Poultry Terms Defined

Poultry is a term used to describe all birds that are raised for food or as pets. The term is derived from the Greek word "polus", meaning many, and "turf", meaning earth. Poultry is divided into domestic and wild varieties. Domestic poultry includes chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese, and swans. Wild poultry includes birds of prey, such as eagles and hawks.

A

Capon

A capon is a male chicken that has been castrated to prevent it from laying eggs. The term is derived from the Latin word "caput", meaning head, and "analis", meaning anus. Capons are used as meat birds because they have a more tender and flavorful meat than other male birds. Capons do not fly and are not able to lay eggs.

The Old Umbrella Mender
By AD SCHULTZ

At a half mile from the entrance to the town of Paw Paw, there is a man who mends umbrellas. He has been doing it for twenty-five years. The town is small, but the demand for his services is just as great today as it was twenty-five years ago.

"I don't get paid much," he says, "but I'm happy to do it. I enjoy it."

"What do you mean by 'mending' an umbrella?"

"Well, I don't really mend it," he says, "I just put on the new ones."
FIRST LADY LOOKS UP TO SON

President Clarence Cook Little has advised him to be a good boy and to do right, so he will be glad to see the university campus and all the fine buildings and the beautiful trees and flowers that surround it, knowing that it will be his home for some time and that he will be happy here.

The President's secretary, Miss Elizabeth Scott, 27-year-old English student at the University of Kansas, said that she was happy to have a chance to meet the First Lady and to have the opportunity to talk with her about the University and its history.

MANY ANN ARBORITES ARE OPPOSED TO U. M. DORM DRILLS

The University of Michigan has received numerous letters from students expressing concern about the proposed dormitory construction.

The students are concerned about the impact of the new dorms on the University's green spaces and the loss of natural habitats. They also object to the proposed height of the new dorms, which would exceed the current height restrictions set by the city.

Friends of nature and university administrators have expressed mixed opinions about the dorm drills. Some believe that they are necessary for the expansion of the University, while others argue that they could be better managed to minimize their impact on the environment.

The University has promised to conduct environmental impact assessments before proceeding with the construction of the new dorms. The assessments will consider the potential effects on the local ecosystem and the University's mission to educate future leaders who understand the importance of sustainability.

TAKES COVERED PRIZE

Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Smith of Ann Arbor were pleased to receive the Covered Prize for their essay on the history of the University. The essay was chosen from a large number of entries and will be published in the university newspaper.

The prize was established by the University to encourage students to write about the institution's past and its role in shaping the future.

The essay competition is open to all University students, and the winner will receive a cash prize and a certificate of recognition.

LIVING AND LOVING

By Mrs. Virginia Lee

EXPERIENCES

A short time ago I received a letter from a girl who signed herself, "In Love," saying that she had become infatuated with a married man and could not live without him. Now comes a letter from a girl who says that she has fallen in love with a married man and that she wants to quit her husband.

Dear Mrs. Lee: Let me say for a few moments about the married man to whom you are attached. I am sure that you have a great deal of love for him, but I must tell you that it is not wise to pursue such a course of action.

Your letter gave me some cause for alarm, for it seems that you are not fully aware of the consequences of your actions. It is not wise to pursue a relationship with a married man, for it can lead to much trouble and heartache.

The problem is that you are not in a position to know what you are doing, for you are not married and cannot fully appreciate the responsibilities that come with marriage.

Some people may say that you are following your heart, but I must tell you that it is not wise to do so. You must consider the consequences of your actions before you decide to pursue such a course of action.

A TANGIBLE STING
By MARY LINCOLN ORR

Picture Mirror is a delightful rabbit. So many children like rabbits, and so many parents are afraid of the slightest chance of a allergy, that the rabbit is a pet almost as popular as the little dog. But a rabbit must be kept in a clean environment to prevent any possible irritation to the skin. Keep your rabbit clean and healthy. The following is a list of things to remember when you have a rabbit:

1. Always keep your rabbit’s cage clean. Remove any litter every day.
2. Water is necessary for a rabbit. Be sure to provide an adequate supply of water to your rabbit.
3. Rabbits need exercise. Provide a large area for your rabbit to run and play in.
4. Rabbits need fresh air. Be sure to keep the cage clean and well ventilated.
5. Rabbits need a balanced diet. Provide a variety of fresh vegetables, fruits, and grains.
6. Rabbits need love and attention. Spend time with your rabbit daily to bond with it.

These are just a few of the things to remember when you have a rabbit. By following these guidelines, you can help keep your rabbit healthy and happy for years to come.
