Arrested When He Refused to Allow Inspection of Beehives

Even Lorus, Dr. Newton Zwolfer from Fennville, Mich., plun- ed, phoned himself in a bed predic- munity recently when he allowed his tion of = tried to stir the bees away from the蜂箱 to be inspected.

Not now a beekeeper, but at the time of the inspection, Dr. Lorus was one of the few men in town who had been beekeepers. He had kept hives for many years, but had given up the business some time ago.

At the time of the inspection, the beekeeper was in his barn, where he had been keeping the hives. He refused to allow the inspection, saying that he had not had a chance to clean the hives and was not prepared to do so.

When the inspector tried to make him clean the hives, he refused, saying that he had no time to do so. The inspector then threatened to take the hives away, but Dr. Lorus refused to let them be taken.

The matter was referred to the police, who came to the barn to see what had happened. They found that the beehives had been left unclean and that the bees were not being fed properly.

Dr. Lorus was arrested and charged with failing to keep his beehives in proper condition. He was released on a bond and is scheduled to appear in court on a later date.
BIRMINGHAM TO HAVE NEW POST OFFICE

The largest attendance in the history of the Michigan State Fair was registered September 24, with prospects pointing to nearly 400,000 people viewing the 19th annual exhibition. With this anticipated increase every year, last year, 284,000 paid admission to the grounds, the increase of an additional 115,000 brought a corresponding increase of $225,000 in the state's treasury. The enlarged entertainment program this year is expected to add a second last year's record.

An 80-member orchestra will be in attendance, with music provided by the Michigan State Fair Orchestra. The orchestra will be directed by John Johnson, an outstanding musician who has been associated with the Michigan State Fair for many years.

The new post office will be located in the southeast corner of the fairgrounds, adjacent to the Grandstand and the children's section.

HOLLAND ESCAPES SCOUNDREL FEVER FOR EIGHT YEARS

In submitting the annual health report of the city of Holland, Dr. R. H. Cook, local health officer, points out the favorable health conditions that have prevailed in the city during the past year. Holland has remained free from the respiratory diseases for eight years, which is a remarkable record for a city of its size. The decline in the occurrence of these diseases is attributed to the good sanitation practices and the efficient work of the health department.

The report also indicates a decrease in the number of cases of tuberculosis, with only a few cases reported in the past year. The city continued to maintain a high level of sanitation, with regular inspections of all public buildings and schools.

HELP CLOSE AT HAND
and early attention to the flowers growing around and within the buildings, and it is only a small matter of time before you will have made a success of your work. This is the first step in forming a successful garden, and it is the one that is likely to be most important in the long run.

The following are some of the flowers that are most likely to be successful in this climate:

- Peonies
- Ranunculus
- Delphiniums
- Irises
-ranunculus are most likely to be successful in this climate.

The soil in your garden should be well-drained, and it should be rich in organic matter. This will help to retain the moisture in the garden and to keep the plants
healthy.

The best time to plant your flowers is in the spring, when the soil is warm and the weather is mild. This will give the plants enough time to get established before the weather becomes too hot.

Once you have planted your flowers, it is important to water them regularly. This will help to keep the plants healthy and to promote growth.

In conclusion, with a little work and a lot of patience, you can have a beautiful garden in your city for many years to come.

APRIL'S LADY

By ARLO BATES

It was fortunate that when the editor of the "Dark Red" magazine found that his article had been accepted by the American Congress, he instructed his secretary to examine the manuscript, and order, with which the secretary complied, with the result that the manuscript was not ready for the Congress until the article had been rejected. It was certain that the Congress would have rejected the article had not the editor found it impossible to obtain the necessary information. He was therefore compelled to order a certain portion of the manuscript to be returned to him, so that he might have the opportunity of correcting any errors that might have been committed, and of preparing a new manuscript for presentation to the Congress. In this way the necessary information was obtained, and the manuscript was returned to the editor. He then proceeded to the Congress, and presented the manuscript to the Congress for examination. The Congress was satisfied with the manuscript, and it was finally accepted by the American Congress.
