W. R. C.

It takes the W. R. C. to plan and execute a surprise on short notice. After the noon hour Friday it was learned that it was Mr. and Mrs. F. Powers' 42nd wedding anniversary and also Mr. Powers' birthday. Word was quickly sent to the members to meet at Mr. Powers' house at 3 o'clock to help them celebrate the event. On arriving there and finding no one at home and the house locked the tables were turned and they were the surprised one. Nothing daunted a telephone message found them at the farm and informed them that company was at their home and wanted to see them. By that time the crowd had borrowed a neighbor's key and were in full possession of the house when Mr. and Mrs. Powers and an aunt from Nbio who was visiting them arrived and greetings were exchanged all around. Mrs. Foster was down from Grand Rapids and at 4 o'clock one of the sisters said to her, "If you want to go to the postoffice before it closes we better go now." The mail they returned with was ice cream and various kinds of cake. Mrs. Powers had baked him a birthday cake in the morning that was added to the list. All enjoyed the refreshments and the social hour. Knowing that Mr. Powers' favorite sweet was honey he received that for his present.

The first meeting of the W. R. C. in September was held with Mrs. Hill. It being extremely warm and some of the members being in poor health, hardly able to climb the steps to the hall, our president, Mrs. Mellie Alway invited them to hold the next regular session Sept. 17 at her home. The day arrived when two or three stopped in the middle of the forenoon it never dawned on her why they happened in until more arrived and said they had come to take dinner with her. The surprise was surely complete. About 20 sat down to a bountiful pot luck dinner that all enjoyed and as each returned to their home we think they understood as never before the full meaning of the word fraternity.

Lore for Dog-Owners

By Albert Payson Terhune

THE HEART OF A MONGREL

"You Know All About Dogs, Mr. Negley. He Isn't a Mutt, is He?"

JUST as measles sweeps a whole school, so the dog-craze smote the commuter settlement at Paignton. Within six months, twelve families, on Vine street alone, had acquired dogs. And almost no two of the dogs were of the same breed.

Then it was that Old Man Negley came to the fore.

Old Man Negley had not the good luck to live on Vine street with its deep yards and broad lawns. He lived in a shack, down on River street; he and his smiling fat wife and their three dogs. But he was a daily visitor to Vine street; where he cut lawns and made gardens in summer and shoveled snow and made furnace fires in winter.

Hitherto, the old chap had had no special claim to distinction, besides being a good workman. But now it was discovered in some way that he had spent many years as a kennelman and as a hanger-on at dog shows.

Wherefore, the new dog-craze on Vine street made his advice and opinion as much in demand as those of the only doctor in a busy town.

For the dog-owners were finding that it is one thing to buy a pup; and quite another thing to understand him or how to care for him. Commuters fell to waylaying Old Man Negley for information and to ask him innumerable questions.

One noon, as Old Man Negley parked his lawnmower in the lee of the Crothers' porch and sat down beside it in the shade, for lunch, two little figures came around the corner of the antique converted farmhouse and bore down upon him.

One was a twelve-year-old girl, Sibyl Crothers. The other was a nondescript little old yellowish-gray dog.

"Mr. Negley," said the child with trouble quivering in her sweet voice, as she pointed to her beloved dog, "Maister Burke says that Paddy, here is a mutt. He isn't, is he? You know all about dogs. He isn't a mutt, is he?"

"No," returned the old man, gravely, as he proffered the disreputable little dog a silver of corned beef from his first sandwich. "No, indeed, Paddy isn't a mutt. The blood of the finest champions in the dog-world is flowing in Paddy's veins."

"Really?" exclaimed the delighted child. "Champions of what breed, Mr. Negley?"

"All breeds," responded Old Man Negley.

Sibyl's face flushed. She passed a protecting arm about Paddy; and glared defiance at the old man.

"I don't care!" she flashed. "He's the dearest, wisest, best dog that ever was. Daddy gave him to me when he was a puppy and when I was only just big enough to walk. And he's been my chum ever since. And now these other girls with their new-fangled thoroughbred dogs are turning up their noses at him! But I didn't think you'd make fun of—"

"Hold on!" begged the old man. "Hold on there, Missy. I meant what I said. The blood of some of the grandest breeds on earth is in every mongrel. That is why a mongrel is the healthiest and strongest and smartest and often the prettiest dog alive. I wasn't making small of Paddy."

Sibyl eyed him, doubtfully. He went on:

"Did you ever go to a trained animal act? I hope you didn't; because nine times out of ten they are the result of more cruelty than I like to think about. But if you did, you'll have noticed every time that the best trick dogs are mongrels."

"Do you know why that is? It's because a mongrel learns twice as quickly as the thoroughbred and because he is healthy enough to stand work and hardships that'd kill any pedigree pup."

"Back in France and Flanders, they used all sorts of dogs for couriers and for such like. Do you know the kind of dog that lasted longest and did the most heroic things and showed the most sense? Some say the collie. Some say the airedale.

"But the British war office kept tabs. And I happened to read a copy of the report at the town library once. It was the mongrel that did best service at the front. He was the dog that had all the best traits of all the other breeds. And that combination made him staunch and loyal and wise and brave."

"People get a pedigree dog, for a big price; and they pay a fortune for him and they spend loads of time and money in training him and in humanizing him; to bring out all the very best in him."

"People get a mongrel, for fifty cents or for nothing. In this world we're apt to value a thing by the amount it costs us. So they don't bother to train a mongrel as they'd train a thoroughbred."

"In spite of that, he often surprises them by his cleverness. If they'd take half the time and trouble to train him as they train a pure bred he'd reward that time and trouble fifty times over."

"Every now and then you hear about distemper epidemics killing hundreds of costly dogs. About fifty per cent of the thoroughbreds that have distemper die of it."

"Ever hear of a mongrel dying of distemper? No. And you never will. They get it; and they crawl under the barn or mope around the house for a few days. Then they are well again."

"If you've got the right kind of a mongrel and treat him right you've got one of the grandest dogs the Almighty ever made. Don't be ashamed of him. Be ashamed of yourself if you haven't brought out all the best in him."

"He's more anxious to learn than you are to teach him. He'll not only learn but he'll use his brain in an independent way, besides."

"For instance, when I was a kid, we had a mongrel—a regular 'yaller dog.' And we had a pure-bred terrier."

"One day I went for a tramp in the woods with both of them. I got stuck in a quicksand slough. They weren't big enough to pull me out. I hung onto a branch overhead, and wondered how long I could hang on before my strength went and the slough would get me."

"The terrier barked and danced around me, and tried to pull me out with his teeth. But he was too little. The mongrel didn't waste time like that. He grabbed my cap, that had fallen off, and home he galloped with it, Hekey-split, to dad; and he laid the cap at dad's feet and he yanked at dad's trouser legs till he made him follow him to the slough, just in time to pull me free."

"That was brain, against just plain devotion. That was the true mongrel of it."

"Now, the next time some kid sneers at you for loving Paddy and for being proud of him, you say to her: 'Your dog has only one breed. Mine has a dozen. And every one of that dozen is every bit as good as your dog's one.' Have some more meat, Paddy?"

Temperature Variation Gives Rise to Breeze

When air becomes warm it expands, gets lighter, and rises, while fresh, colder air blows in and takes its place. That is why there is usually a breeze at the seaside.

The land grows warm in the sunshine, while the sea remains practically cool, so there is generally a flow of cooler air from the sea taking the place of the warm air rising from the land.

These differences of temperature occur all over the world. Big areas of land and water become unequally hot and make the layers of air above them unequal in temperature, and therefore different in pressure.

CONVERSION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

I WAS reading a magazine the other day when this sentence caught my eye and held my attention.

It was the prodigal who said, "I will arise and go to my father."

When I was a child there was an annual revival meeting conducted for weeks in the little schoolhouse two miles from where we lived.

Everybody turned out. Young people and old came from miles around afoot, on horse back, in lumber wagons, by every means of locomotion available.

The term was a little confusing to me. It seemed a very sudden, mysterious experience, often full of emotion and excitement, bringing many to tears and throwing others into apparent ecstasies of joy and happiness.

There was Jim Bradley, for example. He was fifty years old. He had never gone to church; he was the loudest, most profane talker in the neighborhood.

Ultimately I came to see that both the man who was converted and the backslider had simply turned around to go in another direction. The backslider was going back to his old sinful life; the converted man had his face turned toward the things that were clean and unselfish and lovely.

There is no standing still for any of us. We are either going forward or back. We are going somewhere or nowhere, but we are all going. If we want to go to a different place we shall have to turn around. That's conversion.

Saved Many Lives by Rejecting Fool Advice

A funnel-like tornado swept Chewsville, Md., and neighboring country. The old brick schoolhouse at this town was crushed and scores of large trees were uprooted.

But when the excited man, walking up the railroad track, saw a giant tree lying across the rails and heard the far-away sound of an approaching train, he refused to be handicapped by any foolish saying—he tore his shirt off his back and, running toward the train, waved the shirt frantically to signal the engineer to stop.

Bridge in Mexico Is Built of Mahogany

As almost everyone knows, mahogany is among the most costly woods in existence. This tropical material is very seldom used in the construction of buildings of any kind; its principal use is for high-grade furniture.

Start Bee Year With New Queen

Proper Time to Prepare for Next Year's Crop and Supply of Stores.

Strong colonies of bees produce the bigger crops of better honey, according to V. G. Milum, apiarist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. He suggests that this is the proper time to prepare for next year's honey crop.

The first step in this march to success, according to Mr. Milum, is to see that every colony is supplied with a vigorous Italian queen immediately. This young queen may be purchased from a reliable queen breeder or may be reared by some method in the apiary.

Milum maintains that the successful beekeeper is the one who saves the first surplus of stores for winter feeding and spring development of brood rearing.

In connection with the extraction of the honey crop Milum advises that frames should not be removed for extraction until they are well capped over, or not until after a week or more following the close of the honey flow.

With the approach of honey harvesting time, Milum suggests that an inventory be taken of labels and containers. Attractive labels and containers aid in the sale of the product. A quality product is always more valuable; therefore beekeepers are urged to prepare their honey carefully.

A well-ripened honey is the first step in the production of a quality product and the second step is clean, well-strained honey. If it is then packed and displayed in a neat attractive container the chances for profit are greater.

Determine Age of Sheep by Development of Teeth

At fourteen to eighteen months of age, depending upon breed and rapidity with which the animal has been developed, the middle pair of incisors are replaced by the permanent teeth. These have a much broader cutting edge than the lamb teeth.

All of the permanent teeth have a broad cutting edge when they first appear, compared with the milk teeth. As the sheep grow older the teeth are worn back and hence become narrower. This rate of wearing depends upon the character of grazing upon which the sheep must depend.

Ground Corncocks Have Definite Feeding Value

Chemists' analyses indicate that corncocks and oat straw contain about the same amount of food material. Many practical farmers who have looked on oat straw as having but little feeding value have felt that corncocks were even more worthless. Now, however, the Minnesota station finds that ground corncocks are worth considerably more than straw.

These Minnesota experiments are not sufficiently extensive to be at all conclusive. Nevertheless they suggest that corncocks probably have a feeding value much greater than most farmers have thought.

Profitable to Use High Quality Seed

Difficult to Keep Various Strains From Crossing.

The farmer of today, knowing that his grain is graded at the elevator and that the higher it will grade the better the price, is paying more attention to the quality of his seed than ever before.

One of the difficulties in raising pure seed is the fact that plants of the grass family, to which corn and the small grains belong, produce pollen so profusely that it is extremely difficult to keep the various strains from crossing.

In order to keep strains pure they must be grown in fields widely separated from fields of other varieties. As hay fever sufferers know, this fertilizing dust from the grain plants is carried for great distances by the wind, making the pure seed grower's task a difficult one.

Pure bred seed naturally is higher in price than lower grades of seed but the product is correspondingly heavier and higher in grade. The grower of fine strains of grain seed usually plants his fields to smaller acreage than the grower of grain for the general market and must exercise much greater care to keep it from contact with other fields.

Plan for More Poultry and Production of Eggs

Should farmers plan to increase their poultry and egg production in the future?

The success of such a procedure is very doubtful, according to F. A. Gougler, director of the poultry and egg marketing department of the Illinois Agricultural association.

"Competition is becoming keen in this line," states Director Gougler, "and only efficient producers from now on will be able to make this business pay. I do not think that those producers of poultry who plan to expand their business or individuals who now expect to enter the poultry business should move cautiously.

"So far this year approximately 2,000,000 pounds more of dressed poultry have been shipped to the large consuming centers than the total receipts to August 1 of last year. To be added to this is the information that we now have 37,000,000 pounds of dressed poultry in cold storage as compared with 23,000,000 at this time last year, or an increase of 14,000,000 pounds. Thus we find a large carry-over facing us in the future.

"On considering the press egg marketing situation, we find that there is an increase of 118,000 more cases of eggs in cold storage than reported at this date last year and our export in eggs has decreased as much as 450,000 cases. The reduction in our egg export is partially due to the fact that European countries, who furnished an outlet for our surplus poultry products in the past, are now getting to the point in production where they can supply their own needs.

"Reports from Midwestern states indicate an increase in production this year resulting from the favorable spring season and it is doubtful if the consumption of poultry and eggs will show any great increase in the future."

Feed for Dry Cow

After the cow is dry, the feed should depend largely upon her condition. If she is poor in flesh the feed should be abundant enough so that she will be in reasonably good flesh at the time of calving.

FARM NOTES

Treat seed wheat with copper carbonate for smut prevention.

Sanitation is the best safeguard against hog cholera. Clean up the filth in the hog lot.

In horse measurements, three inches equals a palm, four inches a hand, and six inches a span.

It is claimed that the lower the curl in the horse's forehead, the better is his disposition.

Asparagus tops should be cut off and burned. Mark any bare places in the bed so that new roots may be set next spring.

Rhubarb should be well mulched with manure to insure protection through the winter and to provide fertile ground for next year's crop.

Waste apples may be fed to the hogs, and they help out in balancing the heavy corn ration for early fattening. In this way, their value is much greater than the usual returns from cider.

POULTRY

RIGHT ATTENTION TO MOLTING HENS

One of two things should be done with hens around molting time, says a raiser in an exchange. One is to let the older hens go before they fairly get to the time for shedding their feathers. They have now laid out their litter and must have some time to get through their "sick" period, during which they bring in nothing and keep eating. Every hen that is getting along in years should walk the plank, right now, unless she is especially valuable as a breeder.

For the younger birds a different course must be followed. The one great thing is to get the hens back to laying after the molt as soon as we can, and have them in good physical condition. For that reason our treatment must not be so radical, as some advise, but natural and steady.

Begin the treatment by cutting down on the food, especially the heavy, hearty food, for a few days. Meanwhile give the hens all possible chance to roam around at will. It may take some coaxing to get them to do this, but it is better for them than to dump about in the houses. The more the hen stirs around, the healthier she will be.

About the same ration may be given during the period of molting that is used when the hen is laying eggs regularly. But as the molt goes on, it is a good plan to add some oil meal, which enters into feather construction quite largely. Ten per cent of oil meal in a mash mixture, increasing to twice that, will do nicely. Watch the droppings and act accordingly. Don't give drugs; they are dangerous and may lead to trouble. Sunflower seeds are better than medicine. Be kind and patient with the molting birds.

The market demands plump, well-fattened turkeys and prime birds bring the best prices. In order to get the benefit of this extra price it is necessary that the turkeys intended for market be fattened by generous feeding for a period of three weeks to a month before marketing them.

Before deciding upon which birds are to be selected for fattening, select and mark those that are to be kept for breeding stock. To sell the biggest and best is sure to result in a falling off in the vigor of the flock and consequent losses.

What Pretty Girl Did for Sick Stomach

Miss E. Rich of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I don't know what the cause was, but every few days my stomach would feel all bloated up with gas, my appetite was poor and I felt sick to my stomach—to say nothing of headaches.

"I never thought of using Carter's Little Liver Pills until nothing seemed to help. After using Carter's I felt relieved at once—and now as soon as my stomach 'talks' back I answer with Carter's and have the last word."

English farmers get an average of 40 bu. Wheat per acre.

Michigan and Indiana only average about 15 bu. Yet English soils are no better than American.

The Englishman puts on lots of it, and does not starve his crop.

Don't Sow Wheat or Rye Unless You Sow Phosphate!

Michigan soils need Phosphate, it hastens maturity and fills out the grain.

Remember, our Acid Phosphate is nearly three times as strong as ordinary Acid Phosphate and is the best on the market.

It is also much cheaper to use than the 16 per cent Acid Phosphate that you are offered.

Use Our 44 per cent Acid Phosphate

It pays Big on grain. You can use it before or after the grain is planted.

WOULD YOU POISON YOUR STOCK?

We know what your answer will be, but do you know you are killing them just as surely when you neglect to give them the necessary minerals in their feed, as though you mixed poison in their rations? Virgin soil contains Calcium Phosphate, Calcium Carbonate, Sodium Chloride and Iodine; crops raised on this soil are rich in these mineral elements. Constant cropping has removed these minerals from the soil and it is necessary to add them in some other way to rations fed to your stock.

Hairless, weak, sway backed pigs with spread toes and knock-knees are some of the every day evidences of this mineral deficiency; while abortion, premature birth, goitre and such diseased conditions are frequently seen among cows that are deprived of these minerals. Body resistance is broken down and stock becomes a prey to parasitic enemies, both from outside invaders and those that are normal inhabitants of their body.

A few cents a month per head pays for either GRO-BONE or MOR-MILK mineral feeds. It adds dollars in profits.
