Whence this Urgue for Sweet Clover?

The season of building on the production front continues to be one of the sweetest growing territory. It already shows an increase over the record year and is expected to continue to impress its superior characteristics upon the hay market. Sweet clover is growing vigorously and is expected to make a large crop. The records are that the sweet clover is doing excellently well. Small plots of land that were set to sweet clover last year are already producing excellent yields. The yield is expected to be much better than last year.

Sweet clover's ability to produce abundant yields of clean and nutritious hay is one of its most valued characteristics. It thrives in a wide range of soil types and climatic conditions, making it a versatile choice for farmers across the country. Its deep root system enables it to access water from deeper soil layers, making it drought-resistant and adaptable to varying weather conditions.

The use of sweet clover as a forage crop has several advantages. It is a valuable source of protein, vitamins, and minerals for livestock. The high protein content makes it an excellent feed for dairy cows and it can also be used as a green manure by plowing it under to improve soil fertility. Sweet clover's fast growth rate and ability to withstand grazing make it a practical choice for rotational grazing systems. Additionally, its ability to fix nitrogen in the soil makes it a natural nitrogen source, reducing the need for chemical fertilizers and contributing to sustainable agriculture practices.

In conclusion, sweet clover is a highly recommended forage crop with numerous benefits for both farmers and the environment. Its versatility, adaptability, and productive qualities make it a valuable addition to any farm's cropping strategy. Whether for direct grazing, hay production, or as a green manure, sweet clover offers a robust and sustainable alternative for farmers seeking to improve their livestock nutrition and soil health.
Indian Legends of Northern Michigan

By JOHN C. WRIGHT

Harter Springs

"Look now, Nocks-nik," (grandmother), "you are old and wrinkled, but your old age has all faded like the grass in the field." No young man will ever be as pitifully poor as you now are. You may die quietly and peacefully, and not with much pain. You have lived a hard and bitter; your beauty gone—you see, the time has come.

At these words the old woman began to weep bitterly. "I know I am old, and you are right, I cannot stay here any longer," she said. "Yet, I cannot help the fact that I am old."

Then the old woman began to speak of her past. She told the story of her life, of the hardships she had endured, of the love she had shared, and of the children she had raised. She spoke of the joy and sorrow, the happiness and pain, that had filled her life.

As she spoke, the young man listened intently. He could see the tears of pain and paths of love in her eyes. He knew that this was the legend of the Indian woman, and he knew that it was a story of strength and beauty. He knew that it would remain with him forever, as a reminder of the wisdom and wisdom of the past.

In the end, the old woman died peacefully, surrounded by the love of her family and friends. And the young man knew that he had learned something valuable from her story. He knew that he would always remember the lessons of the Indian woman, and he knew that he would always honor her memory. For she had taught him that life is a precious gift, to be cherished and respected. And he knew that he would always strive to live a life that was true to her legend, and to honor the wisdom of the past.

Public School Food Classes for Boys Latest in Health Education

Chicago—Mothers are looking for their boys now as a result of the inauguration in the public schools of a new boys' food classes.

It's new, "Ma, I bought you some food today," instead of a request for bread, butter and jam. This is as much as anyone would wish for, and it seems to have aroused the interest of the boys.

One of the features of this new food classes is the emphasis on the importance of the food itself. The boys are taught to eat their food slowly and thoughtfully, and to appreciate the taste and texture of the food.

This new food classes is a wonderful innovation in health education. It encourages the boys to eat and to prepare to eat in a healthy and nutritious way. It is an old school official, says not only to better health, but in making them better men.

The menu planning is taught the boys along with cooking. Particular attention is given to the preparation of nutritious foods, such as fruits, vegetables, and dairy products, which is an essential part of the planned menu. It is also taught in the technique of pie making, cake baking, and so forth.

With many boys the extra food makes the boys who is above average in health and nutrition. The boys are taught to eat their food slowly and thoughtfully, and to appreciate the taste and texture of the food.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE
THE STORY OF A GIRL
WHO MARRIED TOO MUCH

By EDGAR P. WILSON

Enchanted, growing, marvelously centennial just as Laurens stood with Mabel and her father in the fields, girl's and woman's spirit soaked into the gold and green of the land. Mabel's face reflected the beauty of nature, her heart full of hope for the future. She was about to make a decision that would change her life forever.

The Next Day

Mabel was left alone in the large room that had once been her parents' bedroom. She sat on the edge of the bed, staring at the empty space where her mother once sat. Mabel felt a sense of loss, but also a sense of independence. She would have to be strong and make her own decisions.

Mabel

The story of Mabel, a woman who married too much, is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit. Despite her struggles, she managed to find happiness and fulfillment in life.

Clasped in her husband's arms, Mabel felt a sense of safety and security. She knew that she had found true love, and that nothing could tear them apart.

THE END

Mabel's story is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope for a better tomorrow.
