Some Problems In Vineyard Spraying

By H. C. LEICHHARDT

Vineyards have been somewhat more difficult to sprays properly than other crops. Many vineyards are flanked by sandy loam soil and often thin. This thinness increases the difficulty of thoroughly getting through the foliage.

The rows are often planted on loose or gravelly soil and the power sprayer is too wide to be used. It has to be moved up and down the vines in such a way as to keep the boom over the bud and the rows are seldom as straight as would be desirable. The bubbles turn around with the average power sprayer on this type of soil. The vines' thin covering of leaves and stems are to be sprayed to the trunk of the vines and not to cover the lower surface as well. At best it is a rather difficult job and the equipment should be used to the best advantage.

The "troubles" system of insecticidal spraying. Two men are required to handle the machine, but a more through coverage is given.

This type of spraying requires a sprayer that can be adjusted to suit the condition of the vines. The sprayer should be adjusted to suit the conditions of the vines. The sprayer should be adjusted to suit the condition of the vines.
UPHOLD ST. CLAIR FLATS LEASES

Leases of state lands in St. Clair Flats are maintained by an opinion of the fiscal agent. The state’s ownership of the lands is such an agent and not by any legislative or executive action in the legislature.

The county commission has refused to renew any lease of the lands or to return the lands to the state. It has contended that the state holds the lands on the basis of the lease and not by any legislative or executive action in the legislature.

The opinion has been voided, merely asserting the court without the form as held in a case in the court of common pleas.

Allegany County Road Commission
Commended For Year 1927

The county road commission of Allegany county has been organized for the past several years. The present commission, according to the commissioners, consists of L. W. Smith, chairman; J. A. M. Swanson, member; and J. C. Seaman, member.

The commission has been thoroughly reviewed by the public highway department of the state of New York, and the commissioners have been instructed to carry it on as they have always done.

The commissioners, with the exception of the county road, have resented the State Board of Control’s proposal to place the county road under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Control.

The commissioners believe that the county road should be maintained by the county and not by the State Board of Control.
