncle Sam's share of the $146,000,000 will be about $12,000,000. That represents approximately the tax liability of the Dodge heirs.

Solicitor General Beck's Resignation Is Accepted

Washington.—Formal announcement that the resignation of James M. Beck as solicitor general has been accepted by President Coolidge was made at the White House.

In his letter, made public here, Mr. Beck pointed out that through force of circumstances he had often been forced to perform the double duty of acting attorney general and solicitor general. This, he said, had resulted in a very great strain on his eyesight, which has never been of the best.

President Coolidge, in accepting his resignation, highly complimented Mr. Beck.

19,000 KILLED BY AUTOS IN YEAR

450,000 Persons Injured in United States During 1924.

New York.—Automobiles caused 19,000 deaths and injuries to 450,000 persons in the United States in 1924, statistics made public by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters revealed. This is a daily average of 52 dead and 5,850 injured. Of the dead, 5,700 were children.

Notwithstanding the death total, the largest ever reported, the bureau finds signs of encouragement in a pronounced fall in the rate of increase of accidents.

The increase in deaths in 1923 over 1922 was 20 per cent, while the increase in 1924 was only 4 per cent. This was attributed to organized campaigns to reduce accidents.

A comparison of the automobile death rate with the number of cars registered shows a steady decrease. In 1915 the number of deaths for every 10,000 automobiles was 24, each succeeding year showing a decrease until the 1924 figures indicate only 9.6 deaths for every 10,000 cars. There are 17,500,000 cars in the United States.

Grade crossing accidents took 1,688 lives, a decrease of 71.

Since 1908 the death rate due to motor car accidents has increased steadily until today automobiles cause more deaths than all other vehicles, including trains and street cars, combined.

President Lauds Role of Jews in American History

Washington.—A high tribute was paid by President Coolidge to the part played by the Jews in the history of the United States.

The President spoke at the dedication exercises attending the laying of the corner stone of Washington's new Jewish community center. Taking as his text the deeds of the heroes of the Old Testament and recalling the fact that the Hebrew law was one of the principal sources from which the codes of the original colonies were drawn, he traced briefly the contributions which the Jews of America have made in the way of statecraft, science, literature, art, business, finance, philanthropy, and the spiritual life of the nation.

He dwelt on the great task that confronted the colonial fathers in welding a nation of many nationalities and creeds, and he warned that the work of spiritual unification is not yet completed.

Balloon Race Is Won by Van Orman; Flies 600 Miles

St. Joseph, Mo.—W. T. Van Orman, piloting the Goodyear III, covered the greatest distance in the national elimination balloon race, which ended on Sunday when the last two bags came to earth.

Van Orman landed at Reform, Ala., outstripping the veteran Capt. H. E. Honeywell by about 40 miles. Captain Honeywell brought the St. Joseph down at Aberdeen, Miss.

In a message reporting his landing Van Orman estimated the distance he covered at 530 miles. A rough measurement by map showed the distance to be approximately 600 miles.

The race carried a cash prize of $1,000 for the winner, the Litchfield trophy, and the right to represent the United States in the international balloon race. Second place got $800.

$150,000 Derby Entry Dies; Poison Suspected

Baltimore, Md.—Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Preakness and derby candidate, Sunny Man, died at the Pimlico track, after an ailment of several days which local veterinarians believe was due to poisoning.

Three veterinarians who saw Sunny Man before his death expressed the opinion, according to J. P. Smith, trainer of the Kilmer string, the ailment was caused by a "pill" of chloral and arsenic administered prior to the race at Havre de Grace. The Kilmer colt was insured for $150,000.

"I—killed him? I—killed Babooma—a man?"

Swiftly he closed her lips with his own, with quick perception of the effects which renewed civilization might have had upon the primitive instincts aroused on the island.

"I owe my very life to you, wife of my heart," he whispered.

But his reflections were misplaced. "Thank God!" she cried unexpectedly. "I would still kill anybody—any day—who attempted to hurt you."

"Nom de Dieu!" he echoed the Frenchmen. "Our life will be a checked career."

Then Barbara fully recognized once more the old Alan of flesh and blood, deep moods and light banter, poetic idealism and prompt action—deliciously human, warm with love and life. She suddenly laughed, the bewildered sense of shock falling from her—the first real spontaneous laugh of many weeks.

"Alan! Alan! Nothing matters but the fact that you are here—alive! But I can't understand it all. How was such a mistake made?"

"Very easily. Because De Borceau didn't, of course, know friend from foe! Things were going all right with us. But when one of the devils set fire to the hut and the friendly spear knocked me out, De Borceau naturally thought all was up. Some of Babooma's lot tried to reach you, but Roowa frustrated them. Then De Borceau was stung to his oath. He fought anybody who came near you, like a medieval knight, and carried you off to safety. Poor Roowa thought he had stolen you from me, and nearly went mad!" He laughed reminiscently.

"But you? What happened to you? The expedition searched the island. And what became of the De Borceaus when they returned?"

He sank into the big armchair, still clasping her in his arms. "It's quite a fairy story. You remember the wood in the east—where, that first Christmas day?"

"Every leaf!" she breathed.

He smiled into her eyes.

"But not every moss-covered rock. In that wood was a very cleverly concealed entrance to a subterranean passage leading to a kind of vault. This narrowed down into another outlet—quite impassable—on the shore, which allowed a little fresh air and glimmers of light. This cave was tabu. In happier days, when the tribe was sufficiently self-supporting—to provide its own meat, the condemned dinner was—well, we need not go into details! But that cave was supposed to be haunted with the spirits of past feasts. Nobody liked to speak of it, or go near it. When I was considered dead, our friends, very naturally, carried off my bleeding corpse—"

"Oh, don't!" cried the girl who had suffered so much from this well-meaning act. She buried her face on his shoulder.

After a lucid interval he resumed his narrative.

"When they realized you had been 'stolen' and I was still alive, the fear arose that the 'bird of ill omen' would return and make off with me, too! So, to insure my safety—that was the irony of it all—they raised the tabu and hid me in the cave. Only Roowa was courageous enough to enter with food. I was knocked out for some time. When I recovered—Barbara! Can you possibly imagine my feelings upon discovering that the rescue party had come and gone? I was raving mad! The poor beggars had done it for the best and were bewildered. Nothing would convince them that the white men were my friends. I spent what seemed years of agony, doubtful if any further help would come. My only hope lay in you."

"In me?"

"I thought you would persuade De Borceau or somebody to try again, not rest content—"

"I wanted to come myself," she cried. "I implored and threatened and—Oh! everybody was so pig-headed. But what happened to De Borceau?"

"As soon as the plane's arrival was known the whole tribe raced pell-mell to the shore and burned it to cinders. I found the brothers hiding for their life in the forest." He gave an irrepressible bubble of laughter. "They—literally—fell from the trees upon my neck! We have been kissing each other's hands or faces ever since. So, again, nothing remained but to wait and hope. I thought at least a missionary party would turn up. That second expedition was infernally slow!"

He laid his cheek impulsively down upon hers. "But De Borceau could give me news of you. He told me everything—about Singapore—"

Her lips turned, trembling a little, to his.

"And," she whispered, "it?"

"And it." His arms tightened. "And—other things. I insisted. He acted loyally—for us both, Barbara. But—by heaven!—it made my gorge rise to know what you were facing—the inferences, the—And there I was, powerless as a stranded infant to help you."

"It was—h—l!" she murmured briefly. "Have you heard—?"

"Madge told me everything. She got the news of our rescue almost directly after you left London! I came home like the very devil—by sea, air, and land—to find you had disappeared—gone to break your little heart alone, where I couldn't find you—"

"I had to come away, Alan. I was in a turmoil—"

"My Barbara, don't I understand!" Suddenly his eyes blazed in their old way; and he dashed an arm upon the table, causing the flame of the lamp to jump.

"Those blighted Pharisees! Those d—d, gossiping—"

"Oh, my dear!" She laughed again at this familiar vehemence.

"I went to Darbury," he explained briefly.

Her laughter fled. "You went to Darbury, Alan?" She glanced apprehensively into his grim face. "What—what happened?"

He remained silent for a moment, then met her eyes with a smile.

"Well . . . No deaths occurred."

"Did—did mother—say—?"

"There was a very free, candid interchange of opinion! I honestly tried to reconcile your mother, but"—he gave one of his old careless shrugs—"she considers herself disgraced, and talks darkly of being obliged to leave Darbury. . . . I saw Rochdale, too—"

Barbara raised her head again. "Ah! Dear old Hugh! He has been splendid, Alan. His friendship—his struggle to—believe—" Her voice quavered.

"I know. And he, of everybody concerned, might with justness have condemned—"

They fell silent awhile, each knowing, by their own joy, what it all meant to the friend who had lost. . . .

A realization of what this return would mean to Mrs. Field combined with her own overwhelming joy to draw from the very depths of her heart a voiceless prayer met thanksgiving. In the luminous, darkened eyes that met her own, she saw the same look of almost reverent awe. Never had he seemed so gloriously alive, so radiant in spirit. Again she raised her hands to feel the features she had never thought to see again; then drew the dear head, with passionate tenderness, down to her breast, and clasped it there.

To both of them, beneath the superficial lightness of talk, this hour equaled in sacredness that of their marriage morning in the dawn. But this held in it, also, the half-fearful joy of a resurrection. The past darkness, with the struggle toward the light, had left ineffaceable marks upon each soul.

"Can't we go back to the island?" she whispered at last.

"Some day." He raised his head and smiled. "We'll retire there, now and then, and live it all again! But our first jaunt is to Australia. I've been commissioned to rebuild the old bus. There's been an awful lot of interviewing and publicity since I got back ten days ago—"

"Only ten days! And you've been to Darbury—"

"That's not all."

He looked at her with eyes which held something of their old inscrutability.

"Your relations showed unflattering surprise at what they termed my 'constancy' now we are rescued. Oh, lord!"

"They would!" she cried, with indignation.

"The fear that we meant brazenly to defy the English law possessed them. They besought me to marry you 'properly, in a church.' Your aunt particularly insisted upon a Protestant church—not a registry office, or chapel."

"Just like Aunt Mary!" She laughed

rather bitterly. "I couldn't feel—more married," she added, with the quick shy look he loved.

His gray eyes darkened; with a little catch of the breath his arms tightened.

"There's one thing, therefore, which bold bad barons must have in their pockets when they chase their victims to Darbury, to prove their good intent."

"What is that?"

"A special license. I know a parson near here. We haven't met for eight years; but I wired this morning to tell him we should arrive at his church to be married tomorrow—"

"My dear whirlwind!" she gasped.

He bent, with his old violent suddenness, and caught her up so close she could scarcely breathe. All the old passionate, dominating love, which had so often swept her away, poured forth and surrounded her; so that, panting and glorying, her individuality, after all its lonely travail, once more transfused, transformed into his own.

"So," he whispered, "we must have another wedding, my Beloved! But it cannot be more beautiful—more real—than the other in the dawn—"

"With a little sobbing, tremulous sigh, she clung close. . . . "If we had one every year, in every land and every tongue," she murmured whimsically, "they would all seem beautiful to me."

The landlady discreetly entered at last to lay the supper. She cast one comprehensive glance at the armchair, and her smiling face grew more radiant.

"We are to be married in the morning," Alan remarked.

Cornish people take life calmly. They do not lose their heads or forget their duties in any crisis.

"Yes, sir!" Mrs. Tregutheran agreed brightly. "I'm sure I do hope you will both be happy. And—will you have eggs to breakfast, sir—or bacon?"

"Both—heaps!"

They smiled at each other when she left the room.

"Somebody must feed us," he observed, passing his fingers through her curly hair. "Every little note has its niche."

Hugh sat long over a lonely breakfast, a few days later. The "old people" were away. The London paper, with its list of marriages, lay upon the table before him; but he stared away absently, through the window, without turning the page.

Presently, with gun and dogs, he stepped out into the raw February air, turning aimlessly down a lane. . . .

An hour later, followed closely by six puzzled brown eyes, he walked slowly up the pathway in the little wood where—aeons ago—he and Barbara had discussed their honeymoon. The gun still rested unused within his arm, the cartridges untouched within their bag.

Underfoot, the fir needles lay soft and damp with here and there frosts of sodden dead bracken drooping upon them. The tall pines swayed a little, whispering their everlasting, murmurous song; dropping, sometimes, splashes from their wet leaves, like tears, upon the dreariness below. All the world appeared gloomy, dead, sorrowful. It seemed impossible that, soon, the sap would run in the tall trees, the young green shoot forth upon the hedges, spring—with its fresh myriad life—awake with the "singing of birds."

The unloaded gun dropped unheeded to the ground. . . . The six brown eyes questioned one another wonderingly; then looked back at the tweed-clad figure lying face downward, with head buried in his arms.

At last Shag, Hugh's favorite terrier, ever the most tender-hearted of friends, approached cautiously; sniffed; then gently licked what was visible of a much-loved cheek.

(THE END.)

Famous Old Church

This year sees the three hundred and sixty-fourth anniversary of the demolition of the magnificent Church of St. John at Perth, the restoration of which is now contemplated.

This is without doubt one of the most interesting churches in Scotland, says the Weekly Edinburgh Scotsman. Tradition ascribes its foundation to the Picts, but, whoever founded it, it is one of the earliest stone churches built in the country; and, in the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries, as evinced both by ancient documents and by the surviving remnants of the edifice of that time, it was magnificent and extensive. The monk of Dunfermline, to whom it was granted, allowed it to fall into disrepair—a state of affairs which Robert the Bruce set about remedying, but the restoration was stayed by his death.

Odd Quail in Borneo

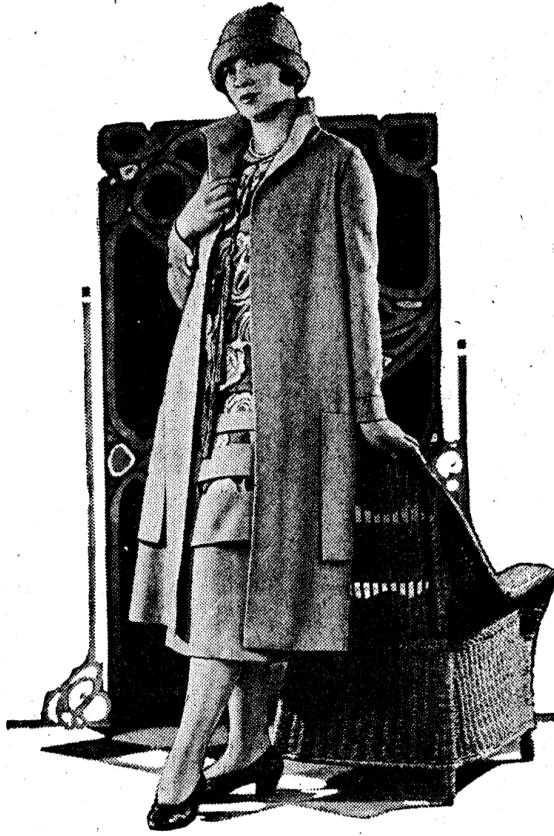

The long, hairy, reddish crest gives the moderately sized, rich green-plumaged greenwood quail a distinguished appearance, says Nature Magazine. In its native haunts, from Siam to Borneo and Java, it is a lover of the tropical forest up to an altitude of 4,000 feet, and seldom visits the open country.

STYLES IN SUMMER WARDROBE; KNITTED WEAR FOR CHILDREN

WHEN the business of assembling a summer wardrobe is under way, the question is not, "Will you have an ensemble suit?" but, "What kind of ensemble will you have?" The attractiveness of ensembles made so strong an impression on the feminine world that the ensemble idea has been exploited in every direction, greatly to the advantage of women. They have made rapid progress in learning to buy things that harmonize and belong together, in their street and other covery after another greets the eye, in the way of cunningly devised sweaters, frocks, capes, scarfs and other charming knitted items too numerous to relate. Gay color? There's a wealth of it. That is what this season's knitted togs for little boys and girls is noted for and this is as it should be, for what more joyous combination is there than children and color?

The little girl in the picture radiates cheer in her sweater of tan il-clothes—even when the outfit is not an ensemble suit.

A fine example of the ensemble suit for summer is pictured here in flannel and printed silk, and it consists of a dress of figured silk and plain flannel, combined, and a long coat of the flannel. A suit of this kind might be developed in any of the season's popular colors—the tan, wood and sand shades, light brown, navy, lavin green or gray. All the natural or "unbleached" shades are well established in the modes for summer and they combine well with other colors. But the model is adapted to other cloths besides flannel, kasha, twills, pongee and the crepe weaves. The underdress is a long tunic with a deep band set on at the bottom and narrower, graduated bands above it. Ensemble suits of this kind may be varied by making a plain skirt to match the coat and wearing long overblouses or tunic blouses with it. In the wood, sand, natural or gray colors, and even in livelier hues, a long, plain coat, like the one pictured, will make itself very luminated with stripes of brightest-ever orange. Note that this sweater is of brushed wool. The fact that the brushed wool of nowadays is as light in weight as a feather bespeaks its continued favor. Then, too, there is another argument in its behalf, in the pleasure the "kiddies" take in these soft-as-down fuzzy-wuzzy knitted coats.

The popularity of bright red extends into the sweater field for children. Another beloved color this season for little folks' sweaters is madonna blue. In fact blues of all shades are important.

Some adorable full-length fine light-weight coats are being displayed among distinctive knitted outerwear for tiny folks. They are knitted in ribs, and are double-breasted. A little hat, to match is made up with a wee roll brim and a perky yarn pom-pom.

Among clever new ideas which a tour of adventure into a fairland of knitted finery for children reveals, are tots' jersey frocks, these having lots generally useful over light summer dresses.

Among the new showings in ensembles there are suits for formal wear, in which figured silk and black georgette are charmingly combined. The coats are made in long, loose lines with some sort of ribbon ruching, or other trimming at the bottom to give them flaring hues, and their sleeves are fuller.

To visit the juvenile realm of things knitted is like journeying through an Alice-in-Wonderland scene of enchantment. One fascinating dis-of buttons and sometimes trimmings in contrasting color. Bloomers come with these suits. Then there are jumper suits to be had at prices most reasonable. These serve admirably for school and play time.

Other knitted luxuries for children include knitted rayon tunic frocks with knickers to match. Such lovely colors are exploited as mauve, red, brown, blue and pink, bordered at the neckline, hem and cuffs with either beige, fawn, biscuit or white.
