

State News Briefs

Belding—Rev. H. S. Ellis, Congregational minister, has announced his candidacy in opposition to E. D. Engemann for nomination as state representative from Ionia county on the Republican ticket.

Muskegon—Carl Franke, whose brother, William, was killed recently by a bomb sent through the mails, has been named supervisor of Blue Lake township, succeeding August F. Krubaek, also a victim of the bomb tragedy. Adelbert Syers succeeds Mr. Franke as township treasurer.

Holland—Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, Hope graduate, is the first minister whose complete sermon has been printed in the Congressional Record. Mr. Sizoo recently preached in defense of the American Sabbath in his church at Washington and a congressman was so impressed with it, in advocacy of a bill, that the sermon was ordered printed in the records.

Sturgis—Jas. T. Sloan, prosecuting attorney of St. Joseph county, has announced his candidacy for re-nomination at the fall primaries. A Republican, he has held office for two years.

Eaton Rapids—Mayor John B. Davidson, will sail for England about June 25 to visit his aged mother. He makes this trip each year and expects to do so as long as his mother lives.

Belding—The city of Belding for the past three years has done its own paving, no jobs being let out on contract. James Meginley, city street commissioner, has charge of the work which is done much cheaper than under the contract system.

Cadillac—Three girls of this city who were employed as investigators by Charles I. Underwood, private detective wanted by Battle Creek authorities, have been exonerated by local police. Underwood was turned over to Battle Creek officer, who alleged the self-styled detective had extorted money from Samuel Chappel and Merton Greenwalt, two store clerks of that city. These girls had been hired by Underwood to spy on clerks suspected of "knocking down" on their employers.

Paw Paw—County Hay day has been set for June 23 at the farm of Bert Gleason. At this meeting the Dains method of during alfalfa will be demonstrated.

South Haven—Miss Hattie Thompson is completing 40 years of continuous service as a teacher in the South Haven schools and will retire with this school year.

Fremont—The city commission, acting upon the recommendation of the chamber of commerce, has changed the system of a free tourist camp site here to a pay camp. A charge of 50 cents will be made the first day and 25 cents for each additional day. It is expected that this charge will have a tendency to attract the better class of tourists and keep the undesirable out.

Allegan—A judgment of $10,000 was awarded Mrs. Annie M. Roberts in circuit court here, against Mrs. Eva Pullman for alienation of her husband's affections. The case was heard by Judge Orion S. Cross and a jury, but the defense did not contest the action.

Trufant—The Business Men's club has set Aug. 5 as the date for the Trufant homecoming celebration. Plans are under way for many attractions this year and an attempt is being made to secure two fast ball teams for that date.

Cadillac—Military training is not popular with Wexford county youth if the slight response to join the citizens military training camp at Fort Brady is any indication. Only three boys thus far have made application.

Grand Rapids—This city is listed among 11 cities of the country as having reduced motor fatalities during the first four months of 1926 as compared with the corresponding period of 1925, in a report of the National Safety Council. This city had two deaths from motor accidents during the period of 1926 specified, as compared with nine deaths during the corresponding months of the preceding year.

Cadillac—The Mackinaw trail will soon be paved from Cedar Springs to Howard City, according to advices reaching here from the state highway department. But it will be some time before the cement is extended to Morley, owing to the heavy grading required on the stretch of road from Howard City to Morley. At a recent meeting in Lansing positive assurance was given M-13 boosters the concrete would be brought beyond Morley this year.

Ionia—Dexter G. Conklin of Flint, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Conklin of Ionia, has been appointed city treasurer of Flint to succeed Charles French, resigned.

Portland—In compliance with orders of the state conservation department relative to all towns using Grand river as sewer outlets, a survey has been started by a Toledo engineering company to make plans for the building of septic tanks. Should an analysis of the water show it to be necessary, work undoubtedly will be started this year.

Holland—Robertson & Campau of Grand Rapids, architects, have announced that plans for the new Washington school here soon will be completed and that work on the new structure will be started within a few weeks. The school will contain 12 rooms, including a large kindergarten room for crippled children and fresh air rooms and gymnasium. The structure will cost approximately $130,000.

Indian Legends of Northern Michigan

By JOHN C. WRIGHT

Harbor Springs

In the year 1800 a little girl was born on the banks of Grand river in the vicinity of what is now the village of Muir. Her father was a noted French trader and her mother an Indian princess, or daughter of a chief. At that period the Grand River Valley was one of the most beautiful regions in the whole country, as indeed it is today, and the little girl spent many happy days playing along the shore or paddling in her birch bark canoe. She often accompanied her father on his trips, frequently going with him over portages and rivers as far as Detroit.

When this little girl was thirteen years of age her father hired two trusty Indians to take her in a canoe from Grand Rapids to Mackinac Island, whither he had preceded her. Drifting down the beautiful river one bright summer's day they emerged into Lake Michigan and turning the prow of their little boat northward started on their long journey through this remote region. They put up a blanket for a sail when the wind was favorable, and paddled along by easy stages when it was calm. At night they slept by huge campfires, and the little princess heard many tales and legends of savage life.

She heard that at one time heaven and earth were connected by a great vine down which fairies and spiritual beings descended to the earth. Mortals were forbidden by the Great Spirit to ascend this vine, but once a young man became sick and in a delirious state climbed up far out of sight. His aged mother was so sad at thus losing her boy that she started after him, but her added weight broke the vine and both came down in a heap. Then the Great Spirit was very angry with the people. "Now," he said, "sickness and disease will prevail amongst you, and instead of living forever you will die when you grow old. There is only one thing left for you to do. Remember that everything that grows has some value—nothing was made in vain. Therefore you will gather roots and herbs and compound medicines and these will help you when in distress." Thus was born the medicine lodge and all who were initiated into its mysteries were told this story in great detail wonderfully embellished.

As the canoe proceeded on its way, its occupants caught glimpses of roving bands of savages, and of deer, elk and wolves as they came down to the lake to drink. Eagles, wild geese and turkeys were seen in great numbers.

When the canoe was caught out in the lake in the darkness the Indians were guided by the stars, and one night the little girl listened with open-eyed wonderment to the pretty legend of the North Star. She had a retentive memory and remembered all these stories. The Indians worshipped her father, and did their best to keep their precious charge entertained.

Not all Indians believed in marriage, they told her. When a brave refused to wed, others said to him that he belonged to the Two Cousins. This was because, years before, two exemplary young men became very fond of one another and made a vow never to separate. They lived with their grandmother who prepared their meals and dressed their game. But one day the old woman grew weary of her work; and while the young hunters were absent, invited two beautiful maidens from the south to enter the wigwam. When the young hunters returned she said:

"My children, I am growing old and weak. The work of dressing all the game you bring is too great a task; therefore I have asked these two beautiful young women to become your wives, which they have consented to do."

At the first the young men knew not what to say. They went about their affairs as usual and made no effort to cultivate the company of the beautiful maidens. But the latter were so pleasant all the time that finally the younger of the hunters fell in love, and the next day when he and his friend started out again to hunt, he could scarcely kill anything because he kept thinking of his sweetheart. He secured only three bearskins while his cousin took twenty-one. Then he confessed that he intended to return home and get married.

"If that is the case, I shall leave and never set foot this way again," said the other.

His friend tried to dissuade him, but he started off towards the north. "Although I leave you," he said, "remember, if you are ever alone at night and need a friend, you will see me up there in the northern heavens. If you ever get lost in the forest or at any time cannot find your way in the darkness, I will be there to guide your footsteps."

W. B. Sheehan, 21 Years Fennville's School Head, is Re-Engaged

Fennville.—Twenty-one years of service as the superintendent of the schools of one community is rather an unusual record for anyone in the teaching profession—yet such has been the service of Prof. W. B. Sheehan, who, for that number of years, has been head of the Fennville schools. Professor Sheehan expects to make it yet longer as it has been recently announced that the board of education has engaged him to remain at least two years more.

The other teachers who will remain on his staff the coming year are: Paul J. Kingman, physics and chemistry; Miss Maud Turnbull, Latin and history; Miss Alice Mosier, English and public speaking. The following grade teachers are also engaged: Miss Bertha Olson, Miss Margaret Schroeder, Miss Madge Lillie and Miss Rosemond Schaeffer.

Larger Holland is C. of C. Plan

Holland.—The Holland Chamber of Commerce has outlined a program of work for the current year and a busy year of activity is in prospect.

The crowning feature of the program will be the restoration of Venetian night which years ago was one of the biggest attractions at the Black lake resorts. Plans already have been made to stage the illumination on a larger scale than ever before attempted.

Plans also will be made to obtain an extension of the city limits as proposed by the city government as one of the essentials for industrial growth.

A committee has been appointed to raise Holland's quota of $3,500 for the Wolverine foundation, for which A. H. Laudwehr and the Holland Furnace Co., have contributed $1,000.

Other matters of progress cover the replacement of metal signs on street intersections, organization of a community chest, a downtown office for the chamber of commerce and the renumbering of homes on a systematic basis.

WHEN YOUR HOUSE NEEDS A NEW DRESS

By GRACE MARGARET WILSON

The cozy little house, gaily flaunting a new spring dress of fresh paint, is a sign-post of cheer to the passer-by. Nature, with her springtime blooms and verdure, has set a standard. Without its bright, new coat of paint, the little house would look woefully shabby in the midst of the many colored flowers and the jubilant green of young grass and foliage.

And the little house with its new coat of paint is setting a standard, also. Adjacent houses that need painting look all the worse by comparison. Their owners will feel compelled to "paint up," too. The tone of the whole neighborhood will be the better for it.

Property values will go up accordingly. For paint is preservative; and property is worth more when thus safeguarded against deterioration. The best built house is at the mercy of the elements when its paint begins to wear off. Paint fills cracks and crevices, and sends its tentacles down into the pores of the wood, keeping out the rain which destroys it. Tin eaves and drain-pipes require similar protection from rust.

While paint in any color is protective, the pleasing appearance of a house is wholly dependent upon the choice of the right color-scheme. A paint-dress for the home should be selected as a woman of taste and discrimination selects a costume for herself—with a view to its suitability to type, style, lines, etc. In short, it should be "becoming."

White, cream, or the light colors are best suited to the large house. The cottage or bungalow may be more vividly painted. Where houses are close together, similarity—or at least harmony—is desirable. A bright color-scheme for the tree-shaded house, and a more subdued one for the house in the open, is a good rule to follow.

LIVING and LOVING

BY FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

BREAKING LOOSE

It was one of those rare afternoons that June alone ever gives us. The grass was a carpet of emerald green and in the sunlight shone with all the luster of the precious jewel. Soft were the breezes that caressed our cheeks and sweet with the scent of blossoms, and in the deep azure of the skies not a cloud was to be seen. The afternoon by its perfection seemed to be doing its best to atone for all the late unpleasantness of wind and weather. Certainly it was giving the world every reason to be happy, and everybody was—that is, almost everybody.

On the steps of the golf clubhouse sat a small boy in a white linen suit guiltless of a single spot. And the small boy was scowling. Knowing him rather well, we took our courage in our hands (for he glared at us fiercely as we approached) and dared a question.

"What is the matter, Billy? Has something gone wrong?" Our sympathy broke through his armor of reserve. He sprang to his feet, clenching his small hands.

"Aw, gee, but I hate Saturday afternoons!" he cried. "I wish they'd never come 'round again!"

"But why, Billy?" We were surprised. "Thought all boys liked Saturday best of all days in the week. Why, they don't have to go to school!"

"Huh! I'd rather go to school than come out here and sit 'round all dressed up!" Billy's tone was scornful. "Maybe if I was a girl I wouldn't mind it, but I wanted to go fishing, I did, and I was sneaking out the back door in my old blouse and pants when Mother caught me and made me change them for this sissy suit so I'd look fit, she said, to 'sociate with the other ladies' sons. Gee! If any of those high-hat kids come 'round I'll sock 'em in the eye."

Poor Billy! With visions of silver minnows leaping in a sunfleaked brook, with vivid memories of bait and hook and sinker, it was no wonder the placid beauty of the scene before him stung him with resentment. He wanted to break loose, to do something, not just to sit!

And we heartily sympathized with Billy.

Many's the time we've wanted to cut loose, too; to do something, and generally something we shouldn't! Once we did! How well we remember it! A wee lassie, not much older than Billy, we were escorted to church all dressed up in our Sunday clothes and in consequence we were mighty uncomfortable. The day was warm and the sermon, to our childish mind, interminably long and uninteresting. We grew drowsy, when suddenly there appeared upon the bald head of the man sitting in front of us a big, black fly.

Our eyes flew open, we leaned forward and watched with fascinated interest the efforts of that fly to climb the peaks of that slippery mountain. Again and again had he crawled almost to the top only to be brushed off by the baldheaded one's impatient hand!

At last the contest between the two got upon our nerves! It was too unequal. The poor fly didn't have a chance. We put an end to it somehow.

Whack!

With all our force we brought our small hand down upon the bald one's head, to the startled fury of the man, the destruction of the fly, consternation of our father and our own later sorrow.

We had given way to impulse running counter to Mrs. Grundy's code and we were punished for our lack of restraint. But, wickedly we confess it:

It was worth it!

SUGGESTIONS

An old sewing table, with the legs cut down to child size, makes a fine play table. Their little chairs just fit it. When not in use the table can be folded and put out of the way.

The underfed child does not mean necessarily the child who does not eat enough to satisfy its hunger. It means that the child does not eat the proper food to build up and become sturdy—as it would if its food contained the blood building elements. The blood building elements will be found in the plainest of foods—in French dimity spreads are also used on these beds, sometimes plain, sometimes over a color underspread, which shows up the fine patterns of the work. These spreads run the gamut of prices from a few dollars into the hundreds. There are a number of Swiss spreads, Italian cut work and their natural state. Whole grains, fruits, vegetables, honey, raisins and dates are good for the child. Instead of candy after school, give the children stuffed dates. One pound dates one pound shelled pecans, powdered sugar. Stone the dates, fill with the nuts, and roll in powdered sugar.

Serve spiced fruit with veal. Spiced pineapple is recommended as there is an element in pineapple which aids in the digestion of any kind of meat.

Leftover sandwiches may be toasted and served hot.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

PICKED CLEAN!
"Old Great Grandmother Ursus was very, very wise. She had brought up her children to eat everything that was before them."
"Never mind Cubbies," grunted she when she had searched the cupboard and found it bare of even a what you like the next best thing is to like what you have. Thank goodness we Bears are fond of fruits and vegetables and now that we can't have meat let's go out and scratch up a few roots."
"Ugh, huh! Let's scratch for roots and maybe we can find some nuts for dessert!" echoed the Cubs, large and small, and out of the cave trooped the family, all bent on getting their dinner.
"But alas and alack. What a dreadful disappointment awaited

NO WERE THERE ANY ACORNS TO BE FOUND EXCEPT FOR WORM-EATEN ONES NOW AND AGAIN!

Great Grandmother Ursus. What a lot of little Cubs went to bed hungry that night! Mother Growly shook her head sadly as she spoke, and both the Cubs at her knee cried in chorus:
"Oh, Mother, couldn't Great Grandmother find any roots?"

"Oh, yes, I guess she found a few perhaps, children," replied Mother Growly. "But what would a few roots be among so many! As for berries—all the bushes had been picked as clean as the ground after a grasshopper raid. Nor were there any acorns to be found, except a worm eaten one now and again. At least so I've been told.

"Oh, that things should have come to such a pass as this!" growled Great Grandmother Ursus in despair. "Many, many mouths to feed and little to put in them!"

"And Great Grandmother Ursus sat down to think and all her Cubbies gathered around her and kept as still as mice, waiting for her to speak. For they knew that their mother was very wise and would think of a way out of their trouble!"

"And by and by Great Grandmother Ursus began to smile. Her eyes started to sparkle. She clapped her paws. The clever old Bear had a bright idea."

"Oh, mother what was it?" squealed Roly-Poly and her brother. "Did Great Grandmother have another cupboard with enough in it to feed those hungry Cubbies?"

Impatiently Mother Growly shook her head. "All in good time you'll find out," growled she and went on with her story.

Next—"The Eight Chosen Children."

A GAME TO PLAY

RED LIGHT

This is a good game for younger children, and can be used with any number. One player is chosen to be "it," and stands at the extreme end of the field or gymnasium or large room. The other players group at the opposite end. The one who is "it," counts 10 as rapidly and clearly as possible, then shouts "Red Light," and turns around quickly. While he is counting, the other players can run toward him, but as soon as he says "Red Light," they must stop and must not move while he is looking at them. If he sees a player move, he sends him back to the starting line to begin again. Then he turns around and the game proceeds as before. The first player to reach the line on which "it" is standing, wins the game and may be "it" next time.

Fairylike Costumes Result From Fashion's Whimsies

By MME. LISBETH

Dame Fashion's whimsicalities may surely be allowed some scope during the light-hearted summer season. Airy fabrics fashion fairy-like gowns and even the tailored cloth suits that appear to take themselves more seriously as a rule, flaunt gay ties and lacy ruffles peeping out from the demure jackets.

An afternoon summer dress which is surely fashioned so that it could be worn for an evening frock (left) is of this filmy character. It is pale yellow chiffon made very simply but with ample fullness. The sleeves are very long and wide at the bottom and are trimmed with vari-colored flowers which are applied to the chiffon.

A large ornament of the same many-hued flowers trims the waistline in the front and lavender grosgrain ribbons fall to the bottom of the skirt.

A flower-like frock of white taffeta for evening wear (center) has made the bouffant skirt so popular this year, especially with the brides and their attendants. The skirt is scalloped at the bottom, each scallop being trimmed with gathered self-trimming stitched flat. A deep net ruffle edges the skirt and a large flower is posed in the front on the net. Another flower is fastened to the wearer's left shoulder and a large bow of the material gives a particularly youthful finish to the frock. Marion Nixon who posed for this picture and the one described above wears silver brocade slippers and chiffon hose with this costume.

Salmon pink and black is the colorful combination used on the handsome ensemble (right). The dress is fashioned of salmon pink with accordian pleated skirt, collar and sleeves. The coat of black cloth has a border of gold and salmon pink with collar, cuffs and hem border of gray fox fur. A turban shaped hat repeats the colors of the suit as does the envelope pocketbook carried by Ena Gregory, the model.

The brilliancy of the colors described in these costumes reminds one that small-patterned metal imported sponsored for last year are now being shown for the ball. Spiderweb, spangled, reptilian, armor, and dotted motifs are featured principally and there are a few tiny geometric ideas as well. The collection is a large one, containing about 130 metallic numbers, for which erect pile velvet and a selection of domestic weaves serve as an accompaniment.

Perhaps the most interesting of the metallic innovations is called "Copper Scintella," a plain metal cloth developed for wraps, which is distinguished by an ridescence similar to that of burnished copper. It is so devised that its color reflections bring out one dominant tone, such as yellow, green, blue, red, or black.
