Few of our readers realize the merits of the Wauchek strain of White Leghorns. While the owner has been building for size and egg production, and buying of the best to bring this about for years, he took another big step this year when he paid $60 and express for a single cockerel direct from Tom Barron, England. Many of our farmers are taking advantage of this breeding, and buying better chicks at home.

Five Cities Seek Uncle Sam's New Derigibles

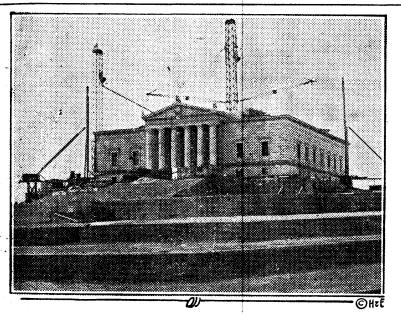

Uncle Sam is waiting for construction on two new giant dirigibles to begin, but as yet the ships are homeless. Baltimore, Md., Cleveland, O., Akron, O., Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal., are bidding for the lighter-than-air plant. The ships are to be built by a rubber company of Akron, O. The concern submitted the prize winning design in government competition. Dr. Karl Arnstein, inset, engineer, is largely responsible for the design. gigantic hangar, 400 feet longer than the one which covers the Los Angeles at Lakehurst, N. J., also must be constructed. Death Razes This Building

Death of Miss Mary Dunham, aged Chicago spinster, will shortly cause this unique house at the corner of Harrison street and Michigan boulevard, Chicago, it is believed, to be replaced by a 40 story hotel, which will take in the whole block. The house, for years surrounded by skyscrapers, could not be sold during the lifetime of any of the Dunham children, of which Miss Mary was the last.

107 BUSHELS OF CORN TO THE ACRE

A production of 107 bushels of shelled corn to the acre sounds like a story from the tall corn state, but Paul C. Clement, of Britton, grew that amount in 1927 on his Lenawee county farm.

Mr. Clement won the 1927 Michigan five-acre corn growing contest sweepstakes prize and first prize for region 1. Roscoe Waldron placed second in region 1, with a yield of 99 bushels per acre; Otto Wegner, Riga, with 93 bushels per acre, was third, and eGorge Bruce, Britton, with 86 bushels, was fourth.

In region 2, the placings were Fritz Mantey, Fairgrove, first; P. P Ferden and Son, Chesaning, second Max Desback, St. Louis, third; and George Kohn, Fenwick, fourth.

Fertilizers Important. George Rae, Bay City, was first in ion 3; and Burdette Crardall, Bellaire, was second. Commercial fertilizers played an important part in the production of high yields. Twenty-three of 29 men on the prize winning list used commercial fertilizers in producing their crops of corn. Seven men on the list planted their corn following sweet clover; alfalfa preceded the corn planted by five of the winners, and either June or Mammoth clover sod was used as corn ground by four of the men.

Tendency Toward Fertilizer Use

A marked tendency toward the use of fertilizers with higher percentages of plant food is apparent as the result of a campaign put on by the fertilizer industry and various agricultural agencies.

Some of the reasons for this are obvious. Less material is required in the high-analysis products. The fertilizer manufacturer saves in the number of bags he has to furnish, and the farmer makes a corresponding gain in hauling a smaller number of bags to the bear was an enemy of sheep and the farm and to the field. Smaller that because of its sly nature, it storage space is adequate, whether in the manufacturer's warehouses or in the farmers' barns or sheds. Both producer and consumer save in labor nvolved in handling the smaller bulk. Freight charges represent one of the principal savings. Even if it is desired to apply the fertilizer in more dilute form it is often possible to arrange for this on the farm using a farm waste to supplement the fertilizer. Formerly some fertilizers were sold with as little as 10 per cent of avail able plant food. Now many states have set a minimum of 14 per cent and are endeavoring to shut out some fertilizers, the formulas of which indicate that they would not be particularly suitable for the crops and soils of the state.

Many concentrated fertilizers are now available. To be classed as a concentrated fertilizer, according to chemists of the United State Department of Agriculture, the mixture must have 30 per cent or more available plant food. Mixtures have been made of such high concentration that they carry 70 per cent of active plant

Yellow Grosbeaks Pay Visit to Alma

A number of Alma people, among them Mrs. Harley Glass, Mis Frances Stitt and Mr. Stephen L Bennett, have been interested this week in watching several flocks of birds which are making themselves nate, in a restraint of trade case, now quite at home in the community. It is evident that they are strangers here and upon inquiry Prof. Mcthe verdict stands, Miss Doris Duke, Curdy of the College states that they are known as the Yellow Grosbeak and are very rare in this part of the most of the Duke estate, will find their country. Their native habitat is northwest of the Rocky mountains and in northwestern Canada and they do not as a rule come this far east.

Ornithologists think that some flocks may have been lost from the main group as their presence here is very out of the ordinary. Several pairs have been seen in in the Upper Peninsula, but this seems to be their first visit to lower Michigan.

In response to many inquiries as to how the corn-borer appropriation of $10,000,000 will be expended, the United States Department of Agriculture states that about half of this sum will be paid to individual farmers to reimburse them in part or entirely for extra work which they may have done to comply with the clean-up regulations.

Profit in Sheep For U. P. Farmer

The transformation of millions of dle acres in the upper peninsula into revenue producing and taxpaying ands through the medium of the sheep industry was the happy message Monday of Verne Freeman of the animal husbandry department of Michigan State college in a brief but vivid address before the Iron River Lions club.

Sheep, explained the speaker, are especially adapted to the upper penfisula region by rason of feed, climate, and cheap pasture, and the need of a stabilizing industry. Fed on roughage or grass crops which the upper peninsula grows abundantly and little grain, with only moderate capital needed for buildings, sheep, said the speaker, beckons opportunity both to the man who goes into the industry on a large scale and to the farmer who takes over a small herd as a side-line to intensive dairying and poultry raising.

Plunging in the sheep business, the sheep specialist cautioned against, advising rather a small start with flocks somewhere between 25 and 200 and a gradual growth once success has been achieved.

For, exclaimed Mr. Freeman, one man with the same opportunities will succeed while his neighbor fails, and before any sizable investment is made, it is best to test the adaptability of he sheepman.

Sheep raising, Freeman explained, is one means by which the upper peninsula farmer can utilize to good advantage his large timothy production for although sheep thrive bet ter on leguminous crops, they do well on timothy and other grass crops. Sheep, he said, require relatively little labor and with sound merchandising methods and ordinary care bring a good return at the pre vailing market prices.

Analyzing the sheep market and its susceptibility to cycles, Mr. Freeman predicted a strong market for several vears and a degree of safety for the man who bought breeders in reasonable numbers at this time.

He asked for an open season on bear, now closed in Michigan, saying never would become a tourist asset. Mr. Freeman conducted a successful meeting in the farmers' room of the city hall in Iron River last night after a visit to sheep farms Monday. He will conduct another meeting today at Swan lake before leaving the

The case developed from the unusual working of the will, in which Judge Sturgis stated that "to my son, David, for and during his natural life and to descend to his male children if any shall survive him."

David, the first child born in Sturgis, had two sons, James and Frank. James contended the entire estate belonged to him, as he was the only male child who survived, his brother Frank having died in Grand Rapids in 1915. The matter was taken into court and the circuit judge decided for him. It is the appeal upon which the supreme court just has ruled.

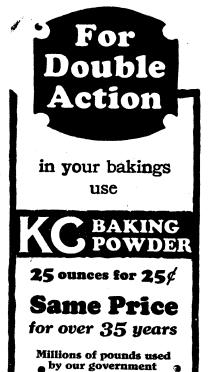

The decree means that James receives one-half the property and Frank Sturgis' widow and children the other half. They are Mrs. Anna Sturgis, Frank G. Sturgis, Myrtle Sturgis and Mrs. Ethel Hall, all of Grand Rapids, and Mrs. Elizabeth Huckle of Chicago.

''Phillips Milk of Magnesia'' Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. U. OF M. COLLEGE MAY START NEXT FALL IF REGENTS FAVOR PLAN

The general committee of faculty members of the University of Michigan which has been working on the proposed University College plan for the past two months unanimously adopted a plan of procedure at a meeting recently and it will be placed before the board of regents for final action on Thursday, March 29.

If favorable action is taken by the regents the University College will open this fall.

The plan as adopted by the general committee will abolish the present system of freshmen and sophomores. It places a two-year preparatory course between high school graduates and the professional schools and making the college of literature, science and arts a professional school. Only through the successful completion of two years of work in the university college will students be admitted to the literary college, or to other courses to which they are now admitted directly from high school.

These include the colleges of engineering and architecture, pharmacy, school of nursing and certain others.

The courses in medicine, law and engineering will not be changed greatly from the present. It is planned to still require an A. B. degree for admittance to the law and medical schools and to have engineering students continue to complete a fouryear course, two years to be spent in the university college.

The system as adopted differs considerably from the original plan, though all original details are embodied. The faculty of the new unit will not be organized into separate groups, to be independent of existing units, according to the plan adopted, but will be a part of the various departments of instruction now existing. This faculty will define requirements for admission to the university college and shall have the power of recommending certificates to be granted to students who have successfully completed the first two years of work. Students unfit to continue work in one of the professional schools will be eliminated.

Recommendations for admission to professional schools will be made by the faculty of the university college. An existing subcommittee will work out the curriculum, though the requirements for admission from high schools will not be altered at present.

Economic Loss from Disease Is Tremendous

The United States Chamber of Commerce in a recently published bulletin on the economic cost of disease estimated that the annual economic loss to this country because of illness was $2,000,000,000.

Another $2,000,000,000 has been saved annually by the reduction of the tubercuolsis rate since 1900, continues the bulletin. However, tuberculosis, a disease which is preventable, still costs this country from $500,000,000 to $30,000,000,000 each year in reduced earning power and payment for treatment.

In Michigan alone tuberculosis cause a loss in potential earning capacity of 3,041,000 during the year 1926. There were 3,041 deaths from the disease in this state during 1926, and if we figure that the average earning capacity of each individual is $1,000 (very low figure) we can see just how expensive tuberculosis is to the community and the state as a whole. This figure does not include the expenses of the illness itself —an item which averages at least $500 for each tuberculosis victim. In Michigan there are practically 30,000 cases of tuberculosis.

And yet this disease is preventable and curable. Case found in the incipient stages have excellent chances for recovery, providing proper treatment is followed, and other members of the tuberculosis individual's family can then be protected from the disease.

Because of this fact the National Tuberculosis association aided by its state branches is sponsoring a nation wide campaign for the early diagnosis of tuberculosis which will begin

Of 110 lives of children sacrificed Sept. 1, 1926, to Sept. 1, 1927, 32 were killed on Fridays against 11 each on Thursday and Sunday.

Total traffic fatalities in Detroit have increased 50 per cent in the past five years, according to Commissioner Brewer, while the number of child fatalities has decreased 15 per cent.

The commissioner attributes this largely to the development of municipal playgrounds and better supervision of children after school hours. Safety first education in the schools is also effective. Of the 110 Detroit child fatalities studied, 48 were of children between 4 and 6 years, too young to be responsive to this.

THE WORLD AND ALL

THE BOYS ARE SOUND

Six hundred boys in a New Jersey school were asked whom they'd rather be, if they could be someone other than themselves.

The vast majority answered that they'd be Lindbergh, if they could be anyone whom they might choose to be. Only two in all the six hundred chose to be millionaires. One would rather be Henry Ford, and another picked on John D. Rockefeller as his model. There were large scattering votes for Rogers Hornsby, Babe Ruth and other sport heroes.

I would like to convey this information to those Americans (and others) who are so pessimistic about the future of America. I'd like to convey this story to all those who think that the youth of our land are going to perdition.

Lindbergh is a pretty wholesome ideal for our boys to pick out for themselves. Those who think our boys are trained to accept money as the only criterion of success should take note of the fact that these New Jersey boys nearly all wanted to be Lindbergh, while only two chose millionaires' shoes as those in which they would rather stand.

I offer it as my guess that the boy who would rather be Henry Ford made his choice not because of Ford's fabulous wealth, but because of the automobile king's spectacular work in newing out a place for himself in the world, despite multifarious discouragements. And John D. Rockefeller wasn't such a bad choice, either. Any American boy should know this much about the elder Rockefeller: he was born poor and worked hard to get a start. He became, in time, the world's richest man, and since his wealth has become great he has given away many millions of dollars to improve the condition of the human race.

As for the baseball heroes and the College Students other stars in popular sports, it is natural for boys to admire them and to say that they would like to imitate them. A boy craves action. A boy Action and contests are good for the boy. They help to prepare him for the contest that he must wage in the world of men. He will find everywhere a contest going on. He will have to compete with others for a place in the sun, whether in school, in affairs of the heart, or in the struggle for advancement in business or professional life. It is wholly logical for the boy to admire the great baseball players and other sports heroes.

I don't believe we need worry lest the boys of the rising generation are going to the bad. Quite the contrary. They are going to make places for themselves in a world that they will make better than we've ever been able to make it.

At the door Peter Borden joined them. The eyes of father and daughter met briefly, and the glance which flashed between them established the community of their sorrow and proclaimed their alliance to make up to this man for the evil which had been done.

Peter Borden sat at the head of the table, his daughter opposite. Between them sat Bob Terry. He was dazzled by the napery, the gleaming silver, the softness and quietness. There came to him vivid, searing memory of the past three years: the thrice-daily feeding: a marching into a tremendous diring room where agate plates were already piled high nourishing but unpalatable food; where men sat on hard little stools and were denied the privilege of conversation. Three times a day for three years he had been fed, along with the rest of the pack-fed and dismissed. Meals had been horrible things, not because the food was not good and plentiful, but be-cause it had been the most animal-like phase of the silent world.

There was little conversation during the meal. Habit was difficult to shake off, and Bob had learned not to Borden and his daughter were awkward and ill at ease.

The situation amazed Bob Terry. Even in the old days he had never aspired to such luxury at this. Occaionally he had been a guest at the house because of his friendship with Lois and also because Borden had made great display of personal in-terest in the lad. But his manner of living had been modest, as befitted a young man who held a clerkship and hope for the future. Now— Coffee was served. Cigars and cigarets were handed to Bob. He selected a cigaret and at Borden's suggestion they adjourned to the soft glow of the living room and Croesus brought their coffee.

They smoked in silence. Lois was on the divan and Bob sat next to her. Peter Borden, sitting opposite, observed them gravely. At length he spoke, his voice uncertain.

"Bob," he said, "I wish to have a talk with you—in Lois' presence."

"Yes, sir."

"Three years ago-" The older man hesitated, then plunged ahead Three years ago I was instrumental in sending you to prison for a crime which you did not commit. He paused, evidently waiting for the young man to speak. But Bob was silent, his face set and expres-

But I am offering to do what I can—and I hope you will accept my offer. I am speaking before Lois because she, too, will have a part in it.

Borden paused for a moment, then lighted a cigar. "I wish you to enter my home—permanently—as a member of my family. I wish you to consider that whatever I have is yours. sider that whatever I have is yours. You have only to ask, and I shall give it to you. which was the single word—Private. Yet this was John Carmody's office and Carmondy was the sharp-faced man at the desk who deliberated with punctilious care between two brands of perfumed cigarets. He was dressed with a plainness amounting to se-

His private office occupied a corner the fourteenth floor of the First National Bank building and between it and the hall were other offices, those of hireling lawyers who attended to routine work for him, and of law clerks and of many stenogra-phers and typists and filing clerks. One did not gain an audience with John Carmody easily—and never unless he desired it. There were many who tried to blast through and always without success. There was rigid austerity for the timid and, if necessary, brute force for any who might harbor a deep personal ani-mosity against the acrid man in the corner room.

John Carmody had enemies: pow erful ones, for to be an enemy of Carmody's one must be powerful. Ostensibly the man was merely an amazingly successful practitioner in the field of criminal law; actually he was an omniscient power in city, county and state politics with a finger firm on the pulse of the under-world and the proletariat.

Personally, he cared nothing for the political limelight. He never sought office and would have refused it had it been thrust upon him. But it pleased him—and was of inestimable personal benefit—to control those who did hold office. tI is difficult to overestimate the value of knowing in advance just who will be on the jury in a vitally important case; it is of absorbing interest to a criminal lawyer to know exactly who the real criminals are—so that at times these men sought his services defensively, merely to close lips that might otherwise be used to assist the district attorney.

That was John Carmody: a rapier brain behind innocuous mask of bland friendliness; a master player moving his chessmen about the vast board of the state; a person who knew to the tiniest fractional part of texture which enabled him to invest am trying to show you that my motives were not petty.

They did not have the power to blacklist him from the city's exclusive clubs, nor to debar him from the best social circles. Socially, he was considerable of a lion. Men responded in spite of themselves, to the sheer power of the man, and women-

Only one or two of Carmody's most intimate friends—and none of his enemies-knew of the chink in the man's armor. They regarded him as inhuman, bereft of any distinctly masculine emotion; yet beneath the retiring exterior were veins in which red blood coursed hotly—so hotly, indeed, that on more than one occathe man. Where women were con-cerned he was not always bland and suave—and never negative. It was that which had sent Todd Shannon to jail. Carmody could have picked his own jury in that trial, and would have had it not been that he learned of Kathleen's intention to come into his employ. With Kathleen as his private secretary, he considered it more profitable to his own interests for Todd to be in prison. And so to prison Todd went—he and his niece filled with admiration for the heroic efforts of this great man on Todd; he half and Corned was left.

and his ability. Her admiration of his accomplishments showed in every look and gesture—yet in all the years of office intimacy he had never pierced the yeil of personal reserve. He was further away from the girl now than he had been when Todd Shannon first went to prison, and he had been too adroit, too much the master strategist, to risk disaster by one grand false move. He had never succeeded in convincing her that he was a mortal man and not a demigod, and flesh-and-blood women do not fall in love with gods.

The door opened and a man entered. He was a tremendous figure, oddly picturesque. Officially he was John Carmody's collection agent. Octually, he was Carmody's Man Friday.

His more than six feet of height bulked against the panels of the walnut door, broad and forbidding. The head, magnificently formed, was almost hairless and it glistened in the glare of the morning sunlight which streamed in through the east win-The jaw was that of a professional pugilist, the walk that of an overmuscled wrestler. But when he spoke, his voice came with a sense of shock.

The man whispered! There were some who yet thought that Willie Weaver's whispering was an affectation rather than an afflic-The thin, whistly syllables came queerly from the broad, firm mouth; they were startlingly at variance with the herculean figure and the cold, level eyes. Whispering Willie Weaver! A man and a fighter. A physical bulwark between John carmody's frailness and bodily danger. Not that Carmody was lacking in courage; but he did lack in strength, and that Willie Weaver supplied.

And now the whispering voice sighed through the room as the giant extended a newspaper. "Seen this, John?"

Carmody glanced at the headlines and smiled. "Bob Terry?"

No Cure Positively No Pay CANCER, BRIGHT'S DISEASE,

DIABETES AND TUBERCULOSIS have been classed among the incurable diseases so long that the general public takes it as a fact, and gives up alk hope when their doctor once pronounces either of the above ailments. This is all wrong.

There is not a case of any of the above ailments or any other blood infection that has not gone so far as todestroy some vital organ of the body but what can and are being cured.

With me, you have everything to gain and nothing to lose, as I sign a contract with each patient, agreeing that, if my Electro-Vitality Treatment fails to cure, it is not to cost one cent, and the patient is to be the sole judge.

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often Than Men

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature-colds, fevers headaches, biliousness-and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he de cided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's sion it had come near to betraying private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone strain. somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit on reepated buying, on one satisfied in your home,—where many live user telling another. There are thou-someone is sure to need it quickly. sands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases.
