Daylight Saving
This daylight saving plan,
Is a nuisance I must say,
A detriment to every man,
And I can't make it pay.
I used to get up at six o'clock,
Now I get up at five
I down my rolls and beat it
More dead than alive.
Four times each day I've eaten
Since this daylight saving plan,
Two hours less been sleeping,
Some saving I'll be Better go back to the hour glass,
And tell the time by the sands,
Than to keep on monkeying this way
By pushing ahead the hands.
I'm all balled up with time cards:
When I want to take a train,
I look at the clock on the corner
With a sad and muddled brain.
Glad will I be when the time is up,
And we switch them back once more,
With the hands all pointing just alike,
Be it one o'clock or four.
Arthur Nash.

Students-Citizens-Parents
We feel that it is unnecessary for students living in town to drive cars to the schoolhouse; it makes for congestion and more danger to the boys and girls. We also feel that it is unnecessary in the majority of cases for students driving in from the country to use their cars during the noon hour. There is enough traffic by the schoolhouse without adding that which is needless. We sincerely urge that all drive with moderate speed by the schoolhouse during the noon and recess hours. We might better be safe than sorry. To drive at a high rate of speed—the way some do—by the school is endangering the lives of boys and girls. We are doing everything we know how to do to reduce the risk, and with your cooperation we can reduce the risk to a minimum. Those who persist in speeding, taking no heed of the school warning signs are violating the State law, and should be punished accordingly.
Superintendent.
Card of Thanks
We are most grateful to all who assisted in controlling the fire at our farm. They surely fought well, and their efforts are greatly appreciated.

Humane Farmer Treats His Cows as Individuals

John Bertinshaw, Norton, Mass., dairyman, treats his herd of between 15 and 20 cattle as individuals. Each cow responds to a name, none is for sale, and upon Bertinshaw's death he has ruled that they are to be put to death as humanely as possible. Photo shows some of the herd. Inset is Bertinshaw.

French Engineer Designs Ice-Block Landing Fields

PHEASANT EGGS WILL BE FREE

Ringneck pheasants at the State Game Farm have begun to lay again. This year the Game Farm will produce some 40,000 eggs. Of these, about 10,000 will be used on the farm to produce birds for this fall's release and for next year's breeding stock. The balance, about 30,000 eggs, will be available for free distribution.

Applications for many thousands of eggs are already on file with the game division of the Department of Conservation at Lansing, and new applications are coming with every mail. At its session on April 6 the Conservation Commission authorized a new method of pheasant egg distribution, to go into effect at once.

In the past, instructions for hatching the eggs and for rearing the chicks as sent out with the eggs, were very brief, and many of the people who asked for and received eggs did not realize that pheasants require rather different handling than common chickens. As a consequence, the percentage of pheasants raised from the Game Farm eggs, and released in suitable cover, was too low to be satisfactory—especially since it costs about 25 cents apiece to get the eggs and pack them for shipment.

Under the new system for distributing the eggs, everyone who asks for eggs will receive a printed circular which tells in detail just what sort of nest, coop, hen and care is needed, what chick feed to use, and what common difficulties and enemies to look out for.

With these instructions will be sent a letter explaining the new plan, and a new form of application.

The new application requires that individuals who receive free eggs shall agree to follow the department's recommendations as to hatching, rearing and release of the birds, and to report to the department, when requested, as to difficulties encountered, eggs hatched, chicks reared, birds released, and otherwise co-operate in getting the best possible returns from the free eggs.

The most important change, under the new plan, is the department's efforts to supply "service" in connection with private pheasant rearing operations. The main idea is to help hundreds of thousands of farmers, sportsmen and other interested people so that they can, and will, raise and release more and more pheasants each year and with a high percentage of success. Pheasant culture is not really difficult but it is rather "different," and there are various tricks to it which are learned only through experience, and very few persons in Michigan have had such experience.

In order to make such pheasant culture "service" possible, the Department of Conservation will give preference in the allotment of eggs to closely neighboring groups of applicants who are located in high class pheasant territory. Then, several times during the season such groups will be visited by experienced men from the State Game Farm.

Short Wheat Crop Seen

The present prospects are for a short wheat crop in Michigan this year, according to the April crop report issued by Herbert E. Powell, commissioner of agriculture. The April 1 condition of Michigan winter wheat was, except for 1918, the lowest on record for this date; and the condition of winter rye was the lowest on record for April 1.

Wages being paid in Michigan for hired farm labor are practically the same as a year ago. Wages by the month were $41.75 with board and $58.75 without board. By the day the wages were $2.50 with board furnished and $3.20 without board. Farm labor seems plentiful throughout most of the state this spring, but wages demanded are still higher than many farmers can afford to pay.

Dairying Climbs As U. P. Industry

H. E. Dennison, field representative of the American Jersey Cattle Club, was with the rural boys' and girls' club train during its tour of the upper peninsula. Mr. Dennison believes that Michigan's phenomenal industrial development will eventually convert every cheese factory and creamery in the southern part of the lower peninsula into receiving stations for sweet cream and milk. The demand for these commodities from lower Michigan industrial centers is increasing at such a rate that the conversion will shortly become imperative, in Mr. Dennison's opinion.

He said that it behooves upper peninsula farmers and creameries to prepare for this change in the dairy industry.

"If Michigan is to supply its own demands for butter and cheese," says Mr. Dennison, "they must be manufactured in the north country. The entire production of milk and cream in the lower peninsula will be needed to feed the residents of Detroit, Grand Rapids, Flint and other cities.

"Detroit milk and cream routes now cover an immense territory in central and eastern Michigan. Truckloads of milk and cream go to Detroit from points as far north as the Thumb district. Kent county is getting ready for carload milk shipments to Detroit, and the latter city is competing with Chicago in that territory.

"Manifestly," concludes Mr. Dennison, "northern Michigan is destined to become a great dairying country, just as great and rich a country as many parts of Wisconsin now are. Her agricultural future is bound up with that of the dairy cow. You have every factor for successful dairying in the upper peninsula. Faster butter and cheese making by all means in your power. You will never regret it."

To Rebuild Packing Plant in Ludington; See Fine Fruit Crop

Ludington has been selected by Pelar Brothers of Chicago as the fruit packing center for Oceana, Mason and Grand Traverse cherry crops. Sidney Pelar, secretary, announces that work will be started soon to rebuild the Wolverine Packing house, partly destroyed by fire two years ago.

Ludington fruit growers say the prospects for a good fruit crop was never brighter at this season and Sidney Pelar states the company will pack 2,000,000 pounds of cherries in Ludington this summer. Fruit will be trucked from Shelby, Hart and Traverse City, he said.

Raising Minks

Minks can be raised in captivity successfully, and the quality of fur produced is no way inferior to that trapped in the wild. These animals are very prolific and when fed and handled properly breed and produce young regularly, their litters usually numbering from six to eight. Whether mink farming for fur can be made profitable is a matter for each prospective farmer to decide for himself. So far those who have made money with minks have done it through the sale of breeding stock. Some helpful suggestions on mink raising have been prepared by the Biological Survey and published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in leaflet No. 8-F, "Mink Raising," which is free for the asking.

Should Paint Every Three to Five Years

Spring is a good time of year to paint farm building and implements. Not only does paint improve the appearance of buildings, but it protects them from the weather and is the cheapest way of keeping them in good condition. Painting should not be delayed too long; if wood has begun to rot or iron to rust, the deterioration will continue even after paint has been applied. Outside painting should be done when the surfaces to be painted are dry and the weather is not too damp or cold.

Buildings should be painted every three to five years, sometimes oftener than this. New wooden buildings should be given a priming coat of paint as soon as possible and a finishing coat within the next month or so. Before exposure to the weather or to dampness, both the wooden and metal parts of farm implements and machinery should be painted. When painting outside surfaces, two or three thin coats are better than one thick coat. The United States Department of Agriculture in Farmers' Bulletin 1452-F gives detailed information on paints and painting.

Central State Mails Many Barberry Bushes

LANSING MAY

GAIN 10,000

Lansing is looking for a population increase of some 10,000 during the current year as the result of industrial expansions and an unusually heavy building program. With employment already topping 15,000 in the 18 leading plants of the city, there is a prospect that the Durant company will put on at least 1,500 men August 1 with a possibility of 4,000 by late in the month.

The Victor Body company, H. Jays Hayes' new concern, is expected to have 1,000 men at work by late in the summer. The Michigan Fertilizer company, a new Lansing enterprise, is beginning production and practically all of the established plants are running at capacity with a probability of a continuance of that condition all summer. Half a dozen large buildings are to be built, a $45,000 viaduct and several large paving jobs are listed.

How Much Water Should Baby Get? A Famous Authority's Rule

By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Plan Sanitarium In Mt. Clemens

A $300,000 sanitarium will be erected in Mt. Clemens this year, according to an announcement by Dr. Gustaf A. Persson, who is heading an organization to promote the project. Property for the building has been purchased on the Clinton River and construction is expected to start immediately. The sanitarium will cost between $300,000 and $400,000.

Start Work On $800,000 Durant Plant Expansion

Details of the addition to the Lansing plant of Durant Motors, Inc., work on which was begun by the H. G. Christman Lansing company, general contractors, recently, reveal that the Capital City unit of the corporation is to be made the largest, from the standpoint of production, of any of the Durant factories. The Lansing plant, when completed, will be able to put out a maximum of 1,000 vehicles a day as compared with a maximum of 700 machines daily for the Elizabeth, N. J. plant, 200 cars for the Oakland, Cal., plant and 100 cars for the Toronto, Ont., unit.

The addition, according to Harry L. Conrad, chief engineer of the Christman company, is to extend 500 feet north from the end of the present main building. This section is to be 62 feet in depth and a 400-foot wing is to project west with a second wing extending 400 feet further north. Both wings, also, are to be 62 feet wide. In order to care for the increased factory capacity, an addition will also be made to the present power and heating plant. The new section's total added floor space will be approximately 225,000 square feet. Total floor space of the entire factory will be about 825,000 square feet.

According to M. H. Krieger, factory manager, bodies for 21 different Durant models will be constructed at the Lansing plant when production starts again August 1. These lines include 11 six-cylinder models and 10 fours. All passenger car lines will bear the name Durant, the Star name being abandoned while commercial lines will be called Rugby. Export passenger cars will also go by the name of Rugby.

Cost of the entire expansion program in Lansing will be in excess of $800,000, it is estimated, making the total investment in the Lansing plant more than $5,000,000.

While it has been stated by Durant officials that an initial production of 300 cars a day would greet the completion of the expansion program early in August, it is admitted that the exact output of the plant will be determined entirely by sales. The sales organization is to be expanded in line with the increased capacity, it was declared by Thomas E. Jarrard, regional sales manager located at the Lansing plant, but exactly in what direction he could not definitely state.

U. of M. Golfers On New Course

University of Michigan golfers will play their dual matches this season on the 18-hole Barton Hills course instead of the Ann Arbor Golf club as in the past.

Barton Hills course will offer a much better test of golf than the short and fairly easy Ann Arbor layout and the practice at Barton Hills will prove much better for the out-of-town matches.

The outlook in golf this season is unusually bright with seven veterans from last year's squad returning. The experienced players available include Capt. Addison Connor, Ralph Cole and John Glover of Detroit, John Bergelin of Big Rapids, T. A. E. Vyse of Chicago, Harold Rhodes of New York and T. A. Goodspeed of Grand Rapids.

Promising newcomers include William Wenzel of Detroit, Charles Hall of Plainfield, N. J., Don MacKenzie, Charles White and William Bergner of Chicago, John Morse of Nashville, Tenn., and A. R. Cohen, St. Louis. Prof. T. C. Trueblood and Carlton Wells, former state amateur champion, will coach the Michigan golfers this season.

STATE DEPARTMENT OFFERS SERVICE TO RESORT PURCHASERS

Prospective purchasers of resort property or other lands to be used for recreational purpose in Michigan, will find in the economic land survey division of the state conservation department a service adapted to their needs. With maps that this division is now beginning to turn out, it is possible for an individual to sit in his own office or home and learn practically all the needed information concerning any piece of property.

Among other things, these maps reveal the type of soil, the lay of the land, whether it is cultivated, the number of dwellings in the vicinity, names of land owners and the extent of their holdings, the condition of the roads, and the accessibility of such public utilities as railroads, power and communication. When this department has completed mapping an area, every body of water is inventoried completely as to its adaptability to various uses. Even the bottoms and shores of the lakes come in for scrutiny.

Of course the department is only getting a foothold. The job is only started. At present complete information is available only in Ogemaw and Antrim counties, Alpena, Roscommon and Menominee, has been gathered and is in the hands of the printers. Anyone desiring complete information about any parcel of land in Ogemaw or Antrim county may have it by securing these maps. Maps are available for every township and may be purchased for a small sum.

By studying the map the prospective purchaser may see its detailed picture unroll before his eyes.

Pioneer Holland Plant, Built in 1857, Is Razed

The old Cappen & Bertsch tannery, Holland's pioneer industry, has been razed and only the basement walls of the big plant are left to mark the site of the big structure. The work is being done by a Chicago wrecking concern. The site, which covers a large city block, will be platted for commercial purposes.

The institution was launched in 1857 in a shed without a shingle on the roof and with 12 vats and a white horse at the bark mill. The payroll then contained the names of the two promoters and a 17-year-old boy in the person of William Dekker. Later it became a $1,000,000 plant.

Dekker worked at his trade as tanner for 57 years. He witnessed the start of the industry, its growth and still lives to see its destruction. Before the war the plant became the property of the Armour's. It was closed several years ago.

Belding Angles Are Assured Cannon's Pond

Work has started in preparation for the paving of M-66 south of Belding. Operations started at the dam at Cannon's pond. Word spread that the highway department, after saying they would save the dam and pond, which is a trout pond and wintering quarters for those fish, were to dynamite the dam and take it out.

Members of the Belding Sportsmen club immediately got busy to halt the work, but were assured that the work would not destroy the dam and that while the water in the pond was to be lowered six feet that it was to be only for the period of construction of the new bridge over the dam and that a screen would be put in to keep the trout and other fish in the pond.

The Belding Sportsmen club will ask the conservation department of the state to close both Cannon's pond and the creek to fishing for a year in order to protect the trout.

First Ferris Building To Start in June

The first construction work in the Ferris Institute million-dollar building and endowment program will start in June. The science building and gymnasium, costing $75,000, will be the first unit, and it is expected that it will be ready for occupancy the coming fall.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

STATE TO WATCH TOURIST HOTELS

West Michigan hotels, restaurants, lodging houses and other establishments catering to tourists this year for the first time will be under rigid state inspection. The work will be in charge of James De Young, deputy state inspector, department of labor, and two associates. The Grand Rapids Motor club will be actively engaged in the project as well.

"Hotels and year-round boarding houses always have been regularly visited," Mr. De Young said Friday. "But every summer a number of places spring up for the tourist business and there never has been anything approaching adequate inspection of them. In the main these places are all right. Sometimes they're all wrong. And the department feels any one who spends a considerable sum of money to pay Michigan a visit should have the state's assurance that he will be decently received." Orders for the work came from Eugene J. Brock, head of the department.

Plans are being worked out now to enable the inspectors to place a sign of some sort on each place approved, certifying that the establishment has been found sanitary, free of fire hazards and in every way fit to receive tourists.

RURAL WOMEN STUDY WAYS TO EASE WORK

Farm women have no union hours, but more than 1,500 of them in Michigan are trying out methods of lightening the tasks that they perform every day, according to the reports of home management specialists at Michigan State College.

First year courses in home management methods are being given in Kalamazoo, Van Buren, Oakland and Kent counties. Farm women in Wayne, Ottawa and Isabella are taking the second year course. Wash-tenaw county has a home furnishings class.

One of the means of making the day's work easier is to adjust the heights of tables and other working surfaces so that they are the correct height for the person working upon them. To test the height, stand erect before the table and place the hands upon the top. If the palms lie flat on the table while the person's arms are held straight and the body erect, the working height is correct.

Stoves can be placed on blocks and fuel boxes can have legs attached to raise them to a desired level. In lifting objects, less effort is required if both knees are bent in lowering the body to start the lift.

Church at Holland Plans to Celebrate 60th Anniversary

Grace Episcopal church of Holland plans to celebrate its sixtieth anniversary with special services June 10 and 11. Fr. D. D. Douglas, who has been in charge of the field for nearly five years, is writing an historical paper to be read on the occasion.

Speakers will include Bishop J. N. McCormick of Grand Rapids, Archbishop L. R. Vercoe and Dean Charles E. Jackson of St. Mark's Pro-cathedral in Grand Rapids, Fr. James Bishop of Kalamazoo and Fr. Wilkinson of Grand Haven. Provision will be made for a banquet June 11.

First services were held in 1868 in a select schoolhouse, provided by the late M. D. Howard and Heber Walsh. The present building on West Ninth St. is the third home of the churches. A parish house was built in 1924.

Sturgis Girl of 9 Presents Classics in Piano Recital

Jeanne Wright, 9-year-old pianist of Sturgis, who for several years has been playing in concerts and for the radio and last week won the state title for children pianists, presented a recital before a large audience recently.

She executed the various movements of the King Arthur suite and a concerto of Bach's with perfect ease and efficiency. Jeanne recently appeared before Ignace Paderewski in Chicago and was highly praised by him as one of the most promising young musicians he ever had seen.

Jeanne has been playing since the age of 3, when it was discovered she had a perfect sense of pitch.

Poems That Live

THE HUMAN SEASONS

Four Seasons fill the measure of the year;

There are four seasons in the mind of man:

He has his lusty Spring, when fancy clear

Takes in all beauty with an easy span:

He has his Summer, when luxuriously

Spring's honeyed cud of youthful thoughts he loves

To ruminate, and by such dreaming high

Is nearest unto Heaven; quiet coves

His soul has in its Autumn, when his wings

He furleth close, contented so to look

On mists in idleness—to let fair things

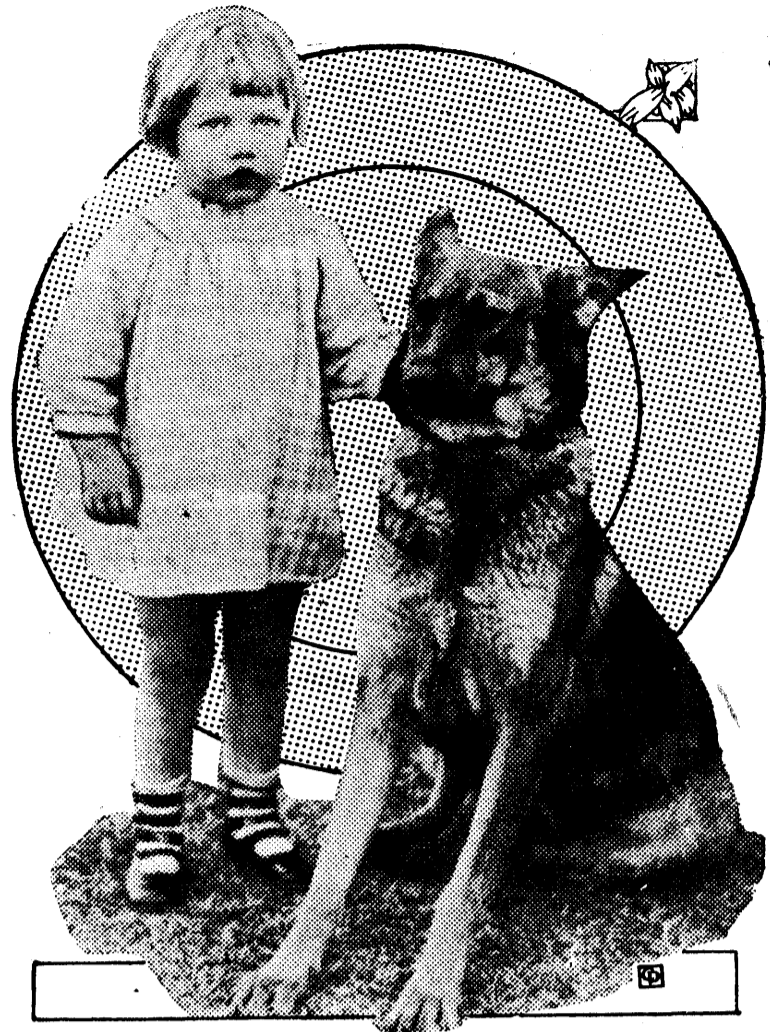

Pass by unheeded as a threshold brook:—

He has his Winter, too, of pale misfeature,

Or else he would forego his mortal nature.

—John Keats (1795-1821)

Drags Babe From Traffic Death

When Harriet Hagaman of Tulsa, Okla., grows up she will hear the story of how Petrolia Queen, her uncle's dog, saved her life by dragging her from the path of a speeding auto. Harriet, three years old, was playing on the walk under the watchful eye of the canine, when she toddled into the street in front of the car. The dog leaped out and dragged her back. Petrolia Queen and Harriet are shown above.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE PLAN IS APPROVED BY U. OF M. REGENTS TO BECOME EFFECTIVE IN 1929

On September 1, 1929, the University college plan as outlined by President Clarence Cook Little of the University of Michigan will go into effect in all schools and colleges within the institution which admit their students directly from high school, with the exception of the School of Nursing and the College of Pharmacy.

The board of regents has approved the plan stating in the resolutions on the subject that "to them it promises to be for the best interests of the students of the university."

The college is to include all students of less than junior standing in the present colleges of the institution. A committee will be named to work out the details to bring the plan about by the opening of the 1929-30 term.

President Little has been a great exponent of the plan and has led the movement for its approval. It will be recalled that the faculties of the Colleges of Engineering and Agriculture and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts rejected the proposition when placed before them for approval.

Dr. Little believes that many of those who voted against the plan when submitted will become converted to its advantages before it takes effect.

Rural Fire Trucks Cut Losses $21,788 In Charlevoix County

According to a recent report of the state department of insurance, fire losses in Charlevoix county during the year 1927 decreased $21,778.98 from the previous year. In 1926 a total of 67 fires resulted in loss amounting to $58,919.96, while in 1927 the loss resulting from 68 fires showed a total loss of only $37,140.99.

Addition of modern fire fighting equipment by the cities of the county is declared to be responsible for the decrease. Two Charlevoix county cities have purchased fire trucks with pumping equipment during the past year, and these trucks have been available to rural communities, where the greater decrease in loss from fire has been noticeable.

Here's a Model Girl for You

Eighteen, good looking, interested in sports, but never in a motion picture theater, never at a dance, never had a drink, never puffed a cigaret, such is the record of Miss Myrtle Dillingham of Ponca City, Okla., daughter of Rev. and Mrs. M. STATE CAMPS FOR MICHIGAN YOUTHS

Boys' camps, conducted in the state parks for the first time this year, will again be a feature of the summer program, P. J. Hoffmaster, superintendent of state parks, has announced. The camps were highly satisfactory last season, hundreds of boys in the state making use of the camps for their vacations.

Superintendent Hoffmaster declares that these camps may soon develop to be a year around feature, for during the past winter the buildings were utilized by winter campers. Boys, particularly, have asked for the use of the camps and they were turned over to them. They spent week-ends there, sleeping on the floor in sleeping bags, preparing meals on stoves already in the camps and enjoying the winter landscapes of the parks.

The department is anxious to have people of the state know that these camps are open to any group of boys or girls that may desire to utilize them. There was an impression last year, in some quarters, that only Boy Scouts were eligible to have these advantages, but this was incorrect. Any group of boys or girls may reserve one of these camps by filing an application with the state division of parks at Lansing. The dates desired should be clearly stated and the department will look on the schedule and will notify the applicants as to whether it will be possible to entertain them on the requested days.

During the winter thirteen different groups used the camp at Highlands, Oakland county, in Dodge Brothers state park, No. 10.

Oceana Boys and Girls Enroll in Calf Clubs

Much enthusiasm is being shown in Oceana county in the enrollment of boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 20 in the Oceana County Calf club. Calf clubs have been carried on there for the past six years and many boys and girls have small herds of pure-bred cattle that they have developed themselves. The clubs compete each year at the county fair.

The date set for the starting of the club project is June 14, and enrollments are being sent to County Agent Carl Hemstreet up to that time.

Scottville Girl Gets Illinois U. Position

Miss Helen Cox, Albion college senior from Scottville, will become an assistant chemistry instructor at the University of Illinois next year. Miss Cox, who has made a fine record as a chemistry student in her course here, is the first Albion coed to become connected with a university immediately upon leaving college.

Ionia Boy Picked For All-State Orchestra

The fifteenth chair in a section of forty first violins in the all-state orchestra was awarded to Bertson Yates, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Lee Yates, who spent the last two days in Ann Arbor taking part in elimination contests in which members of the organization were selected.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT

The rice O'Brien is a complete "main dish" in itself. You may serve steak or chops with it if you prefer, however. Did you ever try creamed radishes? Try them when you are tired of them raw.

Broiled Chops Rice O'Brien
Creamed Radishes
Lettuce with French Dressing
Orange Charlotte
Coffee

Today's Recipes

Rice O'Brien—Three cups of cooked rice, three tablespoons of minced onion, a green pepper minced, salt and pepper and four slices of bacon. Dice the bacon and saute together with the onion and pepper, add the rice and toss in the pan. The rice is difficult to brown and is really not expected to brown. The bacon and vegetables should be nicely sauted and the whole dish piping hot.

Orange Charlotte—One-fourth box gelatine, one-third cup boiling water, juice of one lemon, one-half pint whipped cream, one-third cup cold water, pour in boiling water and add lemon juice, sugar and a little grated rind. Cool. Add cream and pour in mold, lined with sections of oranges.

SUGGESTIONS

Washing Corsets
Prepare a good, strong suds, and scrub the corset thoroughly with a small scrubbing brush. Rinse in several waters and hang in the sun to bleach, if the corset is white. The laces will be like new if they are taken out and washed separately. The corset may be starched a little and both the corset and the laces ironed.

If you prefer to wear a simple silk and elastic band, these can be squeezed through warm suds and the elastic part scrubbed with a small brush. It is as important to keep a corset scrupulously clean as any other item of a dainty woman's underthings.

SELLING YOUR SERVICES

Have you thought about selling your services? Maybe you call it "landing a job," but, in reality, you are seeking to sell your services to anyone who has the price.

"The price" doesn't mean merely money. Money isn't all you want. You also expect a healthful place to work, work that is worth doing, associates that are respectable, and a chance to improve yourself. Ask the bidder to guarantee you these things before you strike a bargain with him.

But have you really any service worth selling? Are they ready for the market?

When a merchant or manufacturer has something to sell, he usually arranges it or packs it in some especially attractive form? Are you doing that with your services? If not, do you think they will sell at a fair price? It is a well known fact that apples have been shipped into Michigan clear from California and sold to Michigan people at fancy prices, while Michigan fruit with far better flavor lay rotting on the ground. Why? Because the local grower had not learned to pack it properly and prepare it for sale in the way the far-off crop was prepared. What about yours?

Then, are you bringing what you have to offer to the attention of those who are buying that kind of service? Folks with other things to sell have to do it; why not you? Why not organize a systematic plan to do that very thing; to bring definitely and pointedly to the attention of everyone who MIGHT be able to use you the fact that you are available or will be at a certain date. Don't wait too long: remember "the early bird."

It pays to plan carefully. An advisor in an office that had charge of placing young people in positions tried this experiment. To every second person, just as they came to her, she gave a few simple, practical pointers on how to make a good application, as she sent them out to apply for this or that position. Just those little things like attention to personal appearance, neatness, good manners, first impressions, etc. To the other half she gave no such instructions or assistance. In every other respect the two groups were treated alike.

She kept track of the results. She discovered that 90 per cent of those with the coaching secured the jobs they applied for and only 60 per cent of those without it. That means an even 50 per cent advantage to you if you give proper attention to those little things. Rather worth while, isn't it?

Sometimes a word of sound advice or counsel at such a time is worth a year of training. Talk things over with parents, teachers or other suitable friends. If I can be of assistance to any of you, feel free to ask me any questions at any time.

LIVING AND LOVING

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

DID HE FORGIVE?

What is forgiveness? Do you forgive a friend when you say, in fact, "Yes, I forgive you, but I want nothing more to do with you?" That is practically what this young man did.

"Dear Miss Lee: I became engaged to a wealthy girl a few months ago and she enjoyed the reputation of being a fine girl. We were to be married soon, but to my great surprise, she admitted to me that she had been wrong and asked me to forgive her before we were married, but I told her frankly our engagement was broken, that I could not retain my self-respect and marry her. Now she is heartbroken. But I feel sure you will approve my course, as there is no other course for me.

"JIM."

So you are the "one without sin," Jim, and you hurled the stone. Well, it's all right, as you felt as you did. She wouldn't have been happy with you, I merely wonder what you would have expected if cases had been reversed and you had been the transgressor. It took a good deal of courage for a girl to make such a confession, didn't it? And courage is a pretty good thing to have in a wife. Don't flatter yourself you forgave her, however. Your lips said that and your actions said no.

"Dear Miss Lee: I am a girl 18. I love a young man in a certain town, which I left about four months ago. When I was there he gave me as many good times as any boy could give a girl. He really made me love him. I wrote to him twice and never received an answer. I think some one got the letters before he did and opened them, and never let him know anything about it. Should I write to him again in care of someone else?

"BROKEN HEARTED."

I think it is quite improbable that someone else opened his mail. He probably is one of those people who hate to write letters. I would not write again. If you still think he may not have gotten your letters try to find out through some other channel.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have a girl friend who is the same age as I am, 19. My mother has a restaurant, and Bobby, my girl friend, has been working for her. Last week they had a quarrel, and mother doesn't allow her in the house any more. Is it all right for me to meet her other places and be with her, or to go to her home? Her mother says I am welcome any time I want to come. JIMMIE."

Well, Jimmie, I don't know that it is necessary for you to take up your mother's quarrel, unless the girl was abusive and loyalty to your mother demanded it. Why not try to act as mediator and get them to make up?

While I don't believe in promiscuous kissing, I don't believe there would be any harm in kissing your very good friend goodbye, Sis.

Star Gazing

New York—Of 10,000 girls who knock at the gates of the movies, a few by the law of averages will be admitted conditionally to face a long and perhaps hopeless struggle for recognition; and one—one in 10,000—will be welcomed with open arms and made famous overnight.

Anita Page is one in 10,000. Anita, whose real name is Pomares, but who arrived in Hollywood as Miss Rivers, is one of the girls who went west to work for the movie company organized by Harry Thaw. The company blew up almost immediately, and there seemed to be no hope of Anita ever getting another chance to achieve film fame. But—

Malcolm St. Clair, director, happened to see her. He knew that really beautiful girls never film well, but she seemed to have that elusive screen quality, personality, and so she spoke about her to his friend, Sam Wood, another director. Wood phoned and invited her to the studio. After talking to her, he proposed a film test. Because of it she was immediately chosen as leading woman for William Haines in "He Learned About Women." While this was in production she was cast opposite Lon Chaney in "Easy Money," and assigned her to one of the three starring roles in "Dancing Daughters."

So within three weeks after her entry into Hollywood she was on her way to stardom.

Anita is 17, a blonde with big blue-gray eyes. Her folks, who have Pomares as family name, live in Flushing, Long Island. Her father is an electrical contractor.

When she was 15 she announced she was tired of high school and intended to go to Hollywood and get into the movies.

Her mother, hoping to cure her of the idea without further delay, took her to the Long Island movie studio. The girl was given a bit in a production, and instead of being "cured," became more insistent that her parents allow her to have a film career. The studio closed soon after.

Then Anita happened to be chosen for a part in a picture Harry Thaw was backing. Thaw picked her and one screen test was enough—Anita Page was in the movies. Hollywood's latest promising find was born plain Miss Pomares. She changed that to Miss Rivers, but the movies have made her Page.

another girl for star material when he decided to transfer operations to the coast. Mrs. Pomares went along with her daughter with misgivings, but still hoping that Anita would be "cured."

"Well, Anita still wants to be a great movie star!"

WEEK OF MAY 20

General Farm Outlook: "Let a little sunshine in" will be the song of the farmers of Michigan during the greater part of the week beginning May 20. We base this statement on the fact that our records point quite strongly towards cloudy and rather wet weather for this time. Temperatures will probably make some sharp moves both up and down the thermometer, but with the average trend favoring readings normal to slightly below. The ground, in many cases, will be too wet to work good, but many of the days will be favorable for growth. There will be continued improvement in grains, meadows and pastures and the germinating qualities will be better, most likely, than last week.

Weather for the Week: General showers are expected to cover Michigan on the closing days of last week and the opening days of this. The early days of this week will experience much cooler weather. In fact, the danger of killing frosts at this time will be very great.

All during the middle days of this week the weather will experience no definite storm currents, although we believe there will be some unsettled or threatening conditions during this period. However, we believe the temperatures will be more or less high, especially by Wednesday or Thursday.

During the latter days of this week there will be general storminess of rain and strong winds supplemented with some rather severe wind storms. Some of these latter, even this early in the season, might verge on the tornado type of storm.

Warm weather will continue more or less steady and general in the state until the early part of next week, at which time the readings will drop to more seasonal readings.

"Other men might have been more kindly three years ago. It was a great pose of his—just like all his fine talk when the trouble occurred." He rose and paced the room. "I haven't taken a thing that I'm not entitled to. I don't feel that I have indebted myself to him in the slightest degree. I cannot help hating him—and I always will. And any time he feels that I should bow down and acknowledge his greatness because he has made a paltry little gesture of amend—then I'll get out. But I'll never thank him. What he has done for me hasn't hurt him a particle. He is wealthy—and all he has done for me can be counted in dollars. Now, it's for you to say what I shall do."

Her eyes softly luminous, were fixed reproachfully on him. She was strangely stirred and intensely uncomfortable. This was the first time she had plumbed the depth of Terry's bitterness against her father, and she was frightened.

"It can't be counted in dollars, Bob. You're wrong. He erred honestly, and he is making honest restitution." "Bah! He makes me sick. He does; no need for you to look at me that way. And he hasn't been kind: I guess my one hope when I got out of prison would have been work—I've learned that since I went into Carmody's office. But he took even that necessity away from me and—"

She had risen now, and was facing him. But her eyes were no longer soft. They were blazing as she rallied to the defense of her father against this unjust attack.

"I'm ashamed of you, Bob! You've let this thing eat on you until you're not even human—"

"Was I human in prison?"

"That is all past." "To you, perhaps—not to me." "You're not giving father a fair chance. You've determined that you hate him and always will: you don't credit him with a single decent emotion—when, as a matter of fact, there isn't a man in the world—" "More conscientious!" he interrupted harshly. "God! how I hate that word. As for me, I'd a damned sight rather be human than conscientious."

CHAPTER XXIV

Anger fled from her, and in its place was a great dignity which awed him. Her voice no longer trembled. "Some day, Bob—when time has salved your wounds—you're going to be ashamed of all you've said tonight. I never thought—"

"No one ever thought I was entitled to human impulses. They didn't think so down there, when I was working in the cotton mill. They didn't think so when I marched into meals three times a day and sat elbow to elbow with murderers and thieves—the only men I could speak to—the only men from whom to pick my friends. I wasn't human then—and if I'm not human now, then it's that three years that did it." He stood over her and stared through eyes which were narrowed to pin points. "I'm not ashamed of myself and I'm not sorry. But I'll never believe that your father is sorry, either; he hasn't the capacity for being sorry for me, because he himself doesn't know what I've been through. He doesn't know what it is to suffer. And some day—when he has suffered—perhaps then I'll believe he understands—and regrets as I want him to regret."

The girl shuddered. She was seeing Bob Terry in a new light—as a viciously vengeful figure, awful in the brutal force of his logic and his unswerving, unreasoning hatred.

"I didn't know you hated Dad like that?"

"I am merely trying to explain that it is not unnatural."

"Todd Shannon and his niece?" "Yes." He was silent for a long time. And your father?"

"He would be glad." "If I thought you really meant that, Lois—"

"I mean it, Bob. Your friends are welcome at any time. In fact"—and it seemed that her heart missed a beat—"I should like very much to meet your friend—and also Miss Shannon."

John Carmody's face was set in rigid lines of repressed fury. He leaned forward at his desk and stared at the hulking, bald-headed figure of Whispering Willie Weaver, and with each phrase he pounded the desk top with a small, bony fist.

"All that stuff is technical, Willie. I'm sick and tired of reports on the financial condition of the Berkeley Steel Company."

"Sure, Chief, sure." Willie Weaver's soft, hissing voice was intended to be soothing. "You asked for all the dope—"

"And I've got it. Now forget that sort of thing. I have something definite on my mind—"

"—and that is, Chief?"

"I want to get Borden and get him hard!"

The ghost of a smile flickered about Weaver's broad lips. "That ain't exactly news to me, Chief. But it seems like something has come over you. Haven't you always preached patience? Why not be patient now? Things are breaking our way—"

"To hell with patience! I want results."

"Golly!" Weaver lighted a fresh cigar and stared with narrowed eyes at the thin figure of the dynamic little lawyer. "Something has certainly gotten under your skin. Of course, it ain't none of my business, but—"

Carmody's lips pressed into a straight, white line. "You're no fool, Willie."

"Ain't I?"

"Haven't you seen a few things for yourself?"

Weaver crossed one massive leg over the other. He held his cigar at arm's length and watched the fragrant blue smoke curl ceilingward. His low, whispering voice was enormously impersonal. "You do ask such awful embarrassing questions, Chief."

Carmody frowned. "You do understand—certain things, then, eh?"

"We-e-ll—you said yourself that I ain't a fool. And nobody ever accused me of being exactly blind."

"Good!" A dark flush stained Carmody's cheeks. "We understand each other. Things aren't going to my liking; I'm out to get Borden—"

"Of course not. What I want is to smash Bob Terry—and the harder and sooner I smash him, the happier I'll be. Is that clear?"

"Couldn't be any clearer." Weaver appeared to reflect. "The kid is a natural tool against Borden. The idea seems to be that we let him settle your grudge against that bird—and at the same time involve himself."

"You've got the idea. But I don't want to wait indefinitely. I'm tired of waiting. My nerves are all shot to hell. With Terry hating Borden as he does—"

"Man! he hates him, all right! Sometimes a guy might think Terry was weak, kind of drifting with the tide and taking things easy. Then you get a flash of what he's thinking, and it shows that instead of being weak he's damned strong!"

"Right! Now what's to prevent our using his strength and his hatred?"

"Uh-huh? What? Answer: Nothing is: How?"

They were silent, staring at each other, foreheads corrugated with thought. From outside came the chime of a distant church sounding the mid-night hour. The single overhead light bathed the office in a soft glow and the two men—one large and heavy, the other small and intense—seemed a strangely sinister pair.

Carmody threw out his hands in a sudden abrupt gesture.

"I've got to get suggestions from you on that, Willie. I've thought until I can't think any more. But I know that things have dovetailed too perfectly for there to be any slip. Every man's got a vulnerable spot. Find Borden's. Get him through Terry. Terry will do it: he's a single-minded man. He hasn't got a thought in his head except that he hates Borden. He may get over that. We don't want him to. You've got a dozen ways of working him—through Todd Shannon for one thing."

"Yeh—Todd Shannon. A prime, sentimental dumb-bell."

"Dumb enough—but not too much. Damn it, Willie! All we need is the idea. I don't want to wait much longer. There are reasons—Keep after this! And remember—"

Carmody stopped speaking. His lean face worked convulsively and his fingers worked like talons.

"Remember this, Weaver: I want to break Borden. But Borden isn't the one I'm really after. Understand?"

"Yeh, Chief."

"The man I'm out to get is Bob Terry. And by God! Willie—I'll get him! I'm going to send him back to the state penitentiary!"

CHAPTER XXV

Now that they were actually coming, Bob felt that the whole thing was a mistake. He moved uneasily about the vast, softly-lighted living room, and tried futilely to vision Todd Shannon and Kathleen in that environment.

Peter Borden was seated in his favorite chair under the reading lamp, absorbed in the day's market news. He had said little, but Bob felt a surge of gratitude—the first hint of kindness toward the older man—when he saw that dinner clothes had been eschewed for this particular occasion. And Lois—all that Bob could tell was that she was simply and quietly dressed; he was too entirely a man to understand the hours of meticulous care which had gone into her toilet, nor could he know that she had studied scrupulously every detail of her ravishing simplicity.

No one was happy or at ease. Borden's thin face was inscrutable; Lois was nervous. Bob was frankly regretful. His invitation to Todd and Kathleen had been a gesture of defiance—as he explained to Todd at the time. "They're bluffing, and I'm calling their bluff."

But they had not been bluffing, and Bob was impressed by their calm acceptance of the fact that they were spending this evening in their own home, with his former cellmate and the niece of the ex-convict. Borden merely said that he was glad Bob had invited his friends; Lois actually was glad. This was her first—and only—opportunity to meet Kathleen Shannon, of whom she had heard so much. She was prepared to hate the girl—and to treat her nicely. After all, she was, in a certain way, an ally in the rehabilitation of Bob Terry.

Chiefly, however, Lois was curious. What manner of girl was this who was niece to an ex-convict and private secretary to the shrewdest political manipulator in the state? What was the bond between her and Bob?

Lois did not know exactly what she expected: a rather loud creature, of course, and one untutored in social niceties. All her life Lois had been sheltered from the ruder contacts; persons existing on Kathleen's plane had been creatures of hearsay whom she had never been sufficiently interested in to investigate. And Lois was entirely too human a person—and too wise a one—not to realize that in his first meeting under the eye of Bob Terry, she had all the advantages of her own background. She belonged here in this modest luxury; Kathleen would be entirely out of her element.

At first Todd violently opposed the visit. But to his amazement, Kathleen overruled him. And Todd was too ponderous a thinker to analyze her reasons.

Kathleen was engaged to Bob Terry—and with a woman's intuition she sensed a dangerous rival in Lois, not so much because of what Bob said about her as because of what he did not say. She, too, had noticed the change in him since regular work in Carmody's office had restored a measure of his self-respect. Before, he had avoided Lois just as he had avoided every one who might by any chance have patronized him. Now he was seeing more of her, and enjoying her companionship.

What Kathleen believed was far from reassuring. She learned that in the old days Bob had worshipped Lois from afar—the attraction of the clerk for the beautiful daughter of his wealthy employer. That there had been nothing personal in their contact—that they had moved on different social planes—were things to worry about because the change had been so radical.

Now they were in daily contact in the intimacy of a home shared. She knew by hints from Bob that Lois was almost too vitally interested in his career. She was sufficiently well versed in masculine psychology to understand the tonic effect of association that Lois was dramatizing Bob beyond all reason, and she knew that he could not remain indifferent to her acceptance of him as an intimate.

And so she prepared for the visit in a spirit of desperation. She loved Bob with a love deeper than he could possibly understand. He had roused in her all the mother instinct and had fanned into flame the long dormant woman. He was a powerful and appealing figure, and he was her kind. She suffered with him, because she knew how deep the cut had been. She saw him as he was before he went to prison: responsive to the slightest impression. Even yet he was impressionable to an unusual degree, but only Kathleen truly understood the agony that he had suffered. And only she knew how he would inevitably respond to the influence of a girl who had once been a fairy dream.

The doorbell rang and Peter Borden rose. Bob again experienced a sense of gratitude toward the man whom he hated; he appreciated the thought which caused Borden to greet their guests instead of confronting them with the dignified figure of Croesus.

Bob and Lois followed the older man into the reception hall. They saw him open the door. Todd Shannon's tremendous figure bulked there. He was clad in a new and vivid suit of reddish brown and he was twisting a felt hat in his enormous hands.

"Mister Borden live here?"

The host's hand came out. "I'm Borden. And this is Mr. Shannon, I believe."

Their hands clasped. A slow grin crossed Todd Shannon's lips. "Gosh-amighty! What a place you got here."

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take

This Hotel turned backward to Old Time Hospitality

Hotel efficiency reached a vanishing point in whittling guest rooms down to hall-room size, while people continue to grow to full height and weight, and ever more expansive in living habits and travelling needs.

So the new and beautiful Detroit-Leland turned boldly back in its architecture, to man-size rooms, to wide, airy corridors, to numerous, ample and inviting public rooms and lobby arrangements.

Here, luxury is homelike. Here is a cuisine that has already become famous as Detroit's finest. Here is a management and service that seems to anticipate the guest's every need, and yet, so quiet and unobtrusive that there is no suggestion of officiousness.

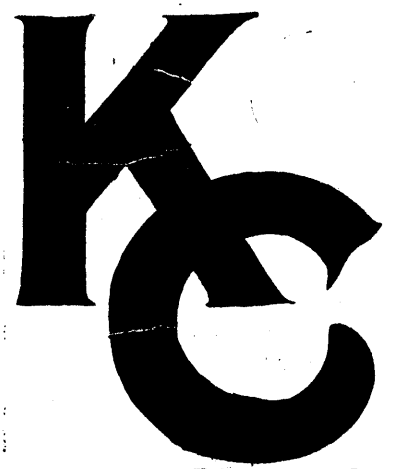

700 Large Rooms with Bath 85% are priced from $3.00 to $5.00

WHITE LUNCH

This is of Great Interest to You READ IT!

Because of the fact that we need our money to expand our growing bean business and because we simply cannot stand the load being continually made heavier by carrying so many outstanding accounts we have decided that on and after May 21, 1928 we will conduct our business on a strictly cash basis. Terms will be cash or bankable paper.

By doing this we can accomplish several things we have long wanted to eliminate in the conduct of this business; we will no longer have to make collections, send statements, keep a lot of books, pay interest on borrowed money and charge off a certain amount of money each year to overcome bad accounts. Consequently our service will be much better and our prices will be much reduced, because of these many savings which will be passed on to you by eliminating these costly overhead items.

While this may work a hardship for a little while on a few, yet it will be only a matter of a short time until they can adjust themselves

We have worked hard to build up this business and make it a good market to sell produce at. This you know by the distance we get beans from. Now we want your cooperation in the building up a good cash retail business. Its to your interest, so let's have your support.

to this new method of buying and start saving by conducting their business on the solid basis of paying as they go.

We pay the spot cash for produce no matter whether for a dollar or several thousand at a shot and any fair minded man can see that we cannot continue to do this and conduct a general credit business.

Our coal business will be conducted also on a cash basis. We are planning and expect to have something along price lines to interest you in the purchase of your coal for cash. Due to delivery we plan on asking that the last load of coal be paid for before getting another.

How Early Buying Helps You

Today, "Milkmaker," made by the State Farm Bureau, costs more than $2.80 per sack in solid carloads before unloading. Our price to you is $2.70, that's why our feed business is increasing. We give you the benefit of our buying power. If we had to buy on today's market you would be asked $2.90 or more per sack.
"Milkmaker" is the best 24 percent feed on the market, we think. The contents are all on the tag and the amount of each ingredient as well. Truly an "open formula!"
