Co-Testings Is Aid to Dairying

Association Now Throwing Light on Problem of 307,019 Cows

(By Dr. P. A. White, New York)

Seven hundred and thirty-two stars of the dairy world are being interviewed in the office of the business of dairying. This is the result of a most recent and important national co-operative system not only in the field of milk and milk products but also in its capacity to supply the farmer with the necessary equipment used in the dairy industry.

According to Dr. White, approximately four million dairy cows are being milked to provide the milk of the nation each day. In the state of New York alone, about 600,000 cows are being milked, each cow producing an average of seven gallons of milk per day. The average daily production per cow in the state is approximately 5.5 gallons.

The problem of the dairyman is to provide a satisfactory supply of milk at a reasonable price. The dairyman must also be able to furnish milk of high quality and color, free from objectionable odors, and free from impurities. The dairyman must also be able to furnish milk at a reasonable price.

To solve this problem, the dairyman must have a good supply of fresh, pure water for the use of the cows. The water must be free from objectionable odors, and free from impurities. The water must also be free from bacteria and other microorganisms.
