Ma and I

By Arthur Nash

On the level,
Like the devil,
We do go.
Around the curves
We gently swerve,
Don't you know.
With the green fields gliding by
And our hair is all awry,
We do go without a sigh
Ma and I.

Up and down life's hills together we do go,
Growing older and much bolder as we go

To mansions in the sky;
We go onward till we die,
Taking nothing where we'll lie;
Ma and I.

Obituary

Mrs. Nellie Strong Wilder an aged resident of this village was found dead at her home Wednesday morning by neighbors who went to call her. She had died as she was preparing for bed Thursday evening June 19.

She had been more feeble than usual the week preceding her death and neighbors had kindly taken her meals to her doing other small things to save her strength although she steadfastly refused to leave her home and smilingly insisted she would be all right.

She passed, as she had wished, in her own home, quietly as she had lived. Her bright cheerful smile with which she met her reverses throughout her life will be long remembered by her friends.

She was a member of the Congregational church and had lived in our village since 1873 and has been a widow since 1907. She was 83 years old.

DETROIT-N. Y. AIR MAIL SERVICE IS STARTED

Inauguration of overnight airmail service between Detroit and New York was started recently when the first plane flew over the newly laid out Detroit-Toledo airway.

Following the initial flight from Toledo to Detroit, the plane left Detroit for Toledo at 10:05 p. m. to connect with the transcontinental plane flying the night route between Chicago and New York. The new airway has for its terminals Ford Airport at Dearborn and the new municipal airport at Toledo, which is now called Transcontinental Airport. A Pitcairn Mailwing plane, a single-motored plane capable of flying 115 miles an hour, is being used in the service at present.

The mail is being carried between Detroit and Toledo by the National Air Transport. Beacons light the route between the two cities at night. Cargo space in the plane is lined with duralumin and asbestos to safeguard the mail in case of a crash resulting in fire. National Air Transport is developing a new fireproof sack for use in carrying airmail, according to Ray W. Ireland, general traffic manager.

Detroit airmail, posted before 9:15 p. m. each night, will arrive in New York the following morning at 6:15 a. m. Mail posted for Boston will arrive in that city at 7:15 a. m.; for Minneapolis, at 11:40 a. m., and for Washington, at 11:05 a. m. Postage on airmail is 10 cents for each half-ounce until August 1 when the rate will be lowered to five cents for the first ounce and 10 cents for each additional ounce.

Ford Employing 116,324

Employment at the three Detroit district plants of the Ford Motor Company continued its upward climb, reaching new high records. On June 7 the three plants employed 116,324, a net gain of 893 over the preceding week. Individual plants reported the following totals: Fordson, 78,045, a gain of 121; Highland Park, 33,567, a gain of 772; and Lincoln, 4,712, no change from the preceding week.

America Honors These Men on July Fourth

ORE PRODUCTION SHOWS DECREASE

In volume of production in 1927 the iron-ore mining and pig-iron industries of the country showed decreases as compared with 1926. The total iron ore mined in 1927 amounted to 61,741,100 gross tons, a decrease of about nine per cent from 1926. Michigan ranked second in 1927 in volume of iron ore mined by individual states, showing 15,075,079 gross tons, exclusive of ore containing five per cent or more of manganese, against 15,248,254 gross tons in 1926. Minnesota again led the states in 1927 with 35,461,138 tons, but its decrease was much greater than that for Michigan. The value of Michigan's iron ore shipped in 1927 was $37,135,364 and amounted to 14,532,831 gross tons as compared with $43,932,982 and 16,699,984 gross tons in 1926. During 1927, 625,532 gross tons of pig iron valued at $12,527,993, were shipped from Michigan as compared with 638,292 gross tons valued at $13,180,113 in 1926.

The Play Truth
Lady (interviewing applicant): "Why did you leave your last place?"

Maid: "Oh, I didn't mind it; it was the mistress who didn't like it."

Start Mile-Long Ditch for Detroit River Tunnel

Following its financing by a syndicate headed by the Guardian Detroit Company, construction of the $23,000,000 Detroit-Windsor tunnel was started when a dredge began lifting river sand for the long under-water ditch in which the 5,100-foot steel tube will lie.

Operations were started with befitting ceremonies on both sides of the river. The first scoop of sand was lifted on the Canadian side in the Grand Trunk railroad yards. The entire official party then crossed the river on the dredge to Detroit, where the ceremony was repeated at Randolph and Woodbridge streets.

The officials who participated in the Windsor ceremony were: Colonel W. H. MacGregor, vice president of the Detroit & Windsor Subway, Inc.; Governor Fred W. Green of Michigan; Hugh Finlayson, minister of lands and forests of the Dominion; Mayor C. E. Jackson of Windsor; George Hanrihan, president of the Windsor Chamber of Commerce, and Captain F. W. Martin, Canadian business man.

Those who participated on the U. S. side were Governor Green; John C. Lodge, mayor of Detroit; John C. Nagel, president of the council; Frederick C. Haynes, president of the Detroit Board of Commerce; Judson Bradley, executive vice president of the Detroit & Canada Tunnel Company; Hugh Finlayson; Representatives Clarence McLeod and Robert H. Clancy; Wilson S. Kinnear, engineer, who directed the construction of the Michigan Central railroad tunnel, and Ole Singstad of New York, chief engineer of the Holland tunnel under the Hudson river. Mr. Kinnear and Mr. Singstad are consulting engineers on the Detroit-Windsor tunnel.

Charlotte to Furnish Officers New Outfits

City appropriations were decided upon for the coming year at a recent meeting of the city council. The total amount the supervisors will be asked to spread on the tax rolls is $57,000, divided as follows: General fund, $5,750; police fund, $2,500; sewer fund, $5,000; street fund, $7,250; fire department fund, $8,000; park fund, $1,000; paving fund, $11,000; library fund, $2,000; lighting fund, $12,000; sidewalk fund, $2,500.

The mayor and city clerk were instructed to extend the time of payment of the city note or notes falling due at the Eaton County Savings bank for a period of 90 days.

It was decided city officers should be furnished with new uniforms, guns, handcuffs, holsters, belts and billies.

Antrim Utility Sold

K. B. Matthews, Ludington, announces the purchase of the Antrim Light and Power Company by the Michigan Public Service Company, part of the Insull interests. The Antrim Light and Power Company operates a hydro-electric plant on the Cedar river with an annual capacity of 4,000,000 kilowatt hours. It serves Mancelona, Alba and the contiguous territory.

FORD GETS OLDEST BROOKLYN HORSE CAR

To add to his collection of fiddles, wayside inns and spinnets; Henry Ford now has a horse car for the Dearborn Museum. It is the oldest of its type in existence and was presented to the automobile king by H. Hobart Porter, president of the Brooklyn City railroad, in the presence of a distinguished group of railway and city officials and Ford company representatives.

The car, known in its time as a "Jigger," is a one-horse model and was originally placed in service in 1868. For twenty years it operated on the cross-town line of the Brooklyn City railroad from Hunters Point, Long Island City, to Erie Basin in South Brooklyn. In 1888 the car was taken from this main line, being replaced by a two-horse car type of vehicle, and placed in service on a route from Hunters Point to the 34th street ferry at the foot of Borden avenue. Here under the guidance of its ancient driver, Michael O'Connor, long since passed away, it operated until 1897, when this route was discontinued.

Unearth Bones of Redman at Ionia

While excavating for a garage in the rear of the Bradley mortuary, workmen unearthed portions of human skeletons, bones enough, and of such differing size, as to indicate they were the bones of more than one individual. The bones had been in the ground many years, at the depth of the ordinary grave. The oldest inhabitant has been unable to shed any light upon the time of burial, but it must have been in the early days, as the land purchased from the Indians by the first settlers of the city was near the spot where the bones were found.

Holland Resident Has Musket Dated 1822

The Holland Furniture Market, dealer in second-hand goods, has an army musket that bears the mark of 1822. The musket is equipped with a bayonet and steel ramrod and weighs about 18 pounds. It was sold by the Schoon brothers, a relic of their grandfather, James Schoon, pioneer tanner. Schoon, it is believed, received it from one of the Holland veterans upon his return from the Civil war in 1865.

Schoon tried to enlist two or three times in the Civil war but was rejected and kept the musket as a relic. The weapon is well preserved.

Jackson Company Creates New Radio Receiving Set

Production has been started by the Sparks-Withington Company of Jackson on a radio receiving set which will permit the Federal Trade Commission to operate every broadcasting station now in existence, and which will eliminate virtually all the troubles which now beset receivers and broadcasters, according to President William Sparks. The new circuit, which possesses a filter feature and an automatic tuning device, permitting the use of low wave bands as well as high wave cycles, will create a number of new wave channels, it was stated, and if the radio commission allocates its 700 broadcasting stations, will permit of the perfect operation of all successfully.

Orders have been received by the Jackson company sufficient to quadruple the business of the company for the summer months of 1928. The new system of broadcast reception is known as the Equasonne circuit. It was perfected after two years' work by the Sparks-Withington Company and Lester Jones of New York. Technically, the selectivity of the new circuit is constant throughout the broadcasting band, the tuning being just as sharp at 1,500 kilocycles as at 550 kilocycles. Another unique feature is that only one stage of radio frequency amplification is required, the output from the detector being sufficient to operate a 25-watt power tube up to the full capacity of the latter.

The new filter or selector of the Sparks set, it was explained by Prof. Roy S. Glasgow of Washington University, St. Louis, affiliated with the engineering department of the Sparks-Withington Company, makes short wave reception desirable, and while its advantages may not be apparent at this time, with a new allocation of broadcast units, there should be no reason why the 700 stations now in existence should not be able to operate satisfactorily. This unit selector works independent of all tubes.

The automatic tuning and amplification unit, the professor explained, is a wide departure from present day radio frequency type sets. By the arrangement, advantage of the capacity of the tubes is gained, and the circuits are fixed in constancy. Five tubes are used in working the new circuit. Selectivity is also increased, insuring excellent tonal qualities from low meter stations as well as from the higher ones, the latter of which are now drawn on heavily by the radio listeners.

Announcement of the new creation was made at Jackson recently to about fifty newspaper and magazine radio writers from all parts of the country. In making the announcement, President Sparks said it was his chief aim to give every man in Jackson county a job through his efforts as a manufacturer.

License Plates Made to Standard

Automobile license plates for 1928 now conform to one standard in the 48 states, the District of Columbia, Porto Rico, Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands for the first time, according to the American Automobile Association.

Practically all cars come through production equipped with standard plate mounting brackets, so it is no longer necessary to file, punch, drill or otherwise mutilate plates in order that they will fit, thus eliminating much of the annoyance, irritation and bother to motorists when changing plates.

The standard plate was recommended by the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Then there's Ari S. Tophanes. "Dr. Butler now needn't feel so ruffed about the misprint: 'Dr. Nicholas Murray, butler of Columbia University'."

"How's that?"
"Well, this article says, 'Some of the greatest poems of ancient Greece were written by A. E. Schylus'."

GOVERNMENT TO IMPROVE GRAND RIVER

Estimates are about to be made by the United States engineering department of the cost of removing the training walls from Grand river below Grand Rapids that small boat navigation may be maintained without the present hazards.

Capt. Charles E. Belknap, who proposed the removal of the wing dams some time ago, won the support of the Dwight Lydell chapter, Izaak Walton League of America, and the plan, Engineer Adams stated, "is a forward looking step in rehabilitation of the river front, following the cleaning up of river conditions made possible by operation of the proposed sewage treatment plant."

The engineer added the commission should officially recognize Capt. Belknap and go on record as approving his recommendation to the war department. "It is quite obvious that Grand river from Grand Rapids to the mouth of Bass river will not be used for the carrying of freight or vessels requiring a depth in excess of three or four feet," said the engineer. He said, also, the soil banks thrown up at the time the dredging was performed should be removed from the bed of the river.

Would Push Travel Across Michigan

As the result of a recent meeting of business men from Howard City, Lakeview and Fremont to discuss the proposition of organizing a cross state highway association to promote tourist travel between Muskegon and Saginaw over M20, M82 and M46, it was decided to hold a luncheon meeting at the Lakeview hotel to perfect an organization.

Edmore, Six Lakes, Lakeview, Howard City, Fremont and other towns along the proposed route are expected to have delegations at this meeting.

The Answer to a Doubt

By DUFORD JENNE

(Copyright.)

WHILE she was waiting for the Eastern express that was bringing Clyde for his first visit, Marjorie sat in her car and pondered the situation; in more than one way it looked a bit dubious.

She had met Clyde in an eastern city, had liked him from the start, and it had been only a brief step to love between them both. Now he was coming from his eastern home to visit her people at the western ranch; and just how he would be taken troubled her.

She thought of her rugged father, and the husky, rough and ready outfit at the ranch, and then of her fiance. She would love him in spite of their attitude, but in his slim, blonde gentleness, his perfect grooming, there was an open mark for the men at the ranch. He was far from a dude—yet was he?

The great express slid with grinding wheels to a stop, and from the pullman Clyde alighted—slim, perfectly garbed, his blonde, wavy hair shining in the sun as she ran up to him. He kissed her in his gentle way.

"Well, here I am, my dear, out in the wide open spaces, and I'll say they are wide!" he suggested.

"They will seem wider when you reach the ranch," she replied—and then wondered if some unhappy presentiment lay behind her thought.

She sent the car swiftly over the rolling miles to the sprawling ranch, and, as the day was fading, drew up to the hacienda. Her father came to meet them, his big form looming over her slight lover. His greeting was cordial and kind, but with her intimate knowledge of the tones of her father's voice she sensed his disappointment.

Later on, after Clyde had gone to his room, she said to her father, "Well, dad, don't you think you'll like him?"

He swung her up into his arms. "Kittens, the main thing is how much you like him! He looks like a clean, fine lad who will always be good to the woman he loves; but—he—er—never went into athletics, did he?"

She was a bit exasperated at her father's attitude, and she wanted to scold him for it—all men couldn't be football heroes or prize fighters!

Her next trial came when Ben Lane, the superintendent of the ranch, came in for his next day's orders. Ben's bronzed face was open in his frank and generous welcome to Clyde, but the cowboy's eyes held a little twinkle of amusement as his hand swallowed the easterner's.

Ben lingered at her father's invitation, and, as the three men chatted, Marjorie realized what a vast distance there was, after all, between the one she loved and these men trained in a harder world. She knew her father had hoped she would marry some man of that world, but she knew in her heart that she had finer reasons than her father ever dreamed why she loved the blonde lad chatting so easily with him.

Because she knew them, she knew something would be hatched up to try out Clyde. She protected him the next day, but, on the following, she discovered that the deed was done. Her father had suggested to Clyde that he and Marjorie ride out to the painted bluffs. She was a bit angry, but there was nothing to do but see it through. So she made her preparations, but with fear in her heart for Clyde who she knew had never ridden in a saddle.

When she came out the scene was set. Her father was on the porch, a twinkle in his eyes; the men in the bunkhouse had drifted out, each seeming to be busy at something, but all actually out to see the fun; and there was Ben leading up a saddled horse. Marjorie gasped. It was "Bony"—one of the meanest bucking bundles of horsehide on the ranch. Ben's face was innocent, but Marjorie hated him with all the hate of which she was capable. The scene was set; to try to save Clyde now would be to humiliate him.

She mounted her own favorite roan, and Clyde was helped into the saddle by Ben. Then the fun started. The buckskin turned into a rearing, tearing, jumping whirl of horse and man, up in the air and down on four stiff legs, around in dizzy circles, out straight away, away, then a sudden stop; the dust rose and swirled. Marjorie pressed her hands against her heart. But the slim, blonde-headed figure stuck—and stuck—and the buckskin began to slow down—to waver—under command.

She heard her father's awed voice beside her. "Well, by Gawd!" And his meaning was not profane.

Clyde brought the buckskin to the porch and said simply, "All ready, Marjorie, if you are."

A gust of cheers swept up from the bunkhouse. Clyde acknowledged them with a grin.

The minute they were out of sight she halted him, and said with wonder, "Clyde how did you do it?"

He chuckled. "I spent three solid months under an old army officer before I came out, learning to ride everything that wore horsehide; and I learned—believe me!"

She pulled his head over and kissed him, and far down in the blue of his eyes were two bright glints; and she knew that beneath the velvet of his gentleness and kindness was the steel of a real manhood.

Plant of Life and Death

Mandioca, or cassava, which will grow in almost all hot countries near sea level, is a tall, handsome plant with large tuberous roots. There is perhaps no other plant in which life and death are more strangely blended. Cattle get fat on the leaves and stalks, while the roots ground into pulp make farina from which a bread is baked. We eat cassava in the form of tapioca, yet the raw juice of the roots is a deadly poison, 35 drops of which will kill the strongest man in five or six minutes. This juice, however, fermented and boiled, forms a drink which is refreshing, and not unwholesome.—London Mail.

The Borgia Poisons

A French doctor, Jagot, claims to have discovered the principle of the mysterious poisons with which the Borgias made away with their enemies. One strange thing about these poisons was that they work in such subtle fashion that even physicians could not state with positiveness that any had been employed. It now seems certain that the Borgias used two poisons, one dissolving slowly and stealing gradually through the system, while the other was a soluble preparation of arsenic working instantaneously. Both preparations were unquestionably arsenical in composition.

Important Omission

The mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respected lady of his acquaintance, who in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance.

His native politeness prompted him to gloss over a defect, and after a moment's reflection, he wrote among the items of personal description: "Eyes dark, beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

Lacking

A country man on a railway station platform went up to a slot machine, which bore the inscription: "Pull the handle with a jerk." He inserted a penny, then began searching anxiously for something on the machine.

A porter passed just then. "Hallo," he said, "what's the matter? Won't it work?" "I dunno," replied the country man. "It says 'Pull the handle with a jerk,' but I can't find the jerk to pull it with!"—Weekly Scotsman.

Judge of Probate

Time Is Valuable

It is very wonderful to see persons of the best sense passing away a dozen hours together in shuffling and dividing a pack of cards, with no other conversation but what is made up of a few game phrases, and no other ideas but those of black or red spots ranged together in different figures. Should not a man laugh to hear any one of his species complaining that life is short?—Spectator.

Curfew Calls for Quiet

The curfew tolls more than the knell of parting day in the Swiss canton of Berne. It rings at eleven o'clock in summer and nine in winter to warn motorists that the householders want to sleep and that heavy trucks, vehicles carrying more than eight passengers and motorcycles should scurry for their garages and remain until 4 a. m.

Expressive Mouth

The mouth, apparently, is the most expressive feature of the face. In the psychological laboratory of Johns Hopkins university, photographs showing various emotions were taken and cut so that the eyes and mouth were separated. More students were able to define the emotion by the mouth half than by the upper part.

Eyes as Delicacies

The eyes of various fish and animals are relished as articles of diet in many parts of the world. Fish eyes are considered a great delicacy in the West Indies, where boiled salmon eyes are a favorite dish in northeastern Asia. The eyes of sheep are a popular food with some of the peoples of Asia Minor.

Nautical Term

The word "holystone" denotes a piece of soft stone used in scrubbing decks. The term is supposed to be derived from the fact that decks were usually scrubbed on Saturday as a preparation for Sunday inspection, church, etc.; hence the phrase "holystone and holystoning."

Science Befriends Skunk

Scientists now declare that the skunk is not a bird and egg-eating animal as commonly supposed, naming grasshoppers, crickets, beetles, etc., as its chief foods, while mice, rats and ground squirrels also go to make up their diet.

When Lights Were Dear

The expression, "The game's not worth the candle," arose when candles were expensive and card-playing for money was prevalent. Small stakes meant that the illumination came to more than possible winnings.

WEEK OF JULY 1
 General Farm Outlook—Rainfall is expected to be unusually plentiful over most parts of Michigan during the week beginning July 1. As a result haying activities will be hindered or stopped almost entirely. The soil in most counties will be too wet, especially over the heavier soils, to receive proper attention and the crops will become weedy. Wheat, rye, oats, pastures and meadows will continue to improve and potatoes, beans, beets and truck will progress favorably in most cases. Temperatures for the week will average seasonal.

Weather for the Week—The opening days of the month and week in most parts of Michigan will be unsettled to stormy with many heavy showers and rain storms. Coupled with these storms there will be some heavy wind and electrical storms. The probabilities of tornadoes are also strong at the beginning of this week and again at the end.

During and around Independence Day the weather is expected to be mostly fair and warm.

About Thursday some parts of the state will experience short storms of wind and rain with the weather clearing rapidly. However, at the end of the week the real storm center is expected with its warm weather, showers and local winds and rains.

July Weather—The month of July as a whole in Michigan will develop more than the usual amount of precipitation. During the first half there will be numerous extremes noted in the storm conditions with some rather sudden changes. As the month progresses the extremes will be more noticeable in location; that is, the state will be more divided. Our figures seem to show that the northern part of the lower peninsula will receive a greater amount of precipitation than the more southern counties. So strong will this influence be that the effects will run over into the early part of next month as well.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore.

How Much Water Should Baby Get?

A Famous Authority's Rule

By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

The Outer Gate by Octavus Roy Cohen

1927, Central Press Ass'n., Inc.

When the City Trust and Savings bank opened its doors, Bob Terry was there. He proceeded to the vaults and rented a small box, giving the name of Edward C. Mack. He signed the identification card in a sprawling backhand script, amazingly unlike his usual handwriting. Ten minutes later he left the bank—without the bonds.

He did not emerge directly from the bank into the street. Instead, he went through the lobby of the office building in which the City Trust was located. He felt that there was no immediate danger, yet somehow a feeling of regret persisted. A change of mood came over him. It was as though he had stood for a long time at the crossroads—then had made his decision. And now he was not at all sure that he had taken the right road.

The thing had come so suddenly. There had been no opportunity for sane and connected thinking. Yet now that he knew he held Borden's future in the palm of his hand the idea was not as sweet as he had fancied.

Actually, however, he felt safe. His own fear was mental—and of himself. He was not easy in spirit. He tried not to think of Lois. Perhaps, he reflected, she would never suspect him. He wondered what was occurring at the Borden home. It was Tuesday morning: Peter Borden would inevitably have gone to his safe for the bonds. They were to have been taken to the bank this morning. Bob was glad he had left the house so abruptly.

"I wish I knew what happened," he thought miserably.

Lois Borden stood with her back to the window and watched her father make his fourth unsuccessful search. His thin figure seemed pitiful as he stooped with forlorn hope before the decrepit old safe, and when he turned her heart went out to him.

He had aged ten years in an hour. His face, usually so ruddy, was haggard and deeply lined. His shoulders were stooped. In his eyes was a hunted light; his manner was one of complete bewilderment and unutterable pain.

"No luck, Dad?" She tried to make her voice brave.

"No, dear. They're gone." Every muscle in the girl's body was taut. All through her father's meticulous search she had been fighting a battle with herself—a grim and bitter fight. On one side was her duty—to the other—Bob Terry. She was too much her father's daughter to evade the truth.

"Sit down, Dad." He seemed old and broken. He obeyed without protest. Suddenly he had lost his dynamic force and was leaning on his daughter.

She did not seat herself on the arm of his chair as he had hoped. Instead she drew up a chair opposite and sat staring into his eyes. There was a strange power about her; a tightness about the usually soft lips which bespoke determination—and hurt.

"You put those bonds in there yourself Saturday night?"

"No mistake?"

"No, dear. I worked at my accounts again yesterday morning and the package was still there."

"The safe hasn't been tampered with?"

"No. Whoever opened it used the combination."

"Well—" She drew a deep breath.

"Who did?"

Peter Borden did not answer at once. And when he did, it was with pointed evasion.

"I cannot know that."

and for you; that he was ashamed, and that he regrets it now. There was no bravado about him. I won't believe he is a criminal. I won't believe it—And I'm not making the old mistake, Dad. Something else happened."

"What?"

CHAPTER XXXVI

"Do you remember that Bob came in last night just as we were going out with Bruce?"

"Yes."

"He told me he was tired and intended to remain at home. But he lied."

"Are you sure?"

"Certainly. When we got home he was out. That meant nothing; he has always come and gone as he pleased. But this morning he took pains to explain to me that he hadn't been out all night. He didn't know that I saw him come in; that I was worried and sat at my door until I saw him go into his own room at about 1 o'clock this morning. That's how I know he stole those bonds, Dad."

Peter Borden shook his head. "I misjudged him once, Lois. I'll never do it again."

"What are you going to do?"

Borden raised his pain-filled face. "The only honorable thing: call a meeting of the directors and report the loss."

"What will happen?"

"I don't know—You see, dear, these bonds should have been put in the vault Saturday. But I was busy. The raising of the security gave me the opportunity which was vital to the bank. Instead of going to the bank I stayed with my figures until the bank had closed. Even then I didn't worry. I brought the bonds home; I've done things like that before. But, dear, now that those bonds have disappeared, what I did amounts to criminal negligence."

She was too honest to argue. "They won't blame you—not that way."

"Perhaps not. They have known me all their lives. It seems impossible that they will think I have stolen. Even Jonas Merriwether wouldn't think that—and $100,000 of that money was his. He is bitter."

"What will he do?"

"I don't know. I don't seem able to think this morning. It is all too sudden and too ghastly. I only know that it is my duty to call the directors together immediately. When I hear what they have to say—I'll know more."

He rose slowly. All his vitality was gone. The hour had broken him. Even yet he did not entirely grasp the enormity of the situation. There was no way of making restitution. Aside from his home, he owned nothing in the world save his interest in the plant. And the plant was not solvent; it couldn't be for another two years of successful operation. The directors were losing faith in it. They had seen it pledged to its last dollar, and twice they had advanced money from their personal fortunes to tide over the periods of stress.

They had reached the point where they had made their last loan. Borden himself had invested every available dollar in the plant. There were others in the same position. And Merriwether, the only man of them who could actually afford the loss, was the one who accepted no loss lightly.

Borden knew that he had been criminally careless. And with that hurt was the acknowledgment of responsibility for whatever Bob Terry might have done.

Lois watched him walk from the house. Usually he radiated the zest of living. Today he was an old man, weak of step, uncertain of movement.

Lois' heart was torn with doubt and fear—and love. But her fighting spirit had never flamed brighter. She went to the telephone and called Carmody's office, asking that Bob Terry be summoned to the phone.

"Yes?"

She fancied that his voice was uncertain.

"No-o. I'm afraid I don't. It doesn't seem reasonable or logical. Whatever Dad had was yours. He has told you that. Right now he is facing a financial crisis, but meanwhile there is enough for everything you want. Later, he will be successful; there will be plenty of money. It is yours for the asking. Why steal from him?"

Bob shuffled his feet awkwardly. Somehow, there was no sense of triumph here. Instead of feeling heroic, his sensations were those of the small boy caught in the act of meanness.

"I want your father to appreciate what I went through."

"Don't you think he does?"

"No! He couldn't. All his life he has been sheltered and protected. Little business cares, perhaps—but nothing real and stark."

"What good does that do you?"

"Satisfaction!" Bob was trying futilely to lash himself into a fury. He only succeeded in feeling contemptible.

"It will satisfy you to ruin him?"

"Yes."

"Very well." She arose and started from the room. "If that is the way you feel about it, I won't argue with you. I won't discuss details. I won't talk about myself—or about what this means to him, or the ghastly needlessness of it all. I take it for granted that you have been well advised and that the bonds are safely hidden. And as for you, Bob—I hope you'll get all the happiness from this that you expect. For your sake I hope it—but I don't believe you will."

She paused briefly in the doorway. Terry rose and started across the room.

"Lois! You don't understand—"

"Is my understanding essential? Haven't you done this yourself? Isn't this the explanation of why you accepted a home in my father's house? Isn't it?"

"Yes."

"You've waited for this, haven't you? You have worked toward this goal. Very well; now you have attained it. But it doesn't feel pleasant, does it? Oh! don't answer. I can see the truth in your face, and it isn't at all what your lips would say." She walked a few steps toward him, slim and regal and inexpressibly beautiful.

"But you'll be disappointed in one thing, Bob; Dad will take his medicine like a man. Whatever the future holds in store for him because of this—he won't whine. That's one thing you have never known about him, Bob Terry: he's a man."

The boy was miserable. He had wanted to talk to Peter Borden—to gloat over him; to work himself into a fine dramatic frenzy. Even with Lois he would have welcomed bitterness, a flood of hatred. Her calm, quiet understanding, her analysis of his brain—that was the thing which disconcerted him and robbed the situation of all triumph.

CHAPTER XXXVII

"You expect me to be sorry for him, Lois? Was he sorry for me?"

"Yes."

"A lot of help that was. So damned sorry for me that he sent me to the penitentiary. Let me rot there. Get this straight: whatever I've done now is justified."

"Of course. I haven't said it wasn't. I have only argued that it is unnecessary. Brutal, even."

"No more brutal than what he did to me. He is innocent. Well, so was I. He'll go through precisely what I did. I don't expect you to understand. Be as sane as you like; you still can't understand. Even your father doesn't. But he will. And he'll understand because he's innocent."

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

TATTOOING PIGS
 There are so many changes in this world—changes to do something different. If you don't believe it note this: The scientific committee of the Large Black Pig Society of England is offering prizes to anyone who can present an effective inking scheme for permanently tattooing black pigs. Don't say the world isn't full of unusual opportunities.

KEEPING AHEAD
 A doctor in a small town in Illinois has bought an airplane to use in emergency cases in rural districts. Here is a physician who doesn't think he has to move to a large city to amount to something. He has vision and imagination, and he is going to keep ahead of his times.

LEISURE
 When parents pay as much attention to their children's spare time as they do to their jobs they will bring up better children. Too many fathers and mothers have only one kind of discipline—the discipline that insists on getting the job done. There's a road from spare time to character and grown-ups ought to know the way.

NOTICE
 Don't ask anybody to notice you. Do noticeable work.

BORES
 Don't pass up a bore too soon. Get at him in the right way, suggest the right line and you may discover that he is interesting. Let's not be too quick about locking the door or sending out word that we're "in conference."

STUDY YESTERDAY
 Before you begin to paint pictures of the world today in comparison with the world of yesterday, be sure that you have your history on straight. Be sure that you have learned something about the world of yesterday. There may indeed be evidence of a coming decline in civilization. This writer is inclined to think there are. But so far—in the present years—the state of mankind in the most enlightened countries is far happier than it was three or four or five hundred years ago.

NOT GLOOMY
 A Chicago orator paints a gloomy picture of the world. He asks for the "re-establishment" of justice and fair dealing. And a Chicago newspaper man sets out to answer him. Says the defender of today's times and today's life:

"Compare the Roman empire with its complete domination by wealth and family. Compare the England of Charles II with its utter cynicism and moral degradation. Compare the United States of Grant's administration with the United States of today. Would anybody trade the farmers of America today for the peasantry of Europe a hundred years ago?"

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often Than Men

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Y. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. It is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly.

Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home—where many live someone is sure to need it quickly. We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

High Easy Lift

A Big Advantage

Here's an improvement in mower construction that appeals more strongly to the user than any other improvement made on a mower in many years. Its high easy lift...an advantage found only on the

John Deere Mower

Get on the seat of the John Deere Mower and operate the lift. You'll be surprised at the ease with which it handles.

By exerting only slight pressure on the foot lift you raise the bar high enough to pass over the ordinary obstruction, and when you put the hand lift into use, the bar is easily raised so that the inner shoe will pass over any obstruction that can be cleared by the doubletrees.

A Carcass that is Trouble Proof

A building is no stronger than its foundation. The carcass or body is the foundation of a tire. Supertwist Cord Carcass explains the astonishing ability of Good-year's All-Weather Balloon to absorb punishment. Supertwist S-T-R-E-T-C-H-E-S-I! It is just as strong as old style cords. But it stretches farther before it breaks--stretches and recovers like a rubber band. Blows that would break a carcass composed of less flexible cord do not affect Supertwist. And no other tire has Supertwist. It is patented, an exclusive Goodyear achievement. Here is the culmination of Goodyear's research for more than 25 years, a trouble proof carcass. Stop in and let us show you a real balloon tire. It costs no more.

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES

We are very anxious to improve the quality of the potatoes in the vicinity of Bloomingdale, Gobles and Kendall; therefore have purchased a carload of Certified White Rurals from Cadillac potato growers, to be distributed at cost, namely:

$3.75 per 2 1/2 bushel bag

This should greatly improve the quality of the potatoes if properly treated with For-maldehyde or Semason.

Semason is a preparation more simple to use and recommended by the State Experiment Stations. One pound can sells for $1.65 and will treat 20 bushel. If you want to boost your home town, raise better potatoes by planting better seed.

The price we pay for potatoes will be governed largely by the quality. You surely can't afford to plant common seed when you can buy certified at $1.50 per bushel.
