Traverse City—It now seems certain the exhibition building being erected at the fairgrounds will be ready for the Northwestern Michigan fair in September. This new structure replaces three buildings burned last spring.

Ionia—Clifford W. Tooker, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tooker, who has been appointed postmaster at Muir, succeeding Hercules Rice, resigned, is considered to be the youngest postmaster in Michigan. He was graduated from Ferris institute in 1922. There were four other candidates for the postmastership.

Cadillac—The Cobb & Mitchell Chemical plant and little sawmill, mill No. 1, are being junked by a Grand Rapids junk dealer. Two of Cadillac's old time lumber mills now are only 20 carloads of scrap and junk ready to be hauled to Grand Rapids. Mill No. 2 is being held intact for the use of some new industry now contemplated.

Harbor Springs—Lorenzo A. Clarke, 88, oldest member of the local G. A. R. post has been elected commander. Of the nine members left, only two are not filling an office. Other officers include: Senior vice-commander, Benton B. Bradley; adjutant, C. C. Abbott; quartermaster, Fred E. Main; officer of the day; Jay Johnson, and chaplain, Marion Mead.

Newaygo—The Newaygo Engineering Co., has arranged with the Jeffrey Manufacturing Co. of Columbus, O., to handle and distribute a patented disintegrating machine adapted for foundry and fertilizer plants. Capital and force are to be increased by the local concern. B. J. Frinzer will be the Grand Rapids representative.

Barryton—Contracts have been let by the state and work is to begin soon on three concrete bridges on M-66 in Fork township at a cost of about $85,000. Two of the bridges will be within the limits of this village and the other, one mile north of here.

Petoskey—The city council has adopted a resolution authorizing establishment of a sinking fund to pay off a total of $96,000 bonded indebtedness, will fall due in the next five years. Payment is to be made from city water and electric receipts. It is proposed to increase water rates. The city also has outstanding about $34,000 in bonds maturing on 10 year basis, payment for which is provided.

Ionia—According to specialists in charge of Dana Robertson, 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ray Robertson of Ronald township, she may not lose the sight of an eye which was hurt recently when a candle exploded as she was retiring. The glass has been removed from the eye, sustained when the explosion shattered a mirror. The candle has been sent to Lansing to be analyzed.

Kalamazoo—Simpson Methodist church will not be closed here this summer. The pastor, Rev. W. E. Doty, has announced himself as opposed to the practice of closing the church for summer vacations, and will keep the services going as usual.

Benton Harbor—Three local industries have resumed production with prospects for a constant flow of manufacturing operations for the next few months. They are the Consolidated Boilers Company, the Double Drive Truck Company, and the Jones Gear Company.

Pontiac—A six million dollar automobile plant, one of the largest industrial building contracts in the county let this year, has been placed with the Austin Company, General Motors Building, Detroit, which will erect the new Pontiac plant for Oakland Motor Car Company in this city. The new plant comprises over 2,000,000 square feet of floor space with the following buildings to be built at this time: A motor plant of single story design, 455 by 880 feet; an assembly building, 180 by 1,260, three stories and basement; a foundry, 300 by 700 feet and a car storage building, 432 by 760 feet.

Wandotte—The first Hess three-passenger airplane, manufactured at the Hess Aircraft Company plant of this city, was delivered to Richard L. Bennett, New York distributor of the firm. Accompanied by chief test pilot, Captain William Munn, he flew the plane back to Binghamton. Sale price of the Hess machine is $2,250. It is powered with a 90-horsepower motor capable of 100 miles per hour under a capacity load of 600 pounds.

Coopersville—Strawberries were a valuable crop in western Michigan this season. Louis W. Perrin of Coopersville realized $1,000 from one acre of berries. He sold them on the market at Grand Rapids for top prices throughout the season. From a patch of 12 acres the Roach Canning company harvested 3,026 crates.

Hart—The cherry maggot has made its appearance in Michigan this year for the first time and Michigan canners, growers and state and federal officials are united to stamp them out. Spraying trees in time will eradicate the pest as the maggot comes from an egg deposited on the cherry by a fly.

THE OLD MOTTVILLE BRIDGE

By DANA P. SMITH

Down in the beautiful broad valley of the old St. Joseph River, in the southwest corner of St. Joseph county lies the almost unknown and forgotten village of Mottville, a town of quaint old houses, majestic shade trees, and views of surpassing beauty of the ever flowing river, where the very atmosphere takes one back to the days of the covered wagon, the stage coach, and the typical pioneer settlement. For Mottville, nestling alone in the quiet valley far from railroads and modern improvements is still a town of the long ago.

The first settler arrived from Crawford County, Ohio, in 1827 and started a mill. He was quickly followed by other settlers so that in 1828 the site was platted and named Mottville. As it was situated on the Chicago Road at the "Grand Traverse of the St. Joseph" and had both land and water transportation, it quickly grew into a place of considerable business importance. The stages began to go through in 1830 crossing the river at the Indian Ford of the old Sauk Trail. It was over this trail from time immemorial that the tribes of the west had passed eastward and returned to their homes, all crossing the river at Mottville. The Sauks, the Outagamies, the Winnebagoes, the Renards, the Miamies, the Pottawatomies and many other tribes coming down the west side of Lake Michigan, or from the Illinois country, and rounding the south end of the lake had for ages traveled over this old path.

The Indian seemed almost by instinct to select the most direct routes that were compatible with the topography of the country, and they always forded the streams at the best places for crossing, so it was but natural that the white man should select this ford as the place to cross the Chicago Road over the St. Joseph River. Travelers going west of the St. Joseph crossed the river at the Indian Ford up to the summer of 1833 when the federal government let a contract to Hart L. Stewart for the construction of a bridge as a part of the military road. Sixteen thousand feet of timber was used, the best the neighboring forest afforded, some of the stringers being 60 feet long and 18 inches square. It cost $5,000 and stood until 1845, when it was taken down to make place for a pile bridge. Thos. Burns had the contract for driving the piling and constructing the bridge, and so well was the work done that it stood until 1867. During this year a new bridge of arched timber construction on stone piers was built at a cost of $7,000. The contractors were Hahlon Thompson and Joseph Miller. This bridge is still standing and carrying traffic, straight and true to line, and good for light loads for many years to come, a splendid memorial of the days of horse drawn traffic.

The paving of the old Chicago Road brought a great change to Mottville in the summer of 1922, for the forces of the State Highway Department invaded this spot of charming antiquity and began the construction of a great bridge at the "Grand Traverse of the St. Joseph."

the roar of hoisting engines, the chugging of pile-drivers, and the rattling grind of concrete mixers, until today looking down the river from the Old Indian Ford, one sees the finished form of the great three span concrete bridge, whose monumental solidity and artistically beautiful outline is the admiration and delight of all beholders.

If Chief White Pigeon could glide down the river in his canoe what, would he say at the sight of this marvel of engineering genius? He would probably say that the white man had improved on the old ford, but yet, ages ago his fathers had selected this site as the crossing of a great Indian highway, and the white man had done no more than follow in their steps with his modern methods of transportation.

AN INTERESTING PRIMARY ELECTION IS IN PROSPECT

Two Entrants for Governor

Several Congressional and Legislative Seats in Contest

Lansing—As the entry list for the Michigan State primary election closed on August 10th, one candidate Fred Green of Ionia filed petitions which qualify him to contest with Alex J. Groesbeck for the Republican nomination for governor. W. A. Comstock is unopposed for the Democratic nomination. Fred E. Titus of Jackson is the prohibition candidate link of Big Rapids is the lone Democratic candidate. Edith Luttenbacher of Detroit is running on the Prohibition ticket.

Congressional Contest Loom

In the congressional list the contests in the sixth and eleventh districts stand out. In the former Congressman Frank M. Hudson is opposed by J. Bradford Pengelly of Flint and R. H. Cook of Detroit, Albert Blaine of Detroit, who entered, dropped out in favor of Pengelly. Congressman Hudson, a dry worker for many years, is backed by the Anti-Saloon league. Pengelly has the support of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. While there are three men in the race, indications are that Congressman Hudson and Pengelly will occupy the principal roles on the wet and dry battleground.

In the eleventh district State Sen. Frank P. Bohn of Newberry is competing with Cong. Frank D. Scott of Alpena for the Republican nomination. According to word reaching here this promises to be one of the stiffest fights in the state.

Cong. Earl C. Mitchener, Jos. L. Hooper, John C. Ketcham, Carl E. Mapes, Louis C. Gramton, James C. McLoughlin, Roy O. Woodruff and W. Frank James are assured of the Republican renomination. None of them are opposed in the primary. Cong. Bird J. Vincent of the eighth district has opposition for the Republican nomination in the shape of Emory Townsend of Saginaw. The Democrats placed congressional candidates in the field in several districts and in one, the third, there is a contest for the nomination as George Smith of Hillsdale and Frank L. Willison of Climax qualified.

Frank W. Merrick of Pigeon, former state banking commissioner, qualified as a Democratic congressional candidate in the seventh. He is unopposed. Boyse Sansard of Monroe qualified in the second; Earl B. Sill of Cassopolis in the fourth; Dr. Frank C. Jarvis of Grand Rapids in the fifth; Frank L. Dodge of Lansing in the sixth, and Robert H. Wright of Munising in the eleventh—all Democrats.

Hot Fights Ahead

Hotly fought contests in several legislative districts appear likely. In the twenty-sixth Thomas Read, former lieutenant governor, will oppose Sen. Orville E. Atwood for the Republican nomination. In the twenty-seventh three Republicans are in the race. They are James T. Milliken, mayor of Traverse City; Albert J. Engel of Lake City, former senator, and Sen. W. L. Case of Benzonia. In the twenty-eighth, Horatio S. Karcher and Rep. George F. Roxburgh will fight it out. Loomis K. Preston of St. Joseph, now a representative, and George S. Bernard of Benton Harbor, a former representative, are seeking the Republican senatorial nomination in the seventh district.

An Ideal Vacation Land

Michigan is a playground for millions. Its wooded wilderness, rich in wild life and natural beauties, brings those who once enjoy it, back,—and back again.

Heavy inroads are being made into this treasure land, by the DEMON FIRE.

Fire Can Destroy it!

The situation is very serious. It must be understood by all,—by our own people and by our visitors. A situation understood is half conquered. This destruction can be stopped by the combined efforts of all who use the forests.

Printed below are five important FIRE PREVENTION RULES, constantly practiced by all trained woodsmen. Study and apply these and pass them on to others. Education in the use of these methods will quickly overcome the carelessness which now causes so much loss.

How to Prevent Fires

1. Matches—Be sure your match is out. Break it in two before you throw it away.
2. Tobacco—Be sure that pipe ashes and cigar or cigarette stubs are dead before throwing them away. Never throw them into brush, leaves, or needles.
3. Making Camp—Before building a fire scrape away all inflammable material from a spot 5 feet in diameter. Dig a hole in the center and in it build your camp fire. Keep your fire small. Never build it against trees or logs or near brush.
4. Breaking Camp—Never break camp until your fire is out—dead out.
5. Brush Burning—Never burn slash or brush in windy weather or while there is the slightest danger that the fire will get away.

Vet Saved by Florence Nightingale Lives With Family in Quiet Ohio Town

Robert Newnham and his great-great-grandson, Lynn Florence. Nightingale in Inset

Holland, O.—Florence Nightingale, the famous English nurse immortalized in history, is given credit by Robert Newnham, 91, of this city, for saving his life in a desolate war camp near Constantinople in the Crimea war 72 years ago.

He is thought to be one of the few veterans of the Turkish-Russian war living and the only veteran of that war in this country nursed by the noted nurse.

Soup prepared by her over a log fire was fed him as he lay bedfast in a wind-swept tent surrounded by more than four feet of snow, he said in telling how Miss Nightingale ministered to him.

Newnham was sent to join the Turkish army when he was only 19 years old. Thousands of other British youths went under an agreement. Disease brought greater casualties than did Russian bullets and eventually Newnham was stricken. For weeks he lay with little care on his sheltless punk in the vicinity of Scutari.

The futile charge of the Light Brigade in which almost every one of the 600 horsemen were killed created interest in the war in England. It was then that Florence Nightingale asked and was granted permission to head a corps of nurses to nurse near Constantinople. Up to that time women nurses in war camps had been unknown.

Miss Nightingale was 34 years old and in robust health when she first reached the improvised hospitals. But when she reached his bedside on a zero December day, she was worn and thin and showed the sleepless night she had spent ministering to the ill.

"Oh, how young to be here!" Miss Nightingale said to young Newnham as she raised a pewter spoon filled with steaming hot soup to his lips. Then tears fell from her eyes, he recalls, as she smoothed his wrinkled blankets and talked of the unjustness of a war that would take mere boys from their mothers.

The young soldier whom Florence Nightingale saved from death wandered far and wide after the war was ended. In Punjab, East India, he met a young British girl who later was to become his wife.

Eighteen years later they sailed from different ports, met in New York and a few days later were married in Monroe, Mich., at the home of relatives of the girl. They have lived in the same house here during the 54 years of their married life. Lynn Newnham, 13, a great grandson, calls almost daily at the little cottage to hear war tales retold and to sample the cookies for which Grandma Newnham is noted here.

IF LOVE LASTS

"If you laka me as I laka you And we laka both the same." Remember how the silly old song ran? We smile at the recollection of its utter absurdity. Yet the possibility so flippantly suggested in its lines has been the subject of serious contention since the world began.

And seldom, in real life, has this possibility been existent. For love is one of the things that cannot be standardized. With every individual it has a bode of expression all that individual's own, and however desirable it may oftimes seem that this mode conform to another's, the very moment it does, love loses a bit of its sincerity.

Different people respond to different things in different ways and the sooner that this is universally recognized the more universal will be happiness.

Life would be mighty drab and dreary if everybody thought alike. And variety being its spice, it would straightaway lose a great deal of its color if, emotionally, people grew too similar.

Theoretically we all admit this. In practice the personal element getting in its innings, how often we are hurt because some one dear to us does not show his affection for us in quite the way that we believe he should, as it seems to us we would do were our positions reversed.

She may be impulsive, ardent. He, by nature slower of pulse, shy of emotion. And when he is chary of demonstration she doubts the substance of which this is but the shadow mistrusts the strength of his affection. If he truly cared he would more often tell her so, she reasons!

The fact of the matter is that he probably cares as much if not more than she does or can, and by the very depth of his feeling is rendered articulate.

In time the hurt becomes a grievance. And love blighted by a grievance wilts.

Then there is the unselfish affection that gives freely and often to its own undoing.

For very often unselfish love's complement is love that unthinkingly and because of its very intensity, demands without end.

When one forever gives and the other forever takes, neither realizing the true value of the other's attitude there comes a day when heartbreak severs the unequal alliance.

Love that is to last must have freedom for expression, must be most truly itself.

Don't take issue with affection! Rather develop a little understanding.

THE TOP O' THE WORLD

"It must have been rather discouraging to meet with nobody who gave them a word of cheer to speed them on their way," declared Mother Growly. "But heeding the warnings of neither beasts nor birds, Hale-N-Hearty and Bright-Eyes trudged toward the North Country.

"They found, too, that their friends had told them truly. The farther on they went the colder grew the air, the wilder were the storms. But by and by they began to like the ice and the sight in your life? Snow, snow everywhere! Not a patch of earth! How beautiful, but how bright! The white light hurts my eyes. And the ice! What fun we shall have sliding on that iceberg and see that piece floating off by itself down that stream? One of these fine days I shall go for a sail on a block of ice. And the water, Bright-Eyes! I never guessed there would be so much water in all the world!

"Oh, ho! The top o' the world for me!

The land of snow, the home of the free!

I shall be happy—just wait and see!

"Hale-N-Hearty, the cub, stood on his hind legs and danced for he was very, very happy."

Games To Play

Caterpillar Race—Ten boys or girls are lined in a row back of each other, hand on shoulder of boy in front. Every third boy has a boy on each side with one hand on his shoulder and outside hand outstretched to make the caterpillar. They race around an abject and return without breaking hold.

Egg Eating Contest—Men line up, each contestant is given one hard boiled egg. At signal, egg must be cracked, all shells being put carefully into pocket, and the egg devoured as quickly as possible. When he has finished, the winner must crouch chicken-wise and crow. The one first discovered in this position and crowing loudly, having eaten his egg, is the undisputed champion chicken prompter and entitled to a prize.

Volstead Race—Six teams are formed consisting of one man and one woman each. The men are placed six feet apart in a straight line and each is given a stick about 3 feet long with very blunt ends. The women are placed 30 feet away in a line parallel to that of the men. Each woman must be opposite her partner. On the word "go" each man places his head on the upper end and turns about in this position six times. He then runs with the stick to his partner who goes thru the same process, bringing the stick back to her partner who by this time should have returned to his original position. Many will become so dizzy that few will complete the game.

Beige and White Make Contrast With Navy Blue

By MME. LISBETH

Contrast is one of the outstanding notes of the fashion world. Dark costumes have sometimes achieved this effect in collar and cuffs and in others with embroidery or other decoration, even permitting it to be expressed only by a brightly colored buckle on the girdle or by a shoulder-posed flower. With solid color gowns this effect is sometimes obtained, too, by wearing a hat of contrasting shade.

In the jumped frock pictured beige and white makes the contrast when combined with dark blue. The frock consists of a beige colored blouse of satin-back crepe which has a shawl cape of crepe and is worn with an accordion pleated skirt with border stripes of white.

White piping on the collar and white cuffs and buttons on the sleeves relate the blouse to the skirt with its white bands. The blouse is belted with self material.

Interest is still exhibited in plaids. One plaid dress was belted at a low waistline and trimmed with bands of plain fabric. Another—of silk this time—was simply cut with circular ruffle and the material itself was of striking pattern.

A group of new frocks for daytime wear seen recently is remarkable for their dissimilarity, although treatment of the pleats differs.

A jumper frock of pale pink jersey had a skirt of pleated crepe de chine. The trimming of the V-shaped neckline and the patch pocket was of especial interest.

SUGGESTIONS

If the interior of the piano becomes damp, which is likely to cause damage, an electric light bulb may be hung inside and if allowed to burn for several hours the dampness will be removed. If this is done occasionally the trouble will be eliminated.

Instead of throwing out the ice and salt used in packing home made cream empty freezer into burlap bag and after ice has melted the salt remains and may be used again.

A good molasses cake may be made without eggs. Take one cup molasses, one-half cup shortening, one-half cup sour milk or water, one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon ginger, two and one-half cups flour, pinch of salt.

By using a dampened chamois on highly polished furniture one will find it very useful and labor saving for removing finger marks.

When cleaning floors and baseboards, if the air from a bicycle or auto tire pump is forced into corners every particle of dust is removed most effectively.

Add a can of elderberries to the rhubarb for rhubarb pie. It will make fine red pies more delicious and pleasing to the eyes. This also will make good tart sauce.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Watermelon Ice—Two cup watermelon juice, one-half cup water, one-half cup sugar, one-quarter cup ginger syrup or one-eighth teaspoon powdered ginger. In making fruit ices it is wise to cook the sugar and water together. Use twice as much water as sugar, that is, if you are using one cup of water use a half cup of sugra. Cook this mixture 10 minutes. Cool. Add the fruit juice after syrup has cooled. Strain and freeze. Let stand at least an hour to ripen. These ices are better if they are made in a freezer with a dasher for the agitation helps to aerate the mixture and gives a fluffier dessert. Fruit ices left to freeze by their lone are apt to become like cakes of ice.

Chicken Stew—If you use the white meat of the chicken for the salad, the dark meat may be cut from the bones and chopped with onion, green pepper, etc., as you wish, put into the broth in which the chicken—bones and all—was cooked until very tender. Strain this broth so as to be sure it is free from bones, thicken, add chopped chicken and seasonings and serve over the boiled potatoes.

The Old Home That Is Worth Saving

In this country's earlier days, the most touching poems from the pen of the dead soldier-poet, Joyce Kilmer, is "The House With Nobody In It." Graphically he depicts a lonely old house bereft of the happy human life which it once sheltered, and falling rapidly into decay.

How fine a work to transform once more into a home of cheer and comfort one of these noble old derelicts! If it has been long neglected in the matter of painting, many repairs may have to be made on walls, roof and eaves. But the inner framework will be found staunch and unshaken. When the old house has been repaired and re-painted, it will seem to take on new life, and will long outlast the hastily and often too cheaply put up houses of today.

In re-painting one of these old houses, a color scheme should be chosen which is in harmony with its type of architecture. The Colonial or early American type of house usually was painted white with green trimmings. Slight variations from this are permissible, however, such as cream or grey with green trim, or yellow with white trim. The red brick chimney will give a pleasing note of contrast. It is effective to paint the outside of the doors to match the window-trim.

All interior decoration should be of the period to which the house belongs. Light, painted walls, in plain or paneled effects, were as much in vogue then as now. Woodwork, ceiling and floors also should be re-painted, for sanitary as well as decorative purposes.

The giving of new life to a fine, old home subtly preserves for us something of the ideals and standards of our country's founders. President Coolidge said recently:

"The home has been and ever must be a source of profound influence and inspiration in the lives of all citizens. It plays a chief role in the development of the children of our nation for stability and uprightiness. To raise the standards of the American home is, therefore, a substantial contribution to national well-being."

It is said that $130,000,000 is being spent for milady's hosiery. It seems a shame to roll down anything so expensive.
