One Horse Town, Good-Bye!

Any community whose streets are not duly paved is known as a "one horse town."

When that time arrives, Pomeroy says, "Good-bye, old friend. Good-bye!"

People start moving away. Bank deposits fall off. Business in general begins to take a dive, and the place no longer "sits the map."

Contrast all this with the city that is well paved.

It steadily hops ahead over its hard, even streets. Automobiles, trucks, buses, and trains travel together, now and then. The sidewalks are broad and there is space and air in the streets. The stores are brisk, and everybody's happy.

In short, permanently paved streets and roads are one of the very best investments any community can make. You can enjoy the toxic air of well-paved streets by helping your local authorities to find ways and means to build more of these streets and roads.

Six-Year-Old Heads Cult

A bare six years old now leads the elaborate cult in China to obtain a prince at the little duchy of King and he has three friends, where his family has been for 2,200 years, serving as a very authentic prince. On this site cult which has been working for 2,000 years, he was presented to the throne of China. When the ruler died, the boy was given the throne. CHAPTER 1

In Which the Characters Meet

Barcley Street

The scene is a bar. The stage is set with a row of tables and chairs. The characters are seated at the tables, engaged in conversation.

The man who had been advanced and youthful in appearance, now appeared older and more mature. His eyes were no longer bright, but rather dull and lifeless. His hair was now gray, and his face was lined with wrinkles. He sat alone, lost in thought, seemingly unaware of his surroundings.

The young man who had been dressed in a loud, flashy suit, now wore a more subdued, classic style. His previous arrogance and confidence were now replaced by a more humble, introspective demeanor. He sat quietly, lost in his own thoughts, seemingly unaffected by the chaos around him.

The woman who had been dressed in a lush, expensive gown, now appeared more modest and understated. Her previous flamboyance and extravagance were now replaced by a more reserved, discreet style. She sat quietly, lost in her own thoughts, seemingly unaffected by the chaos around her.

The scene was set in a small town, where the characters met at a local bar. The atmosphere was quiet and intimate, with a slight undercurrent of tension.
