Winter Work for the Cold Frames

Cold frames should work the year around. They are used mostly during the cold season, but on hot, cloudy days they are also very useful. If cold frames are well designed and built, they will not freeze. Many have a sufficient supply of heat to keep the young plants from freezing, even during the worst of winter. In fact, some have been known to be used as incubators for the production of early crops. When they are properly cared for, they are a valuable asset to any farm.

Bulbs the Easiest House Plants

Easy to grow and most certain to bloom in the house are the bulbs now in the market. Tulips and ferns are most popular. They are very hardy and will grow well in any climate. Most of the bulbs are sold in the flower market, but it is always better to buy them from a reliable nursery. The bulbs should be planted as soon as they are received, and they will bloom within a few weeks. The bulbs should be kept damp and in a warm place until they are ready to be planted.

Vegetables May Be Stored In Well Ventilated Cellar

Vegetables may be stored in any room in the house, but the best place is in a cellar or in a cool, dry, well-ventilated place. The vegetables should be kept in a dry, well-ventilated place, and should be checked regularly to make sure that they are not going bad. How to Have a Dry Basement

How to Have a Dry Basement

A dry basement will make the house more comfortable, and will also prevent the growth of mold and mildew. The first step is to make sure that the basement is well ventilated. The basement should be cleaned and swept regularly, and the floor should be painted. The walls should be painted with a waterproof paint. The basement should be checked regularly for signs of water seepage or leaks.

The drawback of a dry basement is that it is more difficult to maintain. The basement should be kept clean and dry, and the floor should be painted regularly. The walls should be painted with a waterproof paint. The basement should be checked regularly for signs of water seepage or leaks.
INDIAN AND INDIAN LIFE

BY MISS MINNIE B. LANE

Tracking the occupancy of Grandview, the home of one of our own, was an event long awaited by many of the early settlers of the community. The Indians had been waiting for this event for nearly 50 years. The house was erected in 1920 and has been occupied by various families ever since. The present owner is Mrs. James E. Brown, who purchased the property in 1945.

Leakey, Texas, is planning to erect a new library building. The present library has been in operation for 20 years and is located in a rented building. The new library will be built on a site donated by the city council.

Resignation: Miss Minnie B. Lane has resigned as editor of the Indianian and Indian Life magazine. Miss Lane has been with the magazine for 25 years and has contributed many articles to it.

Reorganization: The Indianian and Indian Life magazine is being reorganized to include more features on Indian life and culture.

Sponsorship: The Indianian and Indian Life magazine will be sponsored by the American Indian Association.

MOTHER'S DAY

MOTHER FLETCHER

Caterina was especially prepared to receive her daughter in arms at the end of her captivity. All children of dissipation, Prostitution, Public Aid, and Disease are lovingly remembered by Caterina, who decided to convene the group of children on Father's Day, 1970, at the cottage of her late husband, Forester Fletcher.

The meeting was held at the cottage of her late husband, Forester Fletcher, and was attended by all the children of dissipation, Prostitution, Public Aid, and Disease. A total of 50 children were present, and they were all warmly welcomed by Caterina.

The children were treated to a special meal and were given presents. Caterina addressed them, reminding them of the importance of family and the need to work hard and be honest. She encouraged them to stay in school and to avoid the negative influences of the streets.

The children were very grateful and promised to do their best. They left the cottage with a renewed sense of purpose and determination.

The meeting was a great success, and Caterina intends to hold similar meetings in the future. She is determined to help these unfortunate children and to give them a second chance in life.

"Soldier" Visit

Altered as it may sound, German soldiers do not gain the confidence of people by giving them a false idea of the value of an article. The natural reserve of sound, the famous American smile, it is stated, is due to the German soldier's willingness to do after duty, show it is not in the nature of things to be confident. Early Anteppey

New York is the land of mystery, and a great part of its mystery seems to belong to the people who live there. It is a land of mystery, a city of mystery, a city of mystery, and a city of mystery.

The great problem of the east, the west, the north and the south, is the fact that the city is a city, and that the people who live there are not likely to be found near a hotel or other vegetables familiar today.

To solve this mystery, the "soldier" visit is important. He is not likely to be found near a hotel or other vegetables familiar today.

WILY JUNGLY CAT GETS WISE FOR RELAXED WEAR

By MRS. LIBRETT

A witty cat of the jungle gave her human host quite a shock the other day when she tried keeping the cold of winter out of the house. The design is American in a straightforward way with neck, shoulder, and hip combinations of flannel and cotton. Although contributing to interesting details, the furs are dotted with distinctive patterns, all in a playful fashion of originality. This is a most novel in the individual way in which poles are used.

As well as the choice of stylish fur, the design of the trousers, the coat, and the hat, the effect of the entire outfit is noticeable in the way the winter coat is worn. The jacket is of a light worsted, and the hat is made of a soft, felt-like material. The entire ensemble is harmonious, and the winter coat is a fitting touch.

The Society Seeks New Site As Oil Wells Usurp All Land

City officials have been in search of a new location for the city's oil wells. The current site is under lease to the city, and the lease expires in 1950. The city council has been exploring alternative sites for a new location.

Sane Girl Imprisoned With Lunatic; England Stirred by Cruelty of Living Law

MRS. REX BECKWITH A NOVEL ABOUT A DR. MONTAGUE LOMAX

London—Ancestors and inheritors were cradled, as practiced today in England, in the name of the family. Great, great-grandfathers were buried in the family vaults, and in the same nobleins the old name, and the name of the family was preserved against all the exigencies of time. Of man are the revelations made in the stately book in which his notebook or genealogy is kept. This book, in which the record of the family is kept, has been the repository of the family for centuries. It is the family record book, and it is the family's history book.

The Family Record Book

The family record book is the repository of the family's history. It contains the family's genealogy, the family's history, and the family's traditions. It is the family's history book, and it is the family's record book. It is the family's history, and it is the family's record.

As though he had been strong enough to pull the line to the timber, and had not been strong enough to pull the line to the timber, he turned in the timber, and pulled it up to the timber. But not far enough.

The fall, that had been nursing in the timber, was up to the line, and the line was up to the timber.

Grape Apple Sauce

A good many foods go into the making of a homemade sauce. Grapes, honey, and sugar make a wonderful combination. First, add the sugar to the fruits, and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Then add the juice to the fruits, and stir until the fruits are coated with the juice. Cook until the sauce is thick. Strain through a fine cloth, and store in a cool place. The sauce is ready to use.

SYLVIA had never been to the hotel, but she was sure she had written a story about it. She was also sure that it was her third story for the weekly magazine, but she couldn't remember the title. She knew, however, that it was one of her best stories, and she had been working on it for over a month. She had spent countless hours researching the hotel, and she had interviewed several of the guests, trying to get their perspective on the place. She had been so focused on her work that she had forgotten to eat lunch. Now, as she stood in front of the building, she felt a sudden pang of hunger. She wondered if there was a restaurant nearby that could provide her with a quick meal. She decided to try the hotel's restaurant, as she had heard good things about the food. She entered the lobby, and a bellhop approached her. "Can I help you, ma'am?" he asked. "Yes," Sylvia replied. "I'm looking for a restaurant to eat lunch. Can you recommend one?" "Oh, yes," the bellhop said. "There's a great little restaurant just around the corner. It's called "The Greenhouse". They have the best sandwiches in town." Sylvia thanked the bellhop and headed out the door towards "The Greenhouse". As she walked, she couldn't help but notice the hotel's architecture. It was a beautiful, historic building with elegant decor. She wondered if the hotel had a restaurant with a similar ambiance. She decided that she would make a note of it for her next story. She arrived at "The Greenhouse" and was immediately impressed by the menu. She ordered the club sandwich, and it was delicious. She ate her meal in silence, lost in thought. Suddenly, she heard a voice behind her. "Excuse me, ma'am." She turned around to see a young man standing there. "Can I help you?" she asked. "Yes," he replied. "I'm a writer, and I've been working on a story about this hotel, and I was wondering if you would be willing to be interviewed for it." Sylvia smiled. "I'd be happy to help," she said. "Thank you," the young man said. "I'll be back in a few minutes." Sylvia waited for him to return, and when he did, she agreed to be interviewed. She spent the next few hours talking with the young writer, and she enjoyed the conversation. She realized that she had never been so fascinated by a place before. She left the hotel feeling inspired, and she knew that she would write a story about it that would make it famous.
