Rolla Eastman had the misfortune to lose one of his good work horses Saturday night.

Mrs. J. Ringle and daughter, Dorothy returned Monday from Monroe, Wis. where they were called by the death of Mrs. Ringle's father. They report the weather there much colder than in old Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Kesler were among the guests who helped celebrate Isaac Coffinger's birthday Jan 31. Although 80 years old he was as spry and happy as some of the younger ones and enjoyed the day hugely and here's hoping that many more Januaries will find Grandpa as well, happy and contented as he is today.

The dog slayer is again abroad in the land. This time he got Laddie Walters. Now then Lad was a fine collie and always at home and what glory any sneak can get out of poisoning him we can't understand.

Claude Daniels is able to be out again after a week with the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Markillie and mother made a business trip to the county seat Saturday.

Obituary

Mrs. Helen Weaver Hendrickson, daughter of Butler and Artilla Weaver, passed away at her home in Elmhurst, Ill., January 24, aged 26 years.

Her early years were spent with her parents here, where she made many friends. In 1908 she moved with her parents to Harbor Springs where she graduated at high school. After graduation she attended the Petoskey Normal, taught one year, then she studied piano at the American Conservatory of Music at Chicago, graduating with honors. She then taught piano at Ferris Institute for two years with great success.

In 1924 she was married to Carl Hendrickson of Grand Rapids and they moved to Illinois where her husband is music director at Todd Seminary at Woodstock.

She had the soul of a musician and made a host of friends wherever she lived. Her funeral was held from the home of her father at Harbor Springs, with burial beside her mother in Lakeview cemetery.

Lois Daratt

Attica Jan. 20.— Miss Lois Daratt died at 8 o'clock last evening at St. Jeromes hospital, Batavia where she had been ill for several weeks.

Miss Daratt has been with the family of the Rev. and Mrs. W. Raymond Brown of the Methodist Episcopal church for a number of years. She was 63 years old. She had lived at Attica since the Brown family moved there from Buffalo 3 years ago.

Funeral services will be held at Methodist Episcopal parsonage at Attica at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The burial will take place at the Webster cemetery following a short service at 1:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at the Webster chapel.

The Paving Question

As near as we can learn, the paving proposition is meeting with much favorable comment. Our residents realize that towns of this size have pavement and we should keep up, and they know that the time to get it at lowest price is when the state contract is being done.

We were interested this week in noting that Augusta, a town of about our size, has just bonded for $35,000 to install water works alone and with what we still owe on our water works and what this paving will cost we would be bonded for only a little more than half what they pay for water works alone.

Surely we can afford this improvement and it is more than worth while.

Gobles Split a Pair

Last Friday evening the Covert boys and girls came over to play the locals. The girls started first as usual and at the end of the first quarter the score was tie at four, then as usual our girls began to pep up and show their endurance and gradually gained until the final score was 25 to 9 in favor of the home team. Our girls are going faster every game and they look like state champions to us.

Our boys then took up the conflict and despite the fact that Geiger and Rendel had been sick for two days put up a real contest with the score tie at the end of the game. Extra time resulted in victory for the visitors by the score of 15 to 13.

Had our boys played in their usual form they would have won easily but they seemed unable to connect on free throws. We expect them to win at Covert next week Friday when a large delegation will accompany both teams if weather permits.

The yell group surely pepped up the male voices making a good showing for the first time this year.

Our teams will play Lawrence here Friday evening and they hope to win a pair.

Fortnightly Club

The Woman's Fortnightly Club met at the home of Mrs. McElheny Jan. 28, 1926.

Roll call was responded to by Lakes of Scotland.

Following the business meeting the program was given:

Song, "We'd Better Bid a Wee," Mrs. Gilchrist.

Orkney and Shetland Islands," Mrs. White.

Tourist Views of Scotland, Mrs. Travis.

Several on the program were kept at home on account of the weather so the program was unusually short. But a social hour was enjoyed by those present.

Adjourned to meet with Mrs. Smith, Feb. 11.

John P. Reigle For Treasurer

We, the undersigned friends of John Reigle, do hereby announce to the voters of Pine Grove township, that we will place his name before the Republican Caucus next March for your consideration, and we are sure this will meet with your approval. If he is nominated and elected we assure you that the office will be well cared for.

LINGERIE INSPIRES HOME SEWERS; RUGMAKING FAVORITE OCCUPATION

SINCE the weather man still threatens a below-zero mark for sections above the frostline, and since wintry winds still do fiercely blow, there is something not quite apropos in the suggestion that the home seamstress "make hay while the sun shines." Better tune the thought to the time and occasion in words to this effect—accomplish spring sewing while the snow flies. To the woman who feels the urge to make pretty clothes in readiness for the future outdoor months, there is no more inspirational theme than dainty lingerie. Therefore let deft fingers get busy with the making of the lovely underthings which can so easily and economically be fashioned at home.

The fairylike colored step-in combinations, gowns and costume slips which the mode bids us wear, furnish an excellent excuse for attending barthe opening words of George Eliot's fascinating tale of "Silas Marner." A narrative of modern times would probably substitute the words "frame and hook-needle" for spinning wheel, for "hooking" has become the popular needle art among present-day women of the household.

Perhaps the tremendous interest shown in this art of rug making is directly traceable to the fact that interior decoration in such a widely exploited theme these days. Anyway, rug making with a hooked needle has become a favorite occupation and pastime in the modern household. Especially does it find favor with those who are wondering just how to use to advantage the tedious hours between now and when spring comes with its allurements of outdoor sports.

for prime, vigorous health. Don't put off good health any longer, and for constipation take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

Thousands of women testify to the truth of this from their own experience.

"But constipation is serious, Grace"

"Not so long ago I was like you—headaches a good deal of the time, sleeping badly, and the least bit of housework tired me out. My complexion too, was bad.

"Finally, I went to see Dr. Farman. He showed me that it was constipation that was back of my troubles. He said that it was a very serious thing because poisons from clogged waste matter were picked up by the blood and carried to every body organ. And if I didn't correct it in time I might become a victim of one of those terrible organic diseases.

"He made me drop laxatives altogether, changed my diet, and put me on Nujol. I don't think I've ever felt better.

I sleep well, my headaches have disappeared, and you can see for yourself what an improvement there is in my skin. Nujol has done wonders for me."

Nujol Works Like Nature

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It is neither a food nor a medicine. It does not gripe. It is gentle and natural in its action and is prescribed by leading medical authorities.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and, thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly, in accordance with the directions on each bottle. As Nujol is not a laxative, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin the perfect health that is possible only when intestinal elimination is normal and regular.

gain sales where tinted volles, radium silks and printed crepes can be "bought for a song." However, remember this, fine ribbons, laces and materials, together with a will to do are not the only essentials for success in the making of fashionable underwear. No, indeed, one of the most important items in the list is a correct pattern.

The necessity for an accurate up-to-the-moment pattern is due to the fact that changing style conditions have had a marked effect upon lingerie modes. Extra fullness, for so long a subject taboo, has again become an important element in our undergarments as well as our frocks and coats. For instance, in days not far distant in the past, any tendency to fullness as is shown in the step-in chemise here pictured, would not have been tolerated. Today it is quite the proper thing to accomplish width in the shirt portion or about the hemline either by means of extra gathers, plaits or inset gores.

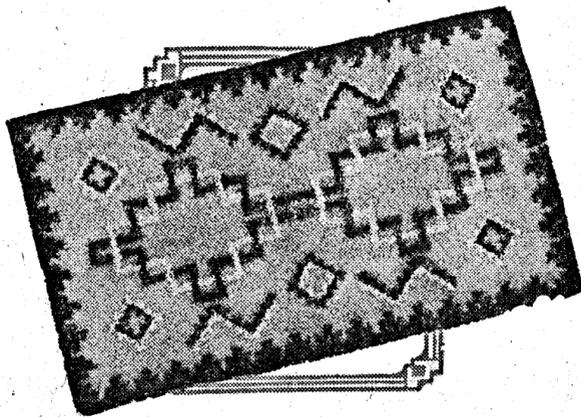

Remember also, that very colorful underwear is the promise for this spring and summer. Pastel-tinted colorful yarns such as are required for the making of hooked rugs. If one's living room is done in brown and old rose there are yarns to be had which will harmonize with this color scheme. Of course one will show the good taste of designing each handsome rug so that it will complement the environment for which it is intended.

Burlap comes stamped with any preferred design, from baskets of flowers to animal and bird figures. An especially contrived wooden frame is the only other requisite.

After the burlap has been stretched tight to the frame the first step is to hook the outline of the design. It is essential that one cut the loops as each row is finished to have the completed surface of the rug smooth and attractive. The background must be filled in last of all. An especially prepared shellac is obtainable for coating the back of the rug. The final act is to line the rug with bright felt or flannel.

One's effort need not be confined to the more imposing living-room rugs, volles, hand-embroidered are the vogue. These are daintily lace edged, and smocking, fagoting and hemstitching contribute a major share to their exquiteness.

Very pretty effects are attained by appliqueing squares, diamonds or circles of colored handkerchief linen or voile on backgrounds of contrasting color or white. This enables one to carry out the popular vogue of combining pastel tints. One can also scallop underthings, binding or piping the scallops with a contrasting color. Colored footing is a very pleasing substitute for lace edging.

In the days when the spinning wheels hummed busily in the farmhouse and when even great ladies clothed in silk and thread-lace had their toy spinning wheels—these are for lovely bath mats can be fashioned out of soft cotton instead of wool. Designs may be worked out in delft blue, yellow or old rose on white, or the idea may be reversed. That is, work out the pattern on the colored background.

Most every woman is confronted with the problem of what to do with old stockings, which one hesitates to throw away, and yet they require too much patience and valuable time to keep on mending. Here is a suggestion which is well worth following: Cut this cast-off hosiery around and around as if making extra fine carpet rags. This makes an excellent substitute for wool yarn in the hooking of rugs. Beautiful colors can be sustained by dyeing the stockings.

Lore for Dog-Owners

By Albert Payson Terhune

A TRICK WORTH REMEMBERING

With One Hand He Pulled Open a Corner of the Dog's Lips, Tilting the Head a Trifle Higher as He Did So.

THERE was a scene of conflict in the yard behind Judge Gray's rambling big bungalow. The judge was elderly. But he was painfully new, in his role of dog owner. Less than a month earlier he had bought his first dog—a dashingly handsome young airedale.

Old Man Negley was trimming the bungalow's front edge when the sounds of strife from the back yard drew him thither. He found the little judge trying to hold the stalwart airedale by one hand while with the other he attempted to pour a big dose of castor oil down the dog's throat.

Naturally, the airedale was not anxious to swallow this nauseating dose. Every time the judge released his hold on the collar in order to force open the jaws the dog would wriggle free and had to be cornered.

At first the pint bottle of castor oil had been full. Now it was half empty. But no drop of the greasy, yellow fluid had trickled down the airedale's pink throat. Indeed, most of the oil adorned his owner's hands and clothes and the dog's head and the surrounding grass. "Hold on, there, judge!" hailed Negley. "You're wasting a lot of good slapstick comedy when there's no camera here to snap you. And you're wasting good castor oil, too. At this rate the bottle will be empty before you can get any of it down him. Like me to help you?"

"I'd like you to shoot this dog and all the other dogs on earth!" fumed the judge, relinquishing the bottle to the old man. "The brute was off his feed today. I remembered what you said about giving a tablespoonful of castor oil to any dog that didn't seem just well. So I tried to. I'd rather take the contract to dose all the patients in the city hospital."

"The patients would know what you were trying to do," suggested Old Man Negley. "They'd know it was for their good and they'd gulp the stuff down, no matter how bad it tasted. This puppy doesn't know why you're giving him medicine. All he knows is that you're trying to force him to swallow some nasty-tasting and nasty-smelling liquid that he hates. So of course he tries to get out of taking it. Let's see; you said something about a tablespoon, didn't you? Where is it? Did he swallow it?"

Search revealed the spoon in the middle of the bush, whither a toss of the dog's head had flung it as it was inserted between his jaws.

"Here," said Old Man Negley, filling the spoon with the viscid yellow oil. "Just hang onto this a second and pass it to me when I tell you to."

He held the indignant dog between his knees, the airedale's neck pinioned thus by a knee on either side. Then, with one hand he pulled open a corner of the dog's lips, tilting the head a trifle higher as he did so. He paid no heed to the fact that the airedale's jaws were locked shut. He made no attempt to open them.

Judge Gray saw that the opening of the lip corner revealed a small open space where the back teeth of the jaws did not quite come together. It was an ideal opening through which to pour medicine without forcing the stubborn jaws apart.

Old Man Negley reached for the spoon with his free hand. Holding the dog's head firmly between his knees he poured the oil carefully in through the opening in the lip-corner. The airedale gulped and tried to shade his head. But the head was too tightly held. Dropping the spoon, the old man lifted the dog's chin a little higher so that the oil would roll down inside the mouth to the throat. Thus he held him until presently a gulp proved that the unhappy airedale had swallowed the dose which pressed against his palate.

"There!" remarked Old Man Negley. "That's perfectly simple isn't it? He swallowed it without having to open his jaws. He swallowed it because he had to swallow it. It wasn't brutal and it didn't hurt him; and it's all down. Not a drop is spilled. Remember to do as I did next time you have to give medicine to a dog. No use in yanking his jaws apart or having a squabble with him. It is easy to give medicine to any dog if you'll do it as I just did.

"By the way, castor oil can never harm your dog, even if you give him a little more than a tablespoonful. An overdose isn't poisonous. And you were wise to give it to him when he was off his feed.

"But don't be in a hurry to give any other kind of medicine, besides castor oil, to a dog just because he doesn't care to eat all his dinner one day. There is an even chance that nothing at all is the matter with him. I don't mean if he mopes and his appetite falls off for some time, but if he refuses to clean up his dinner plate on any single day.

"A dog has lots more sense that way than we humans have. If he feels out of sorts or if his last meal has disagreed with him, he will have the dog's head and the surrounding grass. "Hold on, there, judge!" hailed Negley. "You're wasting a lot of good slapstick comedy when there's no camera here to snap you. And you're wasting good castor oil, too. At this rate the bottle will be empty before you can get any of it down him. Like me to help you?"

"More people and more animals are killed by overeating than by under-eating. A dog knows, by instinct, usually, when he doesn't need food and when more food will disagree with him. So he leaves it alone, unless we humans coax and tease him into eating it.

"He tries the starvation cure. He gives his stomach a good rest till it is ready to handle another meal.

"We humans get indigestion. What do we do? Instead of starving ourselves until we are well again we try to find some appetizing food that won't disagree with us. We don't give our digestion a rest and a chance to get well. We pile more work on it. Then we wonder why we don't get cured up faster.

"A big doctor told me once that a 24-hour fast and a quiet day in bed will generally stave off almost any threatened illness and will brace up the whole system.

"A dog is wise enough to know that without paying a doctor's fee to find it out. He'll stop eating and he'll sleep a lot. Just the same, it's a wise precaution to give him castor oil at such a time. It would be a wiser precaution if we humans would take it, too, when we're out of sorts. But there's nobody to force it down a human's throat; and most of us haven't the pluck to take it of our own accord. Dogs are more fortunate, that way, than we are."

Would Seem That Fate Appoints Time to Die

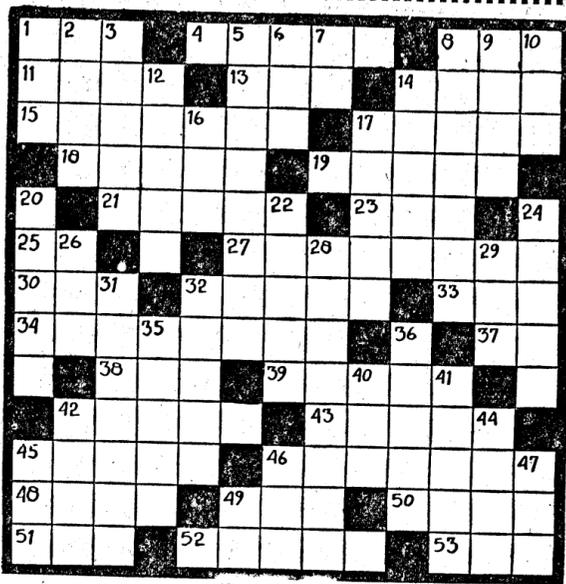

Lord Cardigan—human swordblade and dardevil adventurer—led the immortal charge of the Light brigade, at the battle of Balaklava. Across a mile and a half of open ground he galloped at the head of his cavalrmen, with Russian batteries and sharpshooters tearing ragged gaps in the ranks.

He rode back with his survivors, under the murderous enflading fire of the Russians, across the same mile and a half of unprotected ground. He escaped safely from those two ordeals and the intervening saber battle. His men had been slain by the hundred. He was unhurt.

By the way, a few years earlier he had fought a duel—he had fought several before then—in which he killed his opponent, a noted duelist, and escaped without a wound. He was in battle after battle. Nothing could hurt him.

A decade or so after Balaklava, Lord Cardigan was jogging peacefully along a quiet English lane when his horse stumbled and threw him. He was killed at once.—Albert Payson Terhune, in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

THEN AND NOW

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

BUXTON is sure that the young people of today are going pretty rapidly to the bow-wows. He had said so to me repeatedly, and, having no children of my own, I should, of course, be the more influenced by what he says who has four.

In confirmation of his statements, he cites the case of Buxton Junior who had the night before been to a dance, and who did not get home until it was almost time for Buxton himself to arise and address himself to the waning fires in the furnace. The dance had been at a town sixty miles away, and the distance had been negotiated, as they say in the newspapers, in the family car which, when stepped on properly, will do that distance in something less than an hour if the road is clear. Buxton has himself frequently demonstrated this fact in his own driving.

The young people had started out early, had had dinner at the Orlando hotel at six, had danced until midnight and had then driven home. It was an entirely proper party, as things go these days, the road was smooth and open and it didn't take long to cover the sixty miles, or at least it didn't seem long. To Buxton, however, who had been used to a buggy when he was in love, the driving of one hundred and twenty miles to and from an evening party was beyond endurance.

I had known him when he was young, and if I had cared to do so, I could have recalled a party which he went to forty years ago or so. There were fifteen miles to drive in an open buggy across the wide prairies and along devious and ill-marked roads. They started social functions early in those days, and though there was no formal dinner and no dress clothes worn, they got well under way before eight o'clock. Do the best he could, it took twice as long to drive the fifteen miles as it had taken his son to motor the sixty.

The party did not stop until some time after midnight, and the stars were out and the full moon high in the heavens and the air was soft and balmy as he drove home, and the girl at his side had a sweet face and a pleasant line of talk, so that there was no unseemly haste in getting back even though some pretty hard work stared him in the face for next day. If it took two hours to go to the party it took at least three to come back, for the horses unaged amble along very quietly. But Buxton had forgotten all this, and his son of whom he was complaining had never known about it.

Our fathers thought us as wild and revolutionary and untamed as we consider the present generation. It has always been so. These reckless young people of ours in twenty years will no doubt be telling their children what a quiet conventional youth they spent, and they will believe it, too.

WILD RUMORS THAT STIRRED UP PANIC

Since his death, Lenin is growing in size and stature. A German paper reports that in some peasant districts his name is pronounced with the veneration of a saint and remarks that such legends as are being interwoven with the name of Lenin could only originate on Russian soil. We find that under the glare of Prussian enlightenment of this century strange legends sprung up in Germany. As for instance this case: In 1895 the Anthropological society of western Prussia instituted a series of investigations, in the course of which the complexion and the color of the hair and eyes of the children at the public schools were to be noted, in order to determine the prevalence of certain racial traits. The most extravagant rumors circulated in the districts of Dantzic, Thorn, Kulm, all the way to Posen. Parents, seized by unreasoning terror, sent their children in great numbers to Russia. One rumor said that the King of Prussia had lost 1,000 blond children to the sultan over a game of cards; another, that the Russian government had sold 60,000 pretty girls to an Arab prince, and to save them from the sad fate conjectured to be in store for them, all the pretty girls at Dubna were straightway married off.—Pierre Van Paasen, in the Atlanta Constitution.

FARM POULTRY

CARE REQUIRED IN PICKING BREEDERS

With the hatching season soon to get into full swing, poultrymen are observing their breeders and their surroundings. For weight, the breeders should meet the standard requirements for that breed. Leghorn hens, says W. H. Allen, poultry specialist at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, New Brunswick, should weigh four pounds, and the American breeds at least one pound heavier.

Handle every bird and see that it is free from foreign color and disqualifications such as side sprigs on the comb, feathers on the shanks, crooked toes and poor tail carriage. Then treat the bird for lice.

Good size, health, and vigor, as well as weight, must be observed in the individuals that go to make up the breeding pen. Depth from the center of the back to the front of the keel bone, a long keel bone, and a distance of three inches between the keel bone and the pelvic bones, together with a long, wide, flat back are the essential qualifications for which to look. These factors apply to the males of the breeding pen as well as to the females. A male bird with a pedigree is worth twice as much as one having the same qualifications but no pedigree. The lighter breeds require only one male to a pen of 15 breeders, and the heavier breeds require one with every ten.

Breeders need more exercise than do the layers. Allow at least 4 square feet of floor space for every bird. See that the litter is deep and that the flock is kept hungry enough to work for the scratch grain. Range should be provided when it is possible. Feed plenty of green feed, such as sprouted oats and cabbages. Fresh air is another essential. Don't close the curtains unless it is freezing weather, stormy, or the wind is blowing from the front of the pen.

Less than 50 per cent production gives best results. Collect the eggs often and do not hold longer than a week in a dry room before setting them.

Treating the Fowls for Diseases During Winter

If the flock develops colds, or kindred diseases first give a dose of epsom salts, about one pound to each 100 birds. The salts can be dissolved in water and the water used in the mash. Use about a pound to three gallons of water.

Then treat the individual birds by painting their eyes and nostrils with iodine or a 20 per cent solution of argyrol. If there is canker in the mouth, remove it and paint the spots with iodine, or if there are pox scabs on the comb, remove them and treat the same way.

Very little is known about the control of chickenpox, roup, and canker, but the main is in preventive measures. One way to prevent the spread of these diseases is to keep visitors out of the poultry house.

Remove sick birds from the flock when they show the first symptoms of sickness. One sick bird may contaminate the whole flock.

Cull Flock Rigidly at Beginning of the Year

One of the largest costs of running a poultry farm is the death rate among the laying hens. One authority figures this loss at 1 per cent a month or 12 per cent a year, calculated on the number of hens on hand from a given point to the corresponding period the following year. This loss will not take care of an epidemic if it hits the flock.

It can be readily seen that the wise thing to do is to cull out very rigidly at the beginning of the laying year, and carry only the most healthy and vigorous hens through the winter.

Feed Hens Liberally

In a laying pullet feed will pass through the crop, stomach, gizzard, and five feet of intestines in less than four hours. This fact shows the necessity of feeding liberally late in the evening and early in the morning throughout the winter to shorten the night as much as possible and increase production.

Poultry Facts

- Gather eggs at least twice a day.
- Have sufficient nests clean and disinfected.
- Hens ought to have a dust box to help them keep free from vermin.
- Birds that show signs of weakness should be removed. Pale and shrunken combs are good indicators of weakness.
- The birds need a constant supply of oyster shell, grit, minerals and charcoal, readily accessible or mixed in the dry mash.
- Egg production depends upon two factors: (1) The inborn capacity of the hen for egg production, and (2) the conditions to which the hen is subjected.

She Produced the Proof

By G. B. BEAL and J. TERRILL

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"DID you want to see me?" She opened the stage door and stood there, her abbreviated skirts revealing a well matured form.

"You are—Miss Gray?" questioned the rather dignified, middle-aged business man.

"Yes, I am Margery Gray. And you," glancing at the card she held.

"You're John Stillson?" "Won't you come up to my dressing room?"

"Am I permitted?" "Oh, yes. You aren't dangerous—not if I vouch for you. It's right this way."

He followed his guide through the strange maze into a narrow, unfurnished room.

"And now—I suppose it was business that made you brave the back stage of a burlesque theater?"

He was oddly ill at ease. "I had no idea that Miss Gray was—the Margery Gray I grew up with," he said at last.

"It makes my position difficult. You see—it's about my boy. . . ."

"Your boy?" she echoed, at a loss.

"Yes, yes—my boy. He's been following you around the past month."

"But really, John—I don't know your boy?"

"Well, I dare say you know his touring car better than you do his name. They call him Reggie."

"Reggie Stillson—why of course! And what did you want to say to me about Reggie?"

"Just this, Margie—I'm not one of those narrow-minded old chaps who think all stage people are crooked, bad, immoral. I know better than that—please understand me."

"I do, John. But what about the boy?"

A new voice broke in before she could reply. "Margie—there's a guy out here waiting to see you."

"Tell him to wait a minute, Bobby. I guess that's Reggie now, John."

The man was obviously upset. "Good heavens! He mustn't see me here!"

"I'm afraid you'll have to do the undignified ducking act, then. Here—hide behind this cretonne curtain. Possibly I can get rid of him without his knowing you're here."

"I say, Margie—am I on the blacklist today? I've been waiting out here for a century or so ago. You can't be dressing, because you haven't any change now."

A hurried glance in the cracked mirror, a deft manipulation of a rabbit's foot, and Margie spoke again.

"Come on in, Reggie. I'm dying to see you, myself. But I've got only a minute for you."

"Well, I like that. I think you owe me a few minutes after this wait."

"Let's not talk about what we owe each other, Reggie. Life's too short for that. Tell me how you happen to be in this town, anyway."

"I live here, but that doesn't matter. I'll always be where you are."

"Great, Reggie, great!"

"Aw, quit kidding me. You know, I'm in love with you and I want to marry you."

"All right, I'll take you seriously this time, and I'll answer you seriously. You couldn't make me happy."

"That's not so—I'd give you the finest home and anything you'd want."

"You couldn't, boy—you haven't got it. And you'd never understand. You've never stood in the wing's back stage and heard the show go wrong."

heard them rustle their programs out front, scuffle their feet, and cough—seen your friends come off stage with the sweat pouring off their faces, wornout with the effort to please—had someone come up to you and say 'go to it, girlie; make 'em like you. And you shake down your clothes, take one last scrape at the pumice and you go out there and you fight, and fight. And then you get 'em—and they laugh, and applaud, and they like you, and want more of you. That's living, boy. And you couldn't give it to me!"

Reggie stared at her hopelessly.

"Do you know how old I am?" asked Margie suddenly.

"Sure—about my age. Eighteen or twenty."

"I'm nearly forty. You're a nice boy, Reggie. Now run back home and forget poor little me. Or—no, don't forget me. Remember me, and tell your children how near you came to marrying an actress, and what a good sport she was. Goody-by."

He tried to say it, but couldn't quite manage it. When she had closed the door on Reggie's retreating figure, the elder Stillson emerged from behind the curtain. "You know—that's a nice thing you did for my son," he said, a bit unsteadily. "But tell me—did you mean all that about the theater?"

She nodded. "It's what keeps us everlastingly at it, John."

"And—that's the reason you wouldn't marry my son?"

"I beg your pardon if I'm intruding, Marge," a deep voice broke in suddenly, and into the narrow confines of the dressing room stepped a well-groomed if over-painted man in full evening dress.

"Oh, that's all right, Joe. You aren't intruding. No, John—that wasn't the only reason why I refused to marry your son. The real reason is my husband here."

Whimsical Whistler

"Many things Whistler did," Sir Edmund Gosse told Walter Tittle, the portraitist, "he did for effect only, angling in his sleeve if he succeeded in hoodwinking his auditors. One day in his studio he languidly approached his easel, drew a single line on a canvas, with a movement of exquisite grace, put down the brush, and said: 'That is enough work for one day.'"—Boston Transcript.

Makes Books Transparent

By means of "invisible light," Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose, a distinguished scientist of India, in a recent demonstration before a group of scientists, proved that a heavy book can be made transparent. Pretty Green Roads

Minor eye troubles resulting from the reflected glare from gray or white light roads in England are afflicting a great number of drivers, a British official declares, and recommends that green coloring matter be mixed with the surfacing material to curb the evil. The effects are said to be most pronounced among drivers who are compelled to gaze at the road intently.

Sassafras in Medicine

The roots of sassafras very early in American history became an important article of medicine. It is sometimes called the "ague tree" as a decoction of its bark was supposed to cure that disease. Sassafras tea, an infusion of the young shoots and roots, has long been a favorite remedy for colds and a tonic, being a sudorific and a stimulant.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Votes U. S. Into the World Court, but With Strong Reservations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BY A vote of 70 to 17 the senate has decided that the United States shall adhere to the permanent court of international justice, better known as the world court. Thus the long fight over this question has come to an end and the administration forces have triumphed with the assistance of all but three of the Democratic senators. However, it is a modified victory for the proponents of the world court, for America's entry is so hedged about with reservations that it may be many months or even years before it actually is a member, and there is no certainty that it will ever be a party to a case before the tribunal.

In the first place, it is provided that all other member nations must accept the American reservations, and the process of obtaining these acceptances may be a long one. Refusal by any one nation, no matter how insignificant, invalidates the senate action. Then—and this is especially important—one of the reservations provides that recourse to the court for the settlement of difficulties between the United States and any other state can be had only by agreement through a treaty between the parties in dispute. Since every treaty is subject to senate approval, this means that no cause involving the United States can be submitted to the court without the approval of the senate by a two-thirds vote.

Five other reservations were adopted almost unanimously by the senate, as follows: That adherence to the world court "shall not be taken to involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the League of Nations or the assumption of any obligations by the United States under the treaty of Versailles."

Permitting the United States to participate in the council and assembly of the League of Nations equally with all other nations in the election of judges of the world court.

That the United States should pay a fair share of the world court's expenses by congressional appropriation. That the United States may at any time withdraw from the world court and that the statute of the court shall not be amended without the consent of the United States.

That the court shall render no advisory opinion, except publicly and after due notice to all states adhering to the court and after opportunity for hearing any state concerned, and that the court shall not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for any advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest.

These reservations were put in their final shape by Democratic leaders and John Bassett Moore, the present American judge in the world court. All others which were offered by opponents of the resolution were rejected.

It is worth while recording the names of those who voted against the resolution on the final ballot. They were: Republicans: Borah, Brookhart, Fernald, Frazier, Harrell, Johnson, La Follette, Moses, Nye, Pine, Robinson (Ind.), Schall, Watson and Williams. Democrats: Blease, Reed (Mo.), Farmer-Labor: Shipstead.

Just before the final vote was taken Senator Johnson of California had a last word to say, a dramatic warning to his colleagues that they were taking the first step into the League of Nations, altering the traditional policies of the United States, and "cutting loose to sail on an uncharted sea."

Senator Borah, leader of the opposition to the world court, declares the fight has only begun and that he and his associates intend to launch a movement at once to get the country out of the court and will make this an issue in the election of senators next November. He says he does not see how we are going to remain outside of the league if we stay in the court.

HAVING disposed of the world court matter, the senate on Thursday began consideration of the tax reduction bill, which was made its unfinished business so that it could be kept continuously before the chamber. Chairman Smoot of the finance committee hopes to have the measure passed by February 10, but certain of the western senators have promised a long fight against the provisions for repeal of the inheritance tax and of publicity for income tax payments. Norris of Nebraska has offered an amendment providing that returns "shall be open to examination and inspection as other public records under the same rules and regulations as may govern the examination of public documents generally." The effect of this would be not only to permit public inspection of amounts paid by taxpayers, but also to throw the returns, which at present are secret documents, open to any one desirous of perusing them.

WITH only three votes against it, the administration Haugen measure establishing a co-operative marketing division in the Department of Agriculture was passed by the house. The big fight in congress is over the Dickinson farm surplus bill. Experts are far apart in their opinions of the wisdom of this measure. Such agriculturists as Frank O. Lowden are warm in approval, while many trade economists, notably John W. O'Leary, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, feel that it is in effect a price-fixing measure and would prove disastrous to those whom it is intended to benefit.

Representatives of the eleven states that compose the corn belt met in Des Moines Thursday to formulate a relief plan designed to place agriculture on a money-making parity with manufacturing and business enterprises. This plan embraces three main features: An export corporation to dispose of surplus agricultural products; provision by congress for a federal farm board to stabilize agriculture and put it on a parity with other business; removal of the pure food law discriminations against corn sugar. An executive committee of two from each of the eleven states was named to draft the plan into a measure and to push its passage in congress.

TERRIFIC gales swept the north Atlantic last week and all the liners were delayed. The storm took its toll of lives when the British freighter Laristan foundered off Halifax, twenty-five members of her crew being drowned. Another British freighter, the Antioch, was disabled by the tremendous seas and the United States liner President Roosevelt, commanded by Captain Fried, stood by for four days, making repeated efforts to save the crew of twenty-five. The heroic work of Fried and his men was finally successful, though two of the rescuers lost their lives. Capt. Herbert Hartley of the Leviathan said the gale was the worst he had seen in thirty years.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE formally approved the court-martial sentence of Col. William Mitchell, but changed it so the colonel should receive half pay and his allowances "during the pleasure of the President." Two days later Colonel Mitchell resigned from the army, and it was believed his resignation would be accepted. It is understood Mitchell will go on the lecture platform to continue his campaign for development of aviation, but many persons believe he will find it difficult, as a civilian, to hold the public interest.

CHANCELLOR LUTHER presented to the German reichstag the names of his new cabinet members and an outline of their policies, but was met with grim silence except for the howling of Communist deputies. The Nationalists objected to his omission of the conditions they demand as the price of Germany's entry into the League of Nations. The Socialists were disappointed by the vagueness of his reference to German membership in that body. They were also annoyed still more by his rejection of a popular referendum of the claims of the Hohenzollerns and other former reigning families against the republic. Next day, announcing himself as absolutely in favor of fulfillment of the Locarno pact, Doctor Luther issued an ultimatum to the warring factions, demanding a vote of confidence for his government. He made more definite his recommendation of membership in the League and thereby gained the silent support of the Socialists, but even so it was evident that the fate of the cabinet hinged on the chance absence of a very few deputies.

The reichstag gave Luther his vote of confidence by 160 to 150, those who abstained from voting numbered 181, mostly Socialists. This slight majority was obtained only after President von Hindenburg had threatened to dissolve the reichstag if opposition continued.

Wednesday was the sixty-seventh birthday of the former kaiser, and the Berlin Fascists who celebrated the anniversary engaged in a sanguinary battle with the Communists who were burning Wilhelm in effigy. The police were forced to fire on the mob, wounding many.

VISCOUNT TAKAOKI KATO, premier of Japan, is dead of influenza, and political conditions in Tokyo are chaotic as a result. R. Wakatsuki is acting premier. It is expected the diet will be dissolved shortly. Kato was one of his country's most accomplished statesmen.

ALL the civilized world, with the possible exception of Germany and her late allies, joined the Belgians in mourning the death of Cardinal Mercier, whose heroic stand against the invaders of his country gave him lasting fame. On Thursday Belgium paid formal tribute to the memory of her beloved primate and the king as chief mourner walked through the streets of Brussels after the coffin while minute guns boomed and massed army bands played funeral marches. With King Albert marched Prince Leopold, the heir apparent, and Marshal Foch, generalissimo of the allied armies in the war; and in the long procession were the diplomatic representatives of many nations. Services were held in the Cathedral of St. Michel and St. Gudule where the body of the prelate rested on a magnificent catafalque. On Friday the body was taken back to Malines and buried with great pomp beneath the altar of the Cathedral there.

ITALY, by what some correspondents describe as strong arm methods involving threats against peace in the Near East, has persuaded Great Britain to grant her very easy terms in the funding of her war debt—better terms than were obtained from the United States. Count Volpi and Winston Churchill have signed the agreement by which the Italian debt is settled for about one-sixth of its value.

Premier Mussolini and his government are being roundly abused by the Germans for their repressive measures in south Tyrol, where they are determined to Italianize the German inhabitants. The latest decree orders the Italianization of all German family names that were originally Italian.

TWO Spanish aviators started last week from near Cadiz to fly in a seaplane to Buenos Aires, Argentina, and before this reaches the reader they may have accomplished the feat. Their first hop took them to the Canary Islands, and from there they flew to the Cape Verde Islands. The next hop was to be 1,432 miles to Fernando Noronha Island, or possibly 275 miles further to Pernambuco.

FRANCE believes that investigation of the great French franc forgery plot in Hungary will reveal that it can be traced to German monarchist sources, and therefore Premier Briand demanded that French officials should be permitted to participate in the police cross-examinations of the plotters, among whom are princes, nobles and high politicians. The Hungarian government made a show of yielding reluctantly, but the well informed said that the incident was really a victory for Premier Count Bethlen, since it afforded him an opportunity to bring about a full exposure of the conspiracy without incurring blame from the extremists who have been seeking to unseat him.

Diseases of Wheat Cause of Big Loss

"Foot-Rot" Ailments Are Widespread in America.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Among the various diseases of wheat which annually cause considerable loss to wheat growers is the class known as "foot-rot" diseases. These diseases are rather widespread in America, are caused by plant parasites or fungi, and under certain conditions are difficult to distinguish from each other. They are especially similar as regards general field appearances, such as spotting, yellowing, stunting, and other visible symptoms of disease. Some of the better understood foot-rot diseases are the take-all disease of wheat caused by the organism Ophiobolus graminis, and the foot-rot caused by Heminthosporium sativum. These two are discussed in Department Bulletin No. 1347, which has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Although further study is required before these diseases are fully understood, it has been possible during the past five years to obtain data and make observations which assist considerably in the matter of clarifying some of the problems involved in the general problem of wheat foot-rots. On the basis of present knowledge it is clear that the control of the foot-rots depends not on one method, but on several. Seed treatments and the selection of clean seed will tend to prevent the spread and increase of parasites.

A copy of the bulletin may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Dry Mash Is Necessary for Production of Eggs

In order to obtain satisfactory egg production at this period of the year, it is necessary that dry mash be fed in open hoppers continuously. This may be a commercial mash, or it may be mixed at home. A fairly satisfactory home-made mash is one made up of equal parts by weight, of bran, middlings, corn meal, ground oats, and meat scrap, with one pound of salt, and two pounds of dried marl or ground limestone added to each one hundred pounds of mash.

In addition to the dry mash fed in open hoppers continuously, the birds should be fed a scratch grain made of equal parts by weight of whole wheat and cracked corn, or if oats have been grown on the farm, oats may be added, feeding a scratch of two parts corn, one wheat, and one oats. If barley is obtainable, barley may be substituted for half of the corn, making a scratch grain of two parts wheat, one part corn, and one part barley. Buckwheat, sunflower and seed, kafir milo, and other grains may be added in small quantities not to exceed 10 or 15 per cent of the ration.

Protection for Animals During Winter Weather

One of the reasons back of emaciated and thriftless live stock is the fact that it does not have good shelter during the period of winter storms—and especially is this true of cows, hogs and sheep, which so often are compelled to protect themselves as best they can. If during the fall, months farmers would cut a few poles and build sheds that open to the south and then cover them over with old straw or fodder, a cheap protection of this kind can be provided at a cost that involves little more than the labor expended upon it. Wherever possible such makeshift sheds should be erected on the southern brow of a hillside, for this affords double protection against the wintry northern winds. There is something wrong with a farmer who can sit contentedly by the side of his warm stove on a cold winter's night and yet know that his live stock is exposed to its merciless rigors.

Treating Oats to Prevent Smut Is Very Easy Job

Treating oats to prevent smut often means the difference between a good crop and a poor one. Mix one pint of formaldehyde with one pint of water. This will treat 50 bushels of grain. Spray the solution on the grain as it is being shoveled over, taking care that the mist is well distributed. One stroke of a hand-sprayer gives enough mist for each shovelful of grain. When all the grain is treated shovel into a pile and carefully cover for five hours. Sow immediately or allow to air thoroughly before sacking or storing in bins. Disinfect sack, bins, or drills with the same strength solution.

Best Quality of Cream Is of Much Importance

It should be the aim of every farmer selling cream to produce the best quality of product possible. The day is coming when cream will be paid for on the basis of its grade. Good butter cannot be made from poor cream, and the market is demanding more and better butter each year. Cleanliness of the farm separator and all utensils coming in contact with the milk and cream are vitally important. Freshly skimmed, sweet cream should be immediately placed in scalded cans and cooled to a temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

DAIRY FACTS

IMPROVEMENT MADE IN MILK MACHINES

The present-day milking machines are such an improvement over the old-time machines that they may now be considered beyond the experimental stage. When first put on the market, they naturally had a number of serious imperfections. These have been almost entirely overcome by the inventive ingenuity of man, so that today it may safely be said that the most modern of them are a success.

The two chief stumbling blocks were keeping the machine clean and avoiding injury to the udder of the cow. It is true that in the hands of a careless operator they are still subject to criticism along these lines, but it is the fault of the operator, and not of the machine. It will no doubt always require more intelligence and judgment to operate them than is generally displayed by a large percentage of our hand-milkers.

It would be difficult to foretell what the future has in store for the dairyman with the milking machine to do his milking. Nevertheless, the most difficult problem, that of hired help, should be at least partially solved. If there is any one drawback to dairy farming, it is this one of keeping competent and reliable help. All other irksome farm operations seem to have been benefited by mechanical invention, but milking, the most despised of them all, seems either to have been neglected, or to have been the more difficult to solve. Men hate the monotony and regularity of hand-milking. Perhaps mechanical milking should prove more popular, as the amount of time and physical exertion is greatly decreased. Already a great many have been installed in some of our best dairies, and their success there is being watched with much interest by farmer dairymen.—H. E. Dvoracek, Colorado Agricultural College.

Little Extra Grain Will Give Increased Returns

A little thought to the feeding of fall-freshened cows will be well repaid in increased returns. Too many cows freshen in poor condition and cannot be expected to yield a good return. To begin with, a dry period of least six weeks is essential to enable the cow to build a reserve. How the cow is fed during this interval will largely determine her production after she freshens. A little extra grain at this time means dividends later. Freshening in good flesh the cow starts her lactation at a big advantage.

Production can be held up with economy by supplementing pasture with ground barley, equal parts ground oats and corn chop. This grain should be fed at the rate of one to five pounds of milk as long as the pasture is good. Don't expect the milk flow to increase materially, but it will hold up over a much longer period of time when prices are good, and therefore more than pay for the grain consumed.

Cost of Wintering Young Heifer Varies Greatly

The feed required in raising as well as the cost of this and other items of expense will vary considerably with different localities. In winter there is no better ration than legume hay, silage and sufficient grain to keep them thrifty and growing vigorously, without becoming too fat. The ration should supply plenty of protein and hence unless a liberal amount of good clover or alfalfa hay is fed, a grain allowance in this element should be supplied. Heifers over ten months of age, especially of the larger breeds, may make satisfactory gains on silage and legume hay alone if of good quality. Results of tests conducted at experiment stations give yearling heifers as requiring from 700 to 800 pounds of hay along with skim milk and other feeds necessary to keep the animals in a growing thrifty condition. In regard to the cost of wintering the heifers this will vary according to the conditions in the neighborhood, such as quantity and costs of feeds and other factors.

Dairy Facts

Regularity in feeding and milking is essential to profitable dairying.

Many an epidemic of diphtheria, scarlet fever, and typhoid fever has been traced to a case of illness on the dairy farm.

The various dairy utensils used by the dairyman are probably one of the most important sources of the bacterial contamination of milk.

Adequate ventilation removes foul air, removes excessive moisture and furnishes a supply of pure, fresh air. All three are vital to the welfare of the herd.

In order to do its work properly, the cream separator must be level and must be securely fastened to its foundation, the bearings must be well lubricated with the right kind of oil, and no accumulation of dirt can be permitted to collect in the working parts.

FIND DIRECTORY SET UP BY MARK TWAIN

Author Listed Self as "Antiquarian" in 1856.

Keokuk, Iowa.—A rare piece of Americana—a copy of the Keokuk city directory of 1856, part of which was hand set by Mark Twain and in which he listed himself as an "antiquarian"—recently was found and subsequently lost in a curious manner.

The Iowa State Insurance company acquired and incorporated in its office building an adjoining structure in which Orion Clemens, brother of the humorist, conducted a printing establishment in Keokuk in the late '50s.

The find was made by a workman, who, not knowing of the book's sentimental and bibliophilic value, examined it casually, and then tossed it aside in a pile of rubbish.

Although the building that housed the old Clemens printing shop virtually has been rebuilt, the room in which Mark Twain worked has been left untouched.

While still in his teens, Mark left Hannibal, Mo., where he had been working on Orion's newspaper, for a tour of the East, rejoining the family at Muscatine, Iowa.

While still in his teens, Mark left Hannibal, Mo., where he had been working on Orion's newspaper, for a tour of the East, rejoining the family at Muscatine, Iowa.

Clemens was just approaching his majority, and with the urge of youth, he wanted to see the world.

The idea was to write travel letters of his journey for the Keokuk Daily Post. George Rees, editor, offered him $5 each for the articles.

Clemens contributed three letters to the Post, couched in the exaggerated dialect considered humorous in that day, speaking in one of them of a plan to write a book of his journey.

Message Undelivered, Couple Sues for $1,801

Beaumont, Texas.—Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Mulford joined in a suit against the Western Union Telegraph company to collect $1,801, of which $1,800 represents exemplary damages because of the defendant's asserted failure to deliver a birthday message from Mulford to his wife.

The message, it is asserted, was filed at Waxahachie, Texas, on July 20, 1925. It was charged in the petition that upon his arrival home a few days afterward he found his wife "cool, dejected, thoughtful and brooding, contrary to her usual sunny, cheerful, friendly and affectionate nature and disposition."

Alcohol Given as Cause of Leaves Turning Red

New York.—Alcohol, which long has been blamed for coloring the human nose with a roseate tint, is now put forth by sober scientists as the reason why leaves turn red in the autumn.

S. G. Hibben, expert of the Westinghouse Lamp company, who has been delving into the effects of light on plants, said that the old theory that foliage changed color and dropped off because of winter's chill touch was erroneous.

With the shutting off of the sunlight growth is retarded, food is stored in the roots and trunk and fermentation finally begins to take place in the leaves.

WAR ATROCITY TALES SPIKED

Denied by Former Publicity Chief of A. E. F.

Washington.—Flat denial that the American army authorities in France circulated "war lies" as a propaganda measure during the World war was made here by James Kerney, editor and publisher of the Trenton (N. J.) Times, in an address delivered at the Army War college.

Mr. Kerney served eight months as director of American information with the A. E. F. and told the war college class that he did not "recall a single official lie which the general headquarters, A. E. F., put out even indirectly."

He referred to the stir created by published reports of remarks by General Charteris, "one of the most capable minds employed in British general headquarters in France," at a dinner in New York recently, at which the generals "chatted on wartime propaganda."

The speaker said that nearly all so-called "war lies" were folk tales and popular myths handed down through the centuries and modernized to fit any war. Investigation, he believed, would disclose that virtually all of them started as gossip either at the front or at home.

Charlestoneer Breaks Leg in Wedding Glide

Hammond, Ind.—Check one for the Charlestoneer. As a Charlestone performer, Robert Richardson was nix. He tried his best, 'tis true, and took a couple of lessons and all that.

But when it came to instructing others, that's where he met his downfall. And it was plenty hard, let it be known. As a matter of fact, he fell so hard while trying to impress guests at Joe Kasper's wedding anniversary here recently that when he was raised from the floor it was found he had a compound fracture of one leg.

Princess Alexandra Only Shingled Royalty

London.—Princess Alexandra, wife of Prince Arthur of Connaught, has gained distinction as the only shingled member of the British royal family. It is noteworthy, however, that whenever she appears at formal dinners at Buckingham palace the princess has always worn her "evening locks" as wigs for the bobbed or shingled are called in society circles.

The queen of Spain and Queen Maud of Norway, both recent visitors to London, still wear their hair long, as do Queen Marie of Rumania, the troubled mother of the romantic Prince Carol, and the queen of the Belgians, who recently was incognito reported to have been shingled. Some of the younger members of the royal houses have had their hair cut, but Princess Alexandra of Connaught is the only member of the British royal family who thus far has adopted the fashion.

SENDING OF MOVIES BY WIRE DIFFICULT

Inventor of Light Cell Used by Cables Explains.

New York.—The chief difficulty in the transmission of motion pictures by wire, says V. K. Zworykin of the Westinghouse research laboratories, is that of subdividing the field into small enough units for transmission, so that when they are enlarged upon a screen they present a definite image of the object.

Zworykin is the inventor of the light cell by which light impulses are translated into mechanical operations. He finds the problem of motion picture transmission theoretically possible, but the mechanical difficulties are by no means overcome.

The light cell, which is a combination of the principle in the radio tube and a photo-electric phenomenon discovered years ago by Halwach, is now used successfully by the All-American Cables for printing cable dispatches sent across the Atlantic.

Light Cell Catches Ray.

The light cell catching the ray of light reflected from a mirror galvanometer, sensitive to the smallest electrical impulses, translates the light rays into electrical impulses strong enough to operate printing devices, which record the dots and dashes.

Halwach discovered that the impact of light upon certain alkaline metals produced an electrical effect. Later experimenters showed that the light rays caused electrons to be discharged from the metal.

In the Zworykin light cell, a thin coating of the metal upon which the light acts is placed in a position such that the discharged electrons will add their impulse to the circuit in the radio bulb and permit current to flow. The process of amplification intensifies the current to a point capable of operating mechanical devices.

Used for Transformers.

The light cell also is used now in substation transformers on lines upon which heavy electrical currents are carried to detect smoke in case of fire, mechanically set off fire-extinguishing devices and notify the nearest station from which employees can be sent to remedy the trouble.

Mr. Zworykin said that the light cell was beginning to find wide application in industry. Among other things, it is used mechanically to test the filaments of radio tubes. It enables them to be manufactured with a uniformity which no other method of testing makes possible.

The inventor has an apparatus in his home by which the electric lights are automatically turned on at dusk by employing the light cell. He said that the draughts in the furnace might be automatically opened as easily with the rising of the sun.

Builds Home of Stones He Gathered 40 Years

Wolcottville, Ind.—The pile of stones that for forty years grew larger and larger now is the home of Frank Myers near here.

Not so far away is Sylvian lake, bordering the Gene Stratton Porter estate, and all around are the characters and the environment which Mrs. Porter wove into "The Harvesters" and "The Girl of the Limberlost."

Myers as a barefoot boy conceived a stone house—one in which every stone would have been gathered by him from his beloved Indiana. Through the years he collected large and small stones, piling them all behind the old Myers home. Neighbors wondered at the constant effort of the boy.

Through boyhood and into manhood Myers continued his stone collection. A few years ago Myers and two hired men went to work building the stone house. After two years a part of the stones had become a three-story, twenty-room home, modern in every particular.

Three years more and the pile of stones was gone and a large barn, 80 by 100 feet, was added to the stone house. The barn holds all the feed grown on Myers' 400 acres of land devoted to that purpose.

Felons Imitate Eliza, Flee Upon Cakes of Ice

Jefferson City, Mo.—Floating down the Missouri river on a cake of ice, two convicts attempted to escape after climbing over the wall of the Missouri penitentiary here. Guards in hot pursuit fired several shots, but apparently none took effect.

The voyage of the prisoners was short. They surrendered after guards on the river bank persuaded the pair, with the aid of leveled guns, that it was best to do so. Jumping from ice cake to ice cake, and frequently slipping into the icy water, they made their way to shore. The prisoners are Fred Hildebrand and Paul F. Pittman, both St. Louis robbers.

Here's the Letter That Wins the Ton of That Peer of All Coals--Dixie Gem

Gobles, Mich., Dec. 31, 1925
Gobleville Milling Co.

Dear Sir: The reasons we think Dixie Gem the best soft coal we ever used are:

First. Burns clearly, shows little effect on newly papered walls.

Second. Holds fire. (a) Has not gone out since first kindled. (b) One half the usual quantity of ordinary coal insures a good bed of coals in the morning.

Third. Scarcity of ash and high heat units per ton. (a) In the consumption of one and one half tons no more than one bushel of ashes were carried out. (b) One stove using Dixie Gem heats the entire down stairs, a radiation of 5,536 cubic feet.

Fourth. Moderately priced; because a little bit goes a long ways. I remain

Yours respectfully,
Leo Covey,

Milkmaid Helps Win National Honors for Van Buren County

Marion R. Wilkinson, pure bred Holstein dairyman of Dowagiac, R 2 tells us: "This is the third year I have fed Milkmaid, making remarkable records each year. Last year I led our cow testing ass'n for four consecutive months in fat and milk and another month in milk alone. January, 1925, was the highest month with an average of 53.3 lbs. of butterfat and 1,579 lbs of milk per cow. This was a good record, considering that 3 of the 6 cows were 3-year-olds--all pure bred Holsteins."

Just recently Mr. Wilkinson was awarded the National Dairy Ass'n diploma for herds that average over 300 lbs of butterfat per year. He is a member of the Van Buren County Cow Testing Ass'n.

--Farm Bureau News

This is another of the records that Michigan dairymen are making with Michigan Milkmaid, the Farm Bureau's 24 per cent protein, public formula dairy feed. Milkmaid is built to get the greatest production at the lowest feed cost and keep the herd in tip top condition. Try a ton of Milkmaid and watch your cows respond. You can get it at
