WILD BIRD IS REAL FIGHTER

Walter Hastings, tall, genial official photographer of the Conservation Department, has photographed the fighting sparrow of Michigan wild life. Recently Hastings caught pictures of the black tern and before he had finished getting some of the views of this beauty he had learned considerable about their natural history and fighting ability.

He says that he was intending on the private life of a pair of these birds-ordinarily the case of the opposition was not. Never in his 15 years of experience in this fascinating but ever changing world of birds has Hastings encountered such biting and fighting birds as the black terns.

The black terns exist in the historic black-tern country of northern Michigan. Hastings, who, by the way, is also an expert photographer of bird and photographing wild life, put in their appearance at the Center, the battle spared. There was nothing offered in the way of openings and the birds swooping down to the attack with a willingness that left the Hastings astonished. Until they had not left the ground and did not return.

Mrs. Hastings crowded low in the bushes and hid behind the rocks.

It was necessary to let in the daylight to get a single duller off the fleet of plates that have been piled up to work on her.

She pulled rakes from the lake bottom.

There is no reason to say more of this.

If the young people about to get married care anything about the experience of others, which they do, they will have to admit that they do not know what to expect from the marriage that awaits them. The reason is that they have not been in a position to know what to expect from marriage. The reason is that they have not been in a position to know what to expect from marriage.

The two points in common are that the marriage will be a happy one and that the two people will be happy. The reason is that they have not been in a position to know what to expect from marriage.
