Establishing the Backyard Vineyard

By ERNEST ANGELO

PrACTICALLY every garden of any size or even small enough for flowers, and many a long farm has a place where some shrubbery or screen can be planted, suitable for the value in the landscape, while often their leaves serve as a protection to the fruit in formation. It is surprising how many are inclined to start a vineyard without realizing the advantages of it, and many are spoiled by not knowing when to plant and how to care for the vines. In short, they don't know the vineyard.

One of the secrets of a successful vineyard is to select the right vines. Of many, the only one that seem to be willing to do the 'most anything for you' is the Muscatel. Of course, other varieties can be grown, but no vine is so easy to grow, and none is so productive of results. The vines are hardy, and in the northern states, the vines can be grown on the same lot year after year, and the fruit is of a much higher quality than when grown on the same lot year after year. The vines are hardy, and in the northern states, the vines can be grown on the same lot year after year, and the fruit is of a much higher quality than when grown on the same lot year after year.

About the middle of the fall, the vines will start budding, and the pruning will be done by hand or by machine, depending on the size and type of vineyard. The vines will be pruned in the winter, and in the spring, the vines will be trained and tied to the support, and the fruit will be harvested in the late summer or early fall. The vines will be kept clean, and the fruit will be harvested as soon as it is ripe. The fruit will be packed and shipped to the market, and the vineyard will be ready for the next season. This is a very common method of growing grapes, and it is the best way to grow grapes in this area.

The vineyards should be located in a sunny place, with good drainage, and the soil should be well drained. The vines should be planted in a well-drained soil, and the soil should be well-drained. The vines should be planted in the spring, and the vines should be planted in the spring, so that the roots will not be damaged by the cold. Total telephone traffic for the year was slightly over 325,000,000 miles. The 1926 increase in traffic of 1925 was 107,778,000 miles.

Leenanu Prepares For Big Season

"Standing room only will be the order of the day this season," the Leenanu officials have predicted. "With the sportsman's season just around the corner and the prices of tickets and hotel accommodations at all-time highs, the Leenanu will be the place to be." The Leenanu, a popular sporting goods store in the heart of the city, has announced a special"Standing room only" policy to accommodate the large number of sportsmen expected to attend this season. "We will be prepared to handle the overflow," the store manager said. "With the sportsmen's season just around the corner, we expect a large turnout of sportsmen. We will be ready to accommodate them."

GROPP DISTRICT

Groups of Friesian and dairy stock will be sold at the sale of David Gillett's, Leo von Harnid sold a large herd of spring stock.

Grove Ethelwood in Kalamazoo set up a new record.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts' daughter and family of Chicago were here Sunday.

Gerald Thoebe and family were in South Haven.

Mr. Thorn and family of Grand Rapids have been here at David Gillett's.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul's two daughters attended their third wedding anniversary.

Potato Train

The potato train here Saturday proved a big winner in every way, as more exhibitors and spectators were at the plant than at any previous stop, and the attendance was all that could be desired.

The supply of certified seed potatoes was satisfactorily provided for, and there were more and more people looking at the potatoes to see if they were of the right size and quality to produce good potatoes for next year.

Pots are now being set in the field, and the Certified Seed Potato Company is sending out planters to distribute the potatoes.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul's two daughters attended their third wedding anniversary.

Mr. E. Briggs was one of the early arrivals at the sale.

Grubbing, third and Ed Younglove, fourth, and all were well pleased with the potatoes.

We were glad to find who found five and sixth places and the farmers who attended the auction house us as they learned much about the potatoes and while they cannot all put into practice what they learned, they are determined to work toward the best possible results by working toward the best possible results by working toward the best possible results.

We believe that the most beautiful flowers from the same potato variety that the photographer was able to get at all, and we congratulate the farmers on the marked success of the sale.
