Solution of Last Week's Puzzle:

How to Solve a Cross-Word Puzzle:

1. Read the Clues: Each clue gives you a hint about the word you are looking for. The clues can be either a definition or a description of the word.
2. Consider the Length: The number before the clue tells you how many letters the word contains.
3. Use Cross-References: If a word intersects with another word, its letters will be highlighted in both directions.
4. Look for Common Words: Common words often appear in many different contexts, so they might be easier to guess.
5. Eliminate Possibilities: As you fill in the grid, you can eliminate words that don't fit the clues or the grid.
6. Check Your Work: Double-check your answers to make sure they fit all the clues and intersect correctly with other words.

By Thomas A. Clark

This paper from the home town came in today containing an excerpt of a recent educational institution in the field of thought. The writer has been quoted as saying, "The problem is, how do we teach children to think critically?" He went on to explain that the key is to encourage children to question and analyze information. He also emphasized the importance of critical thinking in today's world, where information is abundant but often misleading.

The writer, who is a professor of education at a leading university, further stated, "In a world where information is readily available, it's crucial for students to develop the ability to evaluate sources and make informed decisions. Teachers should act as guides, helping students to think for themselves rather than simply regurgitating facts." He believes that this approach will better prepare students for their future roles as informed citizens.

The paper concluded with a call to action, "We must prioritize critical thinking education in our schools. By equipping our students with the tools to think independently and critically, we can ensure a brighter future for all."

Plant Breeders Fight Disease Methods

Some of the Aliments of Grain Plants in China, Oregon, Japan, and Other Countries

(Presented to the United States Department of Agriculture in 1935)

Mill and many varieties are utilized, and the use of these is being increased. In the case of corn, the variety is a result of the selection of the kernel or the ear by hand, and the use of the seed is continued. In the case of rice, the variety is a result of the selection of the grain by hand, and the use of the seed is continued. In the case of soybeans, the variety is a result of the selection of the grain by hand, and the use of the seed is continued.

In Oregon, corn has been divided into three main categories: the early varieties, the middle varieties, and the late varieties. The early varieties are the ones which are planted in the spring, and the middle varieties are the ones which are planted in the fall. The late varieties are the ones which are planted in the late fall and winter. In Japan, rice has been divided into three main categories: the early varieties, the middle varieties, and the late varieties. The early varieties are the ones which are planted in the spring, and the middle varieties are the ones which are planted in the fall. The late varieties are the ones which are planted in the late fall and winter.

In China, soybeans have been divided into three main categories: the early varieties, the middle varieties, and the late varieties. The early varieties are the ones which are planted in the spring, and the middle varieties are the ones which are planted in the fall. The late varieties are the ones which are planted in the late fall and winter.

County Record for Use of Pure Breeds

All Classes of Live Stock Included in List

The new edition of the United States Department of Agriculture's "Crop Improvement and Production" contains a list of the pure breeds of livestock which are recognized.

In general, the pure breeds are those which have been bred for a specific purpose, and which are characterized by a distinct set of physical and genetic traits.

The list includes all classes of livestock, from the small Sydney cattle in Australia to the large Hereford cattle in the United States. The list also includes the various breeds of horses, mules, and other draft animals.

The list is intended to be a guide to the breeder, and to assist in the selection of the proper breed for a particular purpose. It is also intended to assist in the registration of pure breeds, which is necessary for the maintenance of a pure breed population.

Bloody Hand-to-Hand Fighting in Morocco—French Forces Crushed

Barcelona—Barcelona, a city of bastions and byways, a city of French forces, a city of bloody hand-to-hand fighting. Here the French forces were crushed by the Spanish. The battles raged through the streets, with a deafening roar of artillery and the scream of machine guns. The French forces were outnumbered and outmaneuvered. The city was divided into two parts by the lines of battle. The French forces held their ground, but were eventually forced to retreat. The Spanish forces advanced, taking control of the city. The battles lasted for several days, with heavy casualties on both sides. The French forces were eventually forced to surrender, ending the bloody hand-to-hand fighting in Barcelona.

Commander Rodgers' Own Story of Flight

Praha Cruze of PN-5, No. 1, in Most Modern Narrative of 3-Day Flight

Seattle—Commander John Rodgers, who made the most daring 3-day flight across the Pacific, is in the United States today. He was greeted by a hero's welcome, his every word being listened to with rapt attention.

For the benefit of the interested public, the following is a brief outline of his story:

1. Preparations: Commander Rodgers and his crew had extensive training and preparation. They practiced for months in order to be ready for the flight.
2. Departure: On May 20, 1935, the PN-5, a Boeing Model 247, left Chicago, Illinois, on its maiden flight to Alaska.
3. Flight: The flight was a success, with Commander Rodgers and his crew navigating through challenging weather conditions.

Commander John Rodgers, who is now in his eighties, tells of the magnificent voyage, which was a triumph of human endeavor.

U.S. Reports Yield of Corn Is Reduced

Forecast Indicates Crop of 3,550,000 Baskets

Washington—The announced corn crop of 3,550,000 baskets is much smaller than this year's actual crop, which was over 5,000,000 baskets. The crop has been reduced due to a drought in the southern states, where most of the corn is grown. The reduction in the corn crop will have a significant impact on the local economy, as corn is a major crop in the region. The reduction in the corn crop will also affect the prices of corn, which will likely increase due to the reduced supply.

The corn crop is a vital part of the local economy, providing jobs for farmers and supporting the local food industry. The reduction in the corn crop will have a significant impact on the local economy, and efforts will be made to mitigate the effects of this reduction.

ERADICATING MITES TO SAVE POULTRY

FARM POULTRY

There are five poultry producers this year in America. They are: Allen, Johnson, Smith, Brown, and Robinson. Each of them is growing at a different pace. But there is one thing that they all have in common: they are all working hard. They are all working hard, and they are all doing well. The difference is that they have different methods of doing it. Some of them are using the new methods, and some are using the old methods.

MRS. BORGELIN'S REMARKABLE RECOVERY

This woman is a remarkable example of what can be done with proper care and treatment. She was seriously ill with typhoid fever, and her doctors gave her up for dead. But her husband, who was a doctor himself, refused to give her up. He continued to care for her, and in the end she recovered. She is now a healthy, happy woman, and she is grateful to her husband for his care.
