Farmers Operate Railroad

Farmers riding between Kansas and Pottawatomie, in Shelby County, New York, have successfully made the detailed K. & P. railroad, eleven miles long, pay expenses after financial interests give up. It has the read-only optional (although it owns a gasoline-operated car, too), with its train crew, left to right; August G. Hauck, National Association of railroad and assistant engineer; Lindbergh Branyu, engineer; and Charles DePuy, conductor.

What Do We Know About Pruning?

By F. A. MOTT, Virginia Polytechnic Institute

And still their roll.

For the past ten years the writer has studied the prune industry and its most pressing problem, the subject of which is the cultivation and picking of the prune. It is upon this problem that this article is based.

One experiment station in California has a large experiment in pruning of prunes, and there are many others all over the country. The problem is to find the best way to prune the prune industry and to determine the results of the experiment.

The essayist also says this.

One experiment station gives data showing that pruning has improved the prune industry in California and the experimental methods have been carried out in other states as well.

In Virginia, the third largest producer of prunes, the prune industry is not as advanced as in California, but the method that is used in California is being used to a large extent.

In Florida, the second largest producer of prunes, the prune industry is not as advanced as in California or Virginia, but the method that is used in California is being used to a large extent.

Low Grade Must Be Eliminated

This is the result of all the experiments and will be a decided help to the prune industry. The prune industry is not as advanced as in California or Florida, but the method that is used in California and Florida is being used to a large extent.

One experiment station gives data showing that pruning has improved the prune industry in Florida and the experimental methods have been carried out in other states as well.

Fire Pipe Striped Like Watermelon

"Watermelon pipe" was the latest in fad. Five pipes striped like watermelons were made to order for five dollars each and sold very fast. The pipes had bright red and orange stripes, generally evoking state flags, but also many other colors. Many people displayed the pipes, not to show off, but to be part of a larger trend.

VAN BUREN COUNTY TELEPHONE COMPANY
CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

The lessons of school are over, while Balbous stood men still, only pail in hand, he was a figure that one might expect to see in the suburbs, going to the Center, whose hand he had been taken to his feet. He added,"Oh, well, I don't feel as if I'm going to get any good out of this."

"Well," replied Balbous, "the Center is on the right. Go and see what you can do there."

"Thanks," said the other, and he started on his way.

The boy, however, did not take the hint. He just kept on walking, his eyes fixed on the ground, as if he were following a path. Suddenly, he saw a figure in the road, and he called out, "Hey, what's going on here?"

The other turned around and said, "Nothing much, just a boy who needed a job."

"I see," said the boy, and he moved on.

As he walked on, he noticed that the road was getting narrower. He felt a little uncomfortable, but he continued on his way.

After a while, he saw a large building and he stopped to look at it. It was the Center, and he knew that he must go inside to try to find a job.

He walked in and asked for a job, but no one seemed to care. He tried to explain his situation to the workers, but they were too busy to listen.

Just then, a man walked up to him and said, "What's the matter? Do you need a job?"

"Yes," said the boy, "I'm looking for work."

"Well," said the man, "I can give you a job here."

So the boy started working, and he was able to support himself. He worked hard and earned a good living, and he was grateful for the opportunity.

As time went on, he became more and more successful, and he was able to help others in need. He continued to work hard, and he was very happy with his life.
