Scientific Development of New Fruit

By W. A. ALDERMAN and J. H. Giese
University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.

An apple, a pear, or any other fruit is a complicated product of maturation, and the development of any variety of fruit involves more than the discovery and selection of a promising plant. The fruit industry has been long established. The development of new varieties of fruit is one of the important factors in its progress.

The development of new varieties of fruit is a matter of considerable interest to all who are concerned with the production and distribution of fruit. Michigan Elected Catholic Priest as Congressional Delegate in 1823

Father Gabriel Richard Introduced Printing Press into the Territory and Published First Newspaper in Detroit. Pioneer Clergyman Was Devoted Friend of Education.

As president of this institution and the first Catholic priest to be elected by the inhabitants of the territory, Father Richard was elected. He had been appointed by the Synod of Detroit and was regarded as one of the most promising priests in the province. He was well versed in the classics and had a good knowledge of Latin, Greek, and French.

A provision of the act, which applied specifically to Father Richard, was that he should be, on the first Monday in January, 1823, at the seat of government, and there register himself as a voter.

The chief of the territory at that time was Catholic, and Father Richard was chosen to represent his interests. He was also chosen as a delegate to the first national convention of the Catholic Church in 1823.

Before the great charter of Wisconsin was adopted, Father Richard had been selected as one of the members of the convention. He was chosen to represent the interests of the territory.

In the fall of 1823, Father Richard was appointed as the first bishop of the See of Michigan, and he was consecrated in the Cathedral of St. Joseph in Detroit on November 26, 1823.

The bishopric of Michigan was established in 1823, and Father Richard was the first bishop of the See of Michigan. He was consecrated as the bishop of the See of Michigan on November 26, 1823, and he served as the bishop of the See of Michigan until his death on March 17, 1824.

Some of the notable achievements of Father Richard during his time as bishop included the establishment of the diocese of Michigan, the establishment of the University of Michigan, and the establishment of the University of Notre Dame.

He was also a great advocate for education, and he worked hard to establish schools and colleges in the territory. He was also a great advocate for the establishment of the University of Michigan and the University of Notre Dame.

What Co-operation Is Accomplishing

The American shipping public since the war has come to realize a certain responsibility in maintaining the standards of efficiency. It has been accustomed to perform the work of the roads and to unload the railroad equipment on the part of consignees and consigners, respectively.

There is the obligation on the shipper of early advice of car requirements to enable the roads to "mobilize" equipment.

These two steps are necessary to the development of the railroad transportation system as outlined above. The entire railroad transportation system is dependent upon the direct control of the roads.

Recognition of these facts has brought about the organization of the Shippers' Co-operative Association and enables the country to get more service from the equipment of the American railroads.

This is entirely voluntary service on the part of the railroads and is unique in the history of business. It has also been a profitable expedient, a lesson in co-operation gained from the world war, a phase in the onward march of the times, which Judge E. H. Cary, of the United Steel Corporation, recently described as the application of the Golden Rule in business, a condition that was inconceivable twenty years ago.

It is a manifestation of a quiet but certain revolution in American business thought which is gradually progressing to the finest ideals and incidentally tending to the greater well-being of our people and making for greater material returns.

The Michigan Railroad Association is keeping step with the shippers and heartily应收账款 ideals of a neighboring State, the Illinois Roadway Association. It has also been a popular demand and it is the policy of the Shippers' Regional Advisory Board.
