Election Next Tuesday

We would that every person eligible to vote would do so next Tuesday. In that case a majority must rule and we are sure that this country is always safe with a majority of all its voters.

As to whom you should vote for, we believe that the voters were never better instructed than during this campaign. The radio has made this possible and we believe voters already know for whom they will vote.

Personally, we think it unwise to change national policies at this time as we believe that certain adverse conditions will be improved more rapidly by continuing the present administration as a change always means many readjustments that take valuable time. Some of our readers may think differently and we would not try to influence them but we urge everyone to vote as they believe.

Three amendments will be offered for the voters next Tuesday. One relates to legislative districts which should be adopted. One relates to acquiring of land for widening streets and other public use about which the writer knows little and one will raise salaries of state senators and representatives to $1000 per year. Surely a poor man could not afford to take the job for less, yet we cannot get some out of these offices at the present salaries—so there you are.

Diver Requires Care

A diver is not simply "dropped overboard" to fall almost like a stone to the bottom of the sea. He is lowered very carefully at a rate—averaging about two feet a minute—that allows the pumps to supply the proper air pressure. Otherwise he would probably suffer great pain with bleeding at the eyes, nose and ears. The rate at which he is withdrawn from the water is slower still.

"Girl" in the Scriptures

The word "girl" occurs in the King James version of the Bible only twice, once in the singular and once in the plural. Joel 3:3 says: "And they have cast lots for my people; and have given a boy for an harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink." Zech. 8:5 says: "And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof."

PULVERIZING OF STUBBLE WILL DESTROY PESTS

Equipment to pulverize stubbles in corn fields, thus completely destroying remaining corn borers, will be provided Macomb county farmers free of charge if they desire it, according to announcement by J. Nelson Powell, district supervisor of the plant quarantine and control administration of the United States Department of Agriculture.

There are two conditions to the use of equipment: First, that no less than 100 acres be involved; second, that the farmer or group of farmers supply an operator for the equipment, and pay the cost of the gasoline, oil and grease.

The director of the budget has provided funds for the United States Department of Agriculture to again carry on co-operative stubble pulverizing experimental work with groups of farmers in the 1 per cent infested area, this work, however, to be strictly voluntary," Mr. Powell said.

"The equipment may be secured by groups of farmers delegating authority to someone to enter into an agreement with the United States Department of Agriculture in regard to the operation of the equipment, who may represent a county, township or community.

"Each farmer may make application for the equipment. When applications for a sufficient number of acres have been secured, the Department of Agriculture will deliver free of charge to that community a complete unit of stubble pulverizing equipment which consists of 15-30 International tractor, power take-off, and stubble pulverizer.

"The equipment may be operated on any stubble which is not more than 10 inches in height where field conditions are favorable. The equipment will be serviced and repaired in the field free of charge to the farmer. The only cost to the farmer will be actual operating expense; that is, furnishing the operator, gasoline, oil and grease.

"This work will be done under the supervision and direction of the plant quarantine and control administration.

Application for the use of this equipment may be made by letter to the United States Department of Agriculture, plant quarantine and control administration, 615 Front St., Toledo. Use of the equipment is purely voluntary.

With reference to the status of compensation to farmers for compulsory corn borer work already done, Mr. Powell said that bill had been passed by both houses of congress at the last session providing $7,000,000 for such compensation, but that it had failed to be reported out and sent to the president for signature.

He believed that just as soon as congress convened again the bill would go into effect.

Fewer Calves Go To Large Markets

High beef and dairy cattle prices are causing farmers to retain more of their calves on the farms, judging by the number of calves slaughtered at leading livestock markets in August.

Federal reports just released for publication show 368,799 calves were slaughtered under federal meat inspection at 25 markets in August compared with 389,799 in the corresponding month a year ago.

It is assumed that farmers are holding more heifer calves for replacements in their herds and more steers for feeding.

Beekeepers Given Fall Tips By R. H. Kelty of M. S. C.

Fall tips for the Michigan beekeepers, designed to aid the honey producer in efficiency of operation, have been sent out by R. H. Kelty, specialist with the horticultural department at Michigan State college.

A partial list of the "seasonal suggestions:"

1. Finish requeening immediately, while the fall honey flow is on.
2. Leave plenty of honey on the hive to care for late brood-rearing, as well as for winter requirements.
3. Increases or late swarms which do not now cover six combs in good shape might well be united for winter, since their chance of wintering is doubtful if weaker.
4. Watch all stored supercombs to see that the wax-moth does not destroy them. Fumigate periodically with sulphur fumes or one-half pint carbon di-sulphide to 10 supers of combs, placing the fumigant in an empty super above the pile of combs, as the fumes are heavier than air.
5. Don't "dump" your honey on the local market at a sacrifice of price.
6. If the bees will be wintered outside, this is a good time to arrange for a supply of dry packing material, such as planer shavings, clover chaff, wheat chaff, or dry leaves. When the rainy season is on it may be difficult to get this material dry.

Give Cows Silage With Winter Feed For Succulence

Corn silage is the best and most economical way of providing cattle with the succulence necessary in dairy feeding, says the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca. Some way must be provided to carry pasture conditions over into winter feeding and silage is the best form of succulence to be provided.

Good legume hay with a succulent feed furnishes a combination of protein, minerals, and succulence which comes as near as possible to pasture conditions. This palatable and bulky feed is good for the digestive tract, and is economical as a source of carbohydrates. Corn silage stimulates the appetites of the animals so that they do not easily go off feed; they consume larger amount of roughage than when fed on hay alone.

If pasture acreage is limited or if pasture dries up during the late summer, a silo for summer should be considered. This should be built smaller in diameter than the winter silo, so that the silage can be fed rapidly enough to prevent spoilage. Most well-managed dairy farms have silos, because farmers have found that without them they cannot produce milk economically.

Money For TB Cattle

Appraised values of the cattle condemned because of tuberculosis in the national campaign against the disease in the cattle herds of the country, averaged for the year ending June 30, 1928, the sum of $11.53, according to Dr. John R. Mohler of the United States Department of Agriculture. The combined value of the federal and state indemnities, plus the salvage of the condemned animals was $87.12. "This figure," says Doctor Mohler, "represents the amount that the owner receives for the average diseased animal. The money is commonly used for the purchase of healthy stock, usually of better quality potentially more profitable than the animals condemned."

Traverse Spud Show Nov. 22-24

The annual potato show, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and the agricultural department of the high school of Traverse City, will be held Nov. 22, 23 and 24, at the People's Savings bank.

Letters are being mailed by Watson Fowls, high school teacher, to farmers throughout the region, urging them to select their show potatoes and informing them of the prizes, amounting to $32.50.

The Peoples bank gives a sweepstakes prize of $10 in gold and two prizes of $5 and $2.50 as awards of merit. Prizes of $10 and $5 will be given by the Chamber of Commerce for the best displays of certified seed.

Farmer too Busy to Think of Candidates

Kenneth Stout, Ionia tenant farmer, is too busy being prosperous, he says, to be worrying about which political party will be most likely to carry out its farm relief promises. He already has deposited more than $10,000 in the bank from this season's operations and still has 600 bushels of apples and 12 acres of potatoes to sell.

The sources of his income have been as follows: Red kidney beans, $3,465; white pea beans, $2,400; wheat, $2,300; milk and cream, $1,200; beef cattle, $800.

Onion Thief Traced By License Number

Gerrit Wyngaarden of Holland is held under $5,000 bond at the county jail on charge of stealing two truckloads of onions, numbering about 75 bushels, from the farm of J. Verhage, east of Zeeland. About 50 bushels were recovered.

Wyngaarden was apprehended on a tip from Night Officer Bosma of Zeeland, who had obtained the license number of Wyngaarden's car. Sheriff Kamferbeek, Deputy Sheriff Beekman and Officer Edward Ryzenga took charge of the case. Wyngaarden was arraigned before Justice William Brusse.

He later was taken to the office of Prosecuting Attorney Clarence A. Lokker, where Sheriff Kamferbeek obtained a confession.

Prizes For Show Will Total $500

Over $500 worth of prizes will be awarded at the annual Michigan State college horticulture show, which will be held Nov. 9-11 at Demonstration hall. According to Oscar Dowd, Hartford, who is in charge of the show, this year's prize list is larger than for any previous show.

Letters have been sent to over 100 prominent fair exhibitors, advertising the show, and it is expected that most of them will send exhibits. Vegetable growers are also expected to send many choice specimens to compete this fall, and judging teams from nearly 175 Smith-Hughes high schools will compete in the judging contest, a new feature of this show.

Added attractions at the show this fall will be the flower exhibit and the honey show. Total cash prizes in all classes will amount to over $250, while some $200 worth of merchandise will be awarded to winners in the various classes.

Poultry

FEEDING HINTS FOR FALL MONTHS

Fall feeding, preliminary to the regular winter feeding schedule, often means a matter of several dollars made or lost for the poultryman. Birds that start the winter in poor flesh and low in vitality will not be as heavy producers as those that have been well cared for during the summer and early fall.

If the hens and pullets are low in condition, the ration should consist largely of scratch grain with plenty of corn for two or three weeks to bring the flock back to good flesh. Fleshing can be most easily determined by feeling along the breast bone. A good time to determine whether the birds need the extra attention to put them in better flesh is while the annual fall culling is being done. Culling should be the first step towards economical winter production of eggs.

A good laying mash for fall and winter months can be made up of any one of several recommended mixtures. The mash must contain some high protein material or animal protein. This can usually be best supplied by meat scraps or a high grade of tankage. If sour milk is available, it may be substituted for a part of the tankage in the ration, although it is not advisable to substitute milk for all of the meat scraps or tankage. In making this substitution, allow two gallons of sour milk for each pound of tankage replaced. Some dried buttermilk in the mash has also been used successfully by different poultrymen.

A very simple and economical laying mash suggested by the Iowa station consists of 200 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds ground corn and 60 pounds meat and bone meal. Another ration suggested by the same station consists of 100 pounds ground corn, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds bran, 100 pounds middlings and 80 pounds meat and bone meal.

Wisconsin investigators recommend this same mash with the exception of the amount of meat scraps or tankage, which they suggest increasing to 100 pounds instead of 80, as in the Iowa ration. Work done at the Kentucky station is in accord with the Wisconsin recommendations. Both Kentucky and Wisconsin advocate adding from one-half to 1 per cent salt to the mash before placing in the hoppers, taking precaution to be sure that the salt is well mixed and not lumpy. Iowa work also shows that a mineral mixture of four pounds ground limestone, two pounds bone meal, three pounds charcoal and one pound of salt can be added to the ration in the place of the salt with good results. This amount is added to each 100 pounds of mash.

The scratch grain should consist of corn for one part, preferably, with one or more combinations of the following, oats, wheat, barley or speltz being used with the corn. A good scratch grain for the middle west may be composed of 50 pounds cracked corn, 25 pounds wheat and 25 pounds oats. A mixture of 70 pounds of cracked corn and 30 pounds oats may also be used. During the fall months, one pound of grain should be fed for each one and a half pounds of mash consumed from the self-feeders. As the weather becomes colder, the proportions should be gradually changed to one and a half to two pounds of grain for each one pound of mash.

Plans should also be made at this time for supplying green feed for the flock during the winter months. If the flock has access to a good alfalfa range, this will supply a sufficient amount of green material for some time. Cabbage makes one of the best green feeds that can be secured and if the flock owner has any of this crop which can be stored for the winter he is in an advantageous position. If this is not available, plans should be made for sprouting oats for winter feed. Carrots and mangels should also be stored for poultry feed, if there are any available.

Boxes or hoppers should be kept filled with oyster shell or grit at all times and the fowls should never be allowed to go without a liberal supply of clean drinking water. Preparations should be made to care for the drinking needs of the flock while confined to the houses during the winter, since warm as well as clean water should be provided at this time.

FORWARD TO BETTER POULTRY

Poultry buyers and produce men are well aware that breeders are doing much in the way of poultry improvement through systematic breeding. The poultryman's present problem is to go still further with this work and not to be satisfied with the present progress alone. Here is what one author, Rudolf A. Clemen, has to say about the work that is being done in breeding up poultry in the United States:

"An important forward step in the poultry industry of the United States has been the development of systematic breeding on the part of large numbers of poultry keepers who are interested in improving the efficiency of production of their stock. Obviously, the more efficient the producing ability of stock, the better the opportunity for profit, and this has been the great incentive toward this end. Undoubtedly the development of trapping, which made possible a record of the production of individual hens, has been a most important factor in improvement of breeding stock.

In Arson Probe

Howard Plumb, above, age 19, of Reed City, Mich., has confessed, according to police, to setting fire to a building in that city in which Mrs. Mary Mason was burned to death. Plumb claims he was offered $500 by Stanley Sanford, wealthy Reed City resident, to start the blaze. Sanford, who police say has admitted the boy's charge, has been released on $20,000 bail.

Parchment Shades

Parchment shades are favorites, for they are so adaptable to all color schemes. One shade in a black lacquer frame has panels in the natural color with black and gold motifs painted on the panels. The base is of white glazed pottery patterned over an unglazed foundation in geometrical design, but in shape that is suitable for the shade. A black and gold tassel hangs from the lighting spring.

STATE ARRESTS OIL OPERATOR

The first test of the state conservation department's ruling that not more than one oil well can be sunk on each five acres of land, was made when Kelley Goldboss, operator, was arrested in Muskegon on a charge of drilling without a permit. Harold F. Mosier, assistant district fire warden, appeared as the complainant. Goldboss' application for a permit was refused by the department because of small acreage.

Goldboss pleaded not guilty and was released under bond. Meanwhile he will continue to drill, facing arrest each day, while his counsel is preparing a bill to be filed in federal court asking that the state be enjoined from interfering with his drilling operations because of unlawful withholding of the permit.

Muskegon counsel has contended that the ruling, made at State Geologist Smith's behest, is unconstitutional and cannot be enforced.

It is understood that three or more warrants will be asked by Mosier for operators who, like Goldboss, were refused permits for drilling on small plots.

Operators have agreed tentatively to submit to the five-acre ruling outside Muskegon township. They contend that with companies organized to drill and with large sums paid for leases in the proven field, they should not be bound by restrictions imposed at this late time.

Jim: "Well, as I have experienced it, it's first the water's too hot; then it's too cold; then you're short of a towel; then you step on the soap, and, finally, the telephone rings."

The special grand jury investigating conditions in Philadelphia, says: "There is a systematized scheme of bribery of police officials, high and low, by men engaged in the illicit traffic in liquor. This undoubtedly existed for a number of years." The first three police officers—a captain and two detectives—to go on trial were convicted. Their sentence could amount to 172 years each—besides $51,500 fines. Before Prosecutor Monohan is finished gunning, he may strike at the higher ups—but he isn't saying how high.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

FEW STATE PARKS WILL REMAIN OPEN

While work will soon be started to close many of the state parks, a few of them will remain open the year around in an attempt to develop more interest in winter sports. The parks enjoyed a flattering patronage the past summer, but it has long been felt that at least some of the facilities might be put to use during the months when snow and ice prevail.

As was the case last winter, some of the group camp buildings will be open for use. These structures were widely used the past summer, the one at Cedar Hill park, near Jackson, being exceptionally popular. While the parks department will not devote any great sum to its winter experimental work, it will keep the matter under close scrutiny and be quick to foster development of any promising angles.

Interurban to Buy Bus Line for $20,000

The United Suburban railway, operating between Grand Rapids and Jenison, has obtained an option to purchase for $20,000 its only competitor, the Andringa & Datema bus line. The railway was organized two years ago when the Grand Rapids, Holland & Chicago railway property was sold at a foreclosure sale and the corporation, composed of 100 stockholders residing in the suburban communities southwest of Grand Rapids, acquired the defunct company's right of way to Jenison and several of its coaches.

Detroit Times to Have $2,500,000 Structure

Construction of a modern newspaper plant for the Detroit Times will be financed with part of the proceeds of an issue of $2,500,000 Detroit Times 6 per cent serial debentures which have been sold to Halsey, Stuart & Company, Chicago, and the Union Trust Company of Detroit.

The plant will be a six-story structure and will be used in entirety for the newspaper. The company will also purchase a substantial amount of new equipment and through the economies which it hopes to effect by use of the new building and equipment, should materially increase profits.

The Detroit Times is one of the principal metropolitan papers of the country. All of the outstanding capital stock of The Times Publishing Co., except directors' qualifying shares, is owned and controlled indirectly by William Randolph Hearst.

Net earnings of The Times Publishing Co. before depreciation, amortization, federal income taxes, and interest for the 12 months ended July 15, 1928, were $588,981, while the maximum annual interest on those debentures requires $150,000.

The publishing interests of Mr. Hearst consist of a chain of twenty-eight newspapers serving eighteen important cities and a group of seven nationally known magazines, which, together comprise the largest publishing business in the world.

Closed Season on All Fishing Will Be Recommended

A 12 weeks' closed season on fish licenses to angle for all kinds of fish will be recommended to the next legislature by Geo. R. Hogarth, director of conservation, together with a number of other suggested changes in conservation statutes which he believes will work toward better fishing and hunting.

Only those fishing for trout are now required to take licenses, and under this unlimited fishing for other species there is no means of keeping adequate records of anglers, Hogarth believes. The additional revenue derived from several hundred thousand more license sales would be used solely for fish propagation and protection.

"A 40-week fishing season should be ample for anyone," Hogarth said, "and we have found through close observation that 12 weeks of protection is needed during the spawning season to prevent ruthless slaughter."

"There is no justification for going to heavy expense rearing fish only to have the supply exhausted by fishing too early in the spring around the spawning beds."

More fish were caught in 1923 than ever before, Hogarth is convinced, after a study of creel census figures for the season, compared with those of past years, but the increase in anglers is so rapid that he believes it is economically advisable to insure greater protection for young fish as well as to increase the output at state hatcheries.

HUNTERS INVADE BIRDS SANCTUARY

W. K. Kellogg of Battle Creek is offering a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of the hunter or hunters who are invading the Kellogg Bird Sanctuary at Gull lake and killing tame ducks. Recently the residents of that locality were incensed over the fact that eight shots were fired on the island at Gull lake after dark.

This is a grave infraction of the game laws and in consequence Fred Lorio, champion rifle shot with many another record in the huntsman's art, has been assigned to game warden's squad, as has Al. Marcoux, who lives on the other side of Gull at Yorkville, together with several more men. The ducks killed are tame ones from Mr. Kellogg's preserve. Opening day this season a barrage of guns was heard there.

Mr. Kellogg has launched out in the effort to restore the wild turkey to this locality and he has distributed these fowls all over the country. A farm of 60 acres has been set aside for the breeding of wild turkey by Mr. Kellogg and they are to be protected by the strong arm of the law, it is announced. It will be 10 years before wild turkeys can be legally killed. Meanwhile they are multiplying and through Mr. Kellogg's efforts.

Between 200 and 300 people visit the Kellogg Bird Sanctuary every Sunday.

Sanitary Code Guards Health

In 837 cities and 15 states public health is protected by a sanitary code which prescribes methods in which plumbing equipment must be installed.

The leading states require journeymen and master plumbers to pass an examination and obtain a license before they are permitted to install plumbing equipment.

Sanitary codes are established by public health officials for the protection of public health and not for the financial benefit of plumbing contractors, city officials point out.

Codes, however, have the endorsement of all conscientious plumbers because an adequate code, properly enforced, prevents the irresponsible man from imposing on the public.

A typical city plumbing code outlines the methods by which connections must be made, specifies the installation of waste lines, gives definite rulings on the installation of traps and vents, and indicates how fixtures should be installed. In this way a code protects public health against pollution of the water supply.

A sanitary code is also of direct financial benefit to the residents of a city in that it guarantees them the full benefits from their plumbing equipment and insures the minimum cost of upkeep.

A city's growth, development and advancement and the health of its inhabitants depend to a large measure on proper plumbing laws.

Fisher Expands Body Building at Pontiac

Commencing at once, about half of all bodies for the Oakland car will be made in Pontiac instead of in Detroit according to the announcement of Henry P. Blow, manager of the Pontiac plants of the Fisher Body Corporation.

Pontiac plants have been awarded the contract for all Oakland sedan and coach bodies, about half the entire Oakland body contract. At present the plants are making about sixty Oakland bodies a day in addition to about 1,000 Pontiac bodies, Mr. Blow declares. He predicted that mid-October will find the Oakland body production up to 200 a day.

Until September all Oakland bodies were made in the Detroit plants of the Fisher Corporation. An addition to the Pontiac plant costing $2,000,000 has made it possible to increase greatly production here, and as rapidly as the work can be taken on the Oakland contracts are to be handled here nearer the plants where motors and chassis are manufactured. The new addition will be in partial use by November, but will not be fully occupied until next year.

"We are begging for experienced men right now," Mr. Blow remarked. "Soon we expected to have the largest pay roll in our history."

During this year employment at the Fisher plants in Pontiac has been around 6,000 men, and next year it is anticipated there will be 7,200 on the payroll.

Traverse Bell Co. to Move to New Quarters

With ceremonies fitting to the initiation of one of the greatest industrial units in northern Michigan, the Michigan Bell Telephone company will cut over from its old quarters to the new $250,000 telephone plant at Traverse City Saturday night, L. A. Larsen, local manager, announced.

Installation of the new switchboards has been completed and they are now undergoing a series of tests. Mayor James T. Mulliken and other public officials will take part. The business offices of the company were moved into the beautiful new $76,000 building in July.

Handwriting Traps Escaped Convict

Signing his alias, "Charles Hall," to a payroll at the Hayes Body plant at Grand Rapids has resulted in the return of Charles Witrens, 23 years old, to Michigan reformatory at Ionia. Witrens escaped October 4 while playing with the institution's orchestra at a downtown function. Learning that Witrens was employed in the furniture city, Warden Charles Shean searched the various factories, resulting in his discovery of the signature of "Charles Hall" on Hayes' payroll, which resembled Witrens' handwriting. Witrens was serving twelve and one-half to 25 years for robbery armed, having been convicted at Detroit May 5, 1926.

Clerk Receives Check Lost Year Ago

J. R. McHorter, postoffice inspector, has sent a check for $1,064.59 to the city clerk's office at Grand Haven which has been lost for over a year and which was found in a mail car now being overhauled at the Indianapolis car shops.

The letter had been opened and hidden between the steam pipes. The loss of the check to the Ryley Coal company at Lexington, Ky., had caused much trouble at the office here. A duplicate was finally issued.

DEATH CROSSING TO BE MARKED

A direct move to end the menace of dangerous railroad crossing on trunk line highways was made by the state.

It contemplates a two-year program to provide crossings with uniform and adequate warning equipment, clear vision and elimination of turns and curves; and a 10-year schedule for wiping out completely the heavy traffic crossings with grade separations.

Letters were sent from the office of C. A. Melick, bridge engineer of the state highway department, to the general manager of every railroad. Conferences will be held in an effort to obtain agreement on the type of crossings and warning signals. The plan will be submitted to the state public utilities commission, which has the power to issue orders for installation.

Briefly the state plans to take away all turns and curves at crossings; to pave 300 feet each side of all crossings; to provide clear vision from all angles by removing buildings or other obstructions and to place uniform, overhead warning flashlights for every crossing where there is through or heavy railroad traffic. The warning lights will be mounted on arches and will designate the name of the railroad and the number of tracks. There will be flood lights on every arch.

The protection of grade crossings will constitute the first part of the safety program. The separation projects would take the place of the safety devices as rapidly as possible, according to the state's plan. There are in excess of 580 crossings on trunk line railways outside of cities.

The new Buick
is the new Style

Men and women on every street--
--in every city and town-- are pronouncing the new BUICK with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day--

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick with new Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher!

Sweeping into the market at a time when motor car lines were practically standardized--when imitation was destroying individuality--these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode--

A mode of body-symmetry--of size and magnificence--of soft contours instead of straight lines--of embossed side and hood panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car in the world!

And as the weeks have passed--and the full significance of Buick's achievement has become apparent to the public--enthusiasm for this car has swelled and grown to unprecedented proportions!

Buick sales records have been broken! Production schedules have been increased again and again! The great Buick plants are working to the limit of their capacity to supply the demand.

Let's Keep This Advantage For Michigan

United States Senator A. H. Vandenberg

Senator Vandenberg is the Republican candidate to succeed himself. He has a powerful place in Washington which Michigan cannot afford to lose. Vice President Dawes says he knows no Senator "who has started so auspiciously or who gives such promise of statesmanship" as Vandenberg. He has important committee places which can be reached only by the "Seniority" which he now enjoys. He has demonstrated that he is a dependable friend to Agriculture and to Labor and to Industry. He is Michigan's prime reliance in the fight for the St. Lawrence Waterway which means so much to our state. He is a man of unchallenged moral character and ideals and honor and integrity. He is one of the leading Constitutional Authorities in the United States. Michigan cannot afford to lose this advantage. Think of your own welfare when you vote for U. S. Senator. If you do, you will unhesitatingly vote for Vandenberg. (You have to vote for him TWICE--Long and Short Terms--because one follows the other.)

The Seven Seas

"The seven seas" is a figurative phrase denoting all the seas or oceans of the world. The common explanation is that the seven seas are the Arctic, Antarctic, North and South Pacific, North and South Atlantic and Indian oceans.

But this explanation is purely imaginary and superficial. The term was part of the vernacular of many nations long before some of these oceans were known to the civilized world. The seven seas are referred to in the literature of the early Hindus, Persians, Romans and Hebrews. To the Persians the seven seas were the streams forming the Oxus river, and the Hindus applied the name to bodies of water in the Punjab. Near Venice in Italy were a number of large salt water lagoons which the Romans called "septem maria," which is Latin for seven seas.

The phrase "the seven seas" was popularized in modern times by Rudyard Kipling, who used it as the title of a volume of poems published in 1896.—Exchange.

Seemed Natural Question

A young married woman, accompanied by her four-year-old niece, had just completed a call at the doctor's office. The latter had advised her to purchase a carriage and give her infant a daily outing. The mother replied that this would hardly be wise, as she intended moving from the neighborhood in the near future.

On their way home the little girl looked up at her aunt and asked, "But auntie, where did your baby come from?"

"Heaven," her aunt replied.
"And who in heaven gave you the baby?"
"God," replied the woman.
"Then," said the little girl, "why doesn't God give you a carriage?"

The Body Corporate

The use of the spoken word to convey ideas distinguishes man from all other created things. It is the function of the engineer to provide for the extension of the spoken word by means of electrical systems of intercommunication which will serve to connect the nervous system of each unit of society with all of the others, thus providing an indispensable element in the structure of that inconceivably great and powerful organism which it is believed will be the ultimate outcome of the marvelous evolution which society is to undergo.—Exchange.

Erosion Formed Bridge

The Natural Bridge in Virginia was caused by stream erosion. The present structure was left by the collapse of the remainder of the roof of a tunnel formed, according to Cleland, "by water percolating through a point or fissure athwart the stream, thence along a bedding plane and emptying under a fall or rapid of the stream. The channel thus formed was gradually enlarged until all the water of the stream was diverted from the stream bed below the point of ingress, leaving the bridge."

FACTS

In all fairness to the voters of Van Buren County, it is our earnest effort to place the following facts before them.

(1). Robert H. Cavanaugh is a native of Van Buren County; a graduate of Paw Paw High School; attended the University of Michigan and graduated from the University of Detroit Law School. He was admitted to the bar in September, 1926 and has served nearly two years as our Prosecuting Attorney and is now seeking re-election.

(2). Robert H. Cavanaugh has had the experience of two years successful administration of the office of Prosecuting Attorney. He has handled carefully over eight hundred cases, one hundred and fifty-seven of which were in the Circuit Court before Judge Glenn E. Warner and only nineteen charged with crime were acquitted, a number of which were LEFT OVERS from the term of the previous prosecutor. During the past twenty months, thirty-four persons convicted were sentenced to the State Prison at Jackson and twenty-nine to the Reformatory at Ionia. During the last twelve months of the previous administration only six were sent to Jackson and eleven to Ionia.

Newton B. Foster

He shows no alliances that would hamper impartial administration of the affairs of that office. He did not solicit the nomination, nor was he picked in advance by a predecessor in the office, which has become a custom in Van Buren politics for obvious reasons. His nomination came direct from the people he is to serve.

There are none who question his qualifications—mental or physical, or his ability or judgment. There is no county office that has a greater need of these qualifications than the office of sheriff. He has conducted a clean, gentlemanly campaign, and solicits your vote on a basis of his qualifications and ability to serve.

His slogan is, and if elected will continue to be—"NOT PROTECTION FOR SOME, BUT PROTECTION FOR ALL.

Horned Owl's Tit-Bit

A curious habit of the great horned owl is that of decapitating his victims. Frequently, only the head is eaten. One report speaks of three turkeys and several chickens beheaded by one of these owls in a single night. The bodies were uninjured.

Leading Question

The old grad was speaking of matrimony to the graduating senior. "My boy, I've remained a bachelor by choice." The senior looked into the homely face of the old grad and asked, "Whose choice?"—Lock Haven Express.

Gave Canada to England

On February 10, 1763, the first treaty of Paris was signed. It marked the end of the old French and Indian war which lasted from 1754 to 1763. By the terms of this treaty Canada was ceded by France to England.

Votive Offerings in Gratitude to Saints

Votive offerings are still a popular way of expressing gratitude, as the exhibition at Naples shows. The ancients and the early Christians made use of this custom, not only as a sign of thanksgiving, but as a preventative measure. Pierre Van Rammen writes, in the Atlanta Constitution. In cases of illness they would make haste to deposit a model of the injured limb or organ in the church in full faith of obtaining a cure. As time went on the church forbade this practice of magic, and only edifying offerings to the altar thank offerings for grace received. Yet to this day, in the neighborhood of Naples, mothers weigh their children and offer the same amount of wax to the virgin or their patron saint to keep the little ones from dwindling away. In southern Italy plague, pestilence and famine, battle, murder and sudden death, tempests, earthquakes and thunderbolts are all, in popular belief, under control of some one special saint who has power to relieve sufferers from their evil influences. Thus St. Nicholas and St. Anthony protect the cattle; St. Paul cures snake bite; St. Ercolano strengthens the legs; St. Donino cures hydrophobia; St. Catherine, St. Raphael and St. Pasquale are fervently invoked when girls want husbands.

World's Great Had to Overcome Great Ills

Not an individual living is absolutely free from handicaps. Some of us are physically disabled, others are mentally harassed, hundreds suffer both, writes Louis E. Bisch in the American Magazine. We struggle with deformity; we fight disease; we wrestle with doubts, feelings of inferiority, oversensitiveness, uncontrollable temper, all sorts of distressing disabilities. Even the greatest among us are handicapped like that. Every human being is prevented somehow from fulfilling his highest destiny.

Many of our greatest men were handicapped by disease, and somehow surmounted it. Milton and Handel were blind. Beethoven was deaf and Keats had tuberculosis. Pope was deformed. Caesar suffered from epilepsy. Lamb and his sister were subject to repeated attacks of insanity. Fielding wrote his rollicking book, "Tom Jones," while melancholy. Florence Nightingale did some of her best executive work while bedridden. The list, indeed, is a long one. These people achieved in spite of a hardship.

Not if He Could Help It

The other evening a young married woman took her three-year-old son to a church supper. Her mother was a member of the organization that was giving the supper. As the daughter and her son were about to seat themselves at one of the tables, the mother, who was helping serve, said to her daughter: "If that kid were mine I would have cleaned him up a little before I brought him here. Why didn't you wash him? His hands and face are a sight!"

"I did want to wash his face and hands," said the young ultramodern mother, "but he didn't want to be washed. I asked him if he wanted me to wash him, and he said, 'No.' Didn't you, honey?"

"Sure! I don't want to be washed," agreed little youngster with an independent, self-satisfied tone of finality.—Indianapolis News.

Famous Jewish Order

The Essenes were a Jewish brotherhood which was founded probably after the Maccabees at least two centuries before Christ, existing to about 200 A. D. The records of them are not found in the Bible or rabbinical literature, but certain profane writers such as Pliny, Josephus and Philo describe them as religious separatists, having a strict code of ceremonial observances much more rigid than the ordinary ceremonials of Judaism. They also were celibate and lived in communities holding all things in common. The requirements for membership were most rigid, requiring long periods of fasting and discipline. There is no probability that Jesus Christ was an Essene, but it has been advanced that John the Baptist was of a type which would be acceptable.

Hardy's Roving Eye

Thomas Hardy's delight in observation never failed; he had the roving eye as well as the "musing eye." No monolith could he pass without visions of the Roman Legionnaires. The famous description of Egdon Heath may seem in memory but a somber and boding landscape; return to it and, mingled with the scenery, you will find interesting facts drawn from Doomsday Book and the antiquary Leland which at once exhibit Hardy darting curiously from shelf to shelf.—J. C. Squire in the Observer.

Powerful Stimulant

The coca plant of South America is a shrub with small, light green leaves which have a somewhat bitter taste. The natives powder these leaves and mix them with lime to form what they call "ypadu."

The stuff is chewed and is an amazing stimulant. With a supply of this in a pouch, the South American Indian will walk for two or even three days on end without food. But coca must be used with great care, for if the doses are too heavy they turn the chewer of the leaf into an idiot.

Lewis R. Williams

Republican Candidate for Prosecuting Attorney

This is my final newspaper statement to the voters before the election next Tuesday. The Republicans of Van Buren county have chosen me as their candidate for Prosecuting Attorney. I appreciate the confidence thus reposed by Van Buren County voters, and, if elected next Tuesday, I shall endeavor to my utmost to justify that confidence by affording an EFFICIENT, ECONOMIC ADMINISTRATION of the Prosecutor's office, with the view to seeing that the innocent are protected, the guilty punished and the laws fairly and impartially enforced.

I believe that my record as an attorney and as a citizen of the county is sufficiently above reproach to justify entrusting to me the office of Prosecuting Attorney. It is on that basis that I ask for your votes next Tuesday.

If your votes elect me I pledge a reduction of the expense of the Prosecutor's office—a matter that should interest every taxpayer.

I also pledge careful conduct of the office, to see that "spiteful" and other unwarranted prosecutions are not brought at public expense; and are not brought at public expense; and equally to see that all justified prosecutions are vigorously prosecuted to the end that the guilty are convicted.

I earnestly ask your votes next Tuesday, to the end that I may be given an opportunity to justify the confidence of the Republican voters of the county who selected me as their candidate for Prosecutor.

BARBOUR FUND EDUCATES 86

Since the establishment 11 years ago of the Barbour Scholarships at the University of Michigan by the late Levi L. Barbour, of Detroit, a former regent of the university, 86 young women from Oriental countries have held them.

The scholarships were made possible by the gift of $10,000 in 1917. Later gifts brought the Barbour fund to more than $400,000, the income of which is used in the care, support, maintenance and schooling at the University of Michigan of young women from Oriental countries.

When the Barbour scholarships were first established there were but two scholars. Gradually the number increased until last year there were 28 enrolled in university courses. This year 12 new appointments have been made. In addition to these, there are three Barbour Fellows, former Barbour scholars, who have been invited to return for advanced study and research.

The Barbour Scholarship Committee has recently issued a "news letter" containing information of former Barbour scholars.

It relates that: Miss Yifang Wu is president of Ginling College, Nanking, China, one of the best colleges for women in the Orient; Miss Maria Lanzar is to be a member of the faculty of the University of the Philippines in the department of political science; Dr. Kameyo Sadakata, the first Barbour scholar, is a member of the staff at St. Luke's International Hospital, Tokio; Dr. Ai-lang Giang has charge of work in surgery, obstetrics and gynecology at Pei Yang Women's Hospital, Tientsin, China; and Dr. Aimee Giang Wang is a physician at the Lester Chinese Hospital in Shanghai.

Other Barbour scholars returned to their native countries to take part in the advancement of knowledge in other fields.

Poems That Live

"TO CELIA"

Not, Celia, that I juster am
Or better than the rest!
For I would change each hour, like them,
Were not my heart at rest,

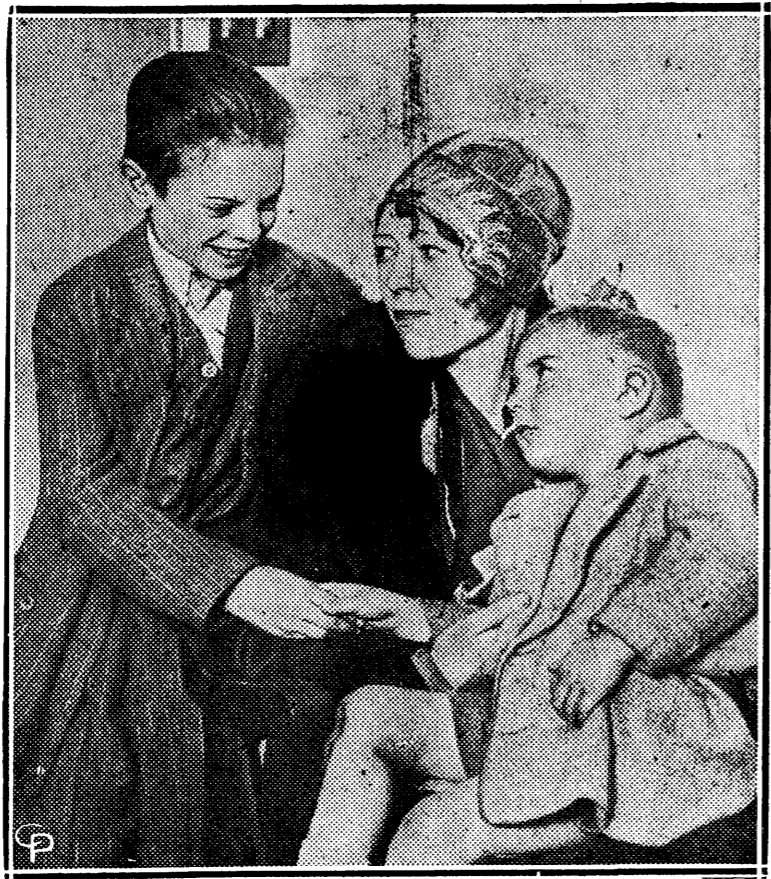

But I am tied to very thee
By every thought I have;
Thy face I only care to see,
Thy heart I only crave.

All that in woman is adored
In thy dear self I find—
For the whole sex can but afford
The handsome and the kind.

Why then should I seek further store,
And still make love anew?
When change itself can give no more,
'Tis easy to be true!

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT

Steak and Onions, Baked Potatoes, Carrot, Cabbage, Apple Salad, White Cake with Orange Filling, Tea

Here is a new way of cooking the succulent beef steak and onions. These onions are not at all greasy and will be very tender. The recipe is for four people.

Today's Recipes

Steak and Onions—Take at least eight or ten onions, peel and slice and fry until half done in butter or rendered out suet. Then pour two or three cups of boiling water over them, drain and set aside. Trim and cut or fold a two-pound porterhouse steak so that it will fit the size of your casserole. Wrap a string around the steak to hold it together, if steak is folded, and sear on all sides in butter or the suet dripping. Pour the fat left in the frying pan into the casserole, place the steak in it, heap the onions over the steak, season with salt and pepper. Put cover on the casserole and set in a moderate oven for about an hour.

White Cake—One-half cup butter, one cup sugar, one cup milk, two cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, pinch salt, three egg whites. Cream butter and sugar together, add milk, then sifted flour with baking powder and salt added. Fold in whites of eggs which have been beaten until stiff. Bake in two layers.

Orange Filling—One-half cup water, three tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon cornstarch, three egg yolks, juice one orange and little grated rind. Boil water, sugar, cornstarch, orange juice together in double boiler. When cooked, remove from fire and add egg yolks. When cake is cool, spread orange filling between layers and frost cake with boiled icing.

The World and All

JURIES

Judge H. H. Sawyer, of Des Moines, Iowa, writes in the October American Mercury an interesting discussion of "Women as Jurors." I find much interesting information in the article, and the facts therein set forth have caused me to do a little thinking about the American jury system. I watched juries work for three or four years, while covering court trials for newspapers in Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota. That was before women served on juries in those states. I must confess that I found much to be desired in the matter of intelligent jury work.

Have the women improved the work of the courts since they took their places on juries? Judge Sawyer seems to believe that they have effected decided improvements, particularly in the trial of certain classes of cases. But he doesn't hold out much hope for the continuation of that improvement.

Judge Sawyer believes that women are doing their very best work on juries while the work is new to them. When they have been liable to jury service for many years, he thinks, they will be likely to give no better service than men, because they will be the same class of jurors. In other words, the higher grades of women are serving on juries now, because there is novelty in it and a thrill, and because women's clubs have agitated for service of high grade women on juries. After a while, according to this estimate, the women will get used to feminine jury service, and will begin to look upon it as a task, rather than as a pleasant duty or a lark, and most of the more intelligent women will decline to serve.

To remedy this prospective situation, I suggest that jurists and others study the Nebraska jury laws, as they apply in Omaha.

While I was in Omaha we got a set of jury laws passed that ended the most vile jury corruption system that ever existed. Of course, the laws applied to men jurors only, but they could be made to include women as well. Service is made compulsory, except for the best of reasons, and professional jurymen are excluded. The jury lists are thoroughly investigated by a jury commissioner appointed by the governor, and no known crooks are allowed to serve. Any citizen may have his say about the eligibility of prospective jurors. And panels are drawn by the full bench of the district court out of a wheel that mixes up the names of the eligible ones. Serve this year, and you can't serve next year. Such a law keeps juries clean, whether men or women, or both, serve.

LIVING AND LOVING

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

WHAT TO DO WHEN FRIEND WIFE REFUSES TO TALK TO A FELLOW?

What is a poor fellow to do when Friend Wife is interested only in her work and baby and ignores him? The wisecrackers will, of course, tell him to be thankful, for most women talk too much. But that doesn't help him at all. For he loves his wife and is lonely for the companionship she denies him. Here is his letter:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a married man and wish to ask a little of your advice. I am very fond of my wife, but it surely looks to me as if she does not care for me. I have been married for two years and have a son two months old. My wife will never talk to me. All she thinks about is work. Even when I talk to her, most of the time she isn't paying any attention. I have been extra good to her to try to swing her to me, but it has done no good, and I get very lonesome sitting around the house with no one to talk to. Can you tell me what I can do to make her at least friendly toward me? Doesn't it look to you as though she is not in love? I was in hopes she would change some time, but I have given up.

"A Lonesome Husband."

It very often happens that when a woman has a baby to care for she seems to lose her love for her husband. The baby is so small and helpless, and so dear, that it seems to occupy her whole time and attention. Can you be patient a while longer? Get a hobby of your own, such as stamp or coin collecting. Go out with your men friends once in a while, and try to get her to go out once in a while while you stay with the baby. As the baby grows older she will feel the need of you more and will, I hope, show you that she still loves you. There is a portion of Louisa M. Alcott's pretty story of "Little Women," in which the author tells how the married sister, Margaret, neglected her husband after the twins were born, and how she was brought to a realization of it and reformed. You might get it at the library and give it to your wife to read, as a gentle hint.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young girl, 17 years old, and engaged. Do you think that I am too young to marry? Mother things so. I love this boy and think that he loves me, although we quarrel quite a bit. I'm sure you can answer this question, and I'm going to take your advice. Would it be considered poor taste or judgment to be married in white organdie in October?"

"Useless."

Pretty young, dear. But your mother is the best judge of that. You would have to have her consent, you know. Some girls of 17 are much more mature than others, and seem to know their own minds. White organdie would be very pretty and appropriate.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am 18 years old and have been married six months to a man four years my senior. He goes autoing with a young man the same age and insists on having a good time, but compels me to stay at home and obey him. Do you think I should obey him when he does as he pleases? Do you think he should go autoing and leave me home? Does it look suspicious to you of another girl, or does he do it for pleasure?"

"Broken Hearted"

Your husband likes to get out with the fellows, I presume, Broken Hearted, and is thoughtless about leaving you. Why don't you get a bunch of girls together when he does that and have a good time, too? As to obeying him, if his mandates seem good to you, obey, especially if he asks you in a nice way. If they don't seem good to you, don't obey.

How to Achieve Beauty

HAIR GROOMING

In these days, when a woman is judged so much by the condition and appearance of her hair, it is foolish, indeed, to imagine that one can rely upon a tight hat to hide defects in hair grooming. There is nothing more important to the ensemble of beauty than gleaming, lustrous hair, showing the effects of regular attention.

It is impossible to discuss hair grooming without taking into consideration the fact that the appearance of one's hair is very dependent upon the good taste you show in selecting a coiffure. Many a woman has completely submerged her distinctive beauty through fixing her hair in the current style without sufficient consideration of her features, head curves or type. There are a few standard rules which it might be worth your while to take into consideration. The fact is, that the really beautiful coiffure, whether long or short, always shows the natural curve of the head. Another point worthy of consideration is that the modern vogue calls for simplicity. Elaborate curls or frizzy, wild-looking hair, is very much de trop.

A woman with a large nose and receding forehead or chin must modify the sleek silhouette. If she subscribes to a close or mannish bob, all her bad points are going to be greatly accentuated. Should her hair be long, a very becoming style would be for her to coil her hair far down on the neck, thus balancing the large nose and receding chin. While bangs are not very much the vogue this season, nevertheless it is a simple fact that a curled under bang will make the brow seem straight, thus minimizing a bad line at the forehead.

If you have any particularly ugly feature, you must avoid the straight hair comb. That is only pretty when there is delicate chiseling, a small face or a general air of delicacy or a feeling of sophistication to the features. Middle parts make the face look wider, and enlarge the appearance of the features. The shingled coiffure is only becoming if you have a small and pretty nose. If your eyes are close set, be sure that you have a side parting.

In creating a coiffure, consider always not only the front view, but the side and back as well. If you have bobbed hair, the following hints may help you in choosing a becoming bob. If you have a short and pretty neck, the close shingle will suit you. If your neck is long and thin, do not have your hair cut short. A wide face requires a close hair comb, and well set waves. If the face is long and thin, the curls on either side may be fluffed out very slightly. If your forehead is high, a flat curl may be becoming in the center, but this is usually too extreme to be really pretty. If you are tall, you cannot get away with the childish bob. In fact, the wisest thing for you to do will be to have the body skillfully shaped to resemble long hair. A very neatly waved bob is most becoming for a mature woman. The sleek cut requires beauty and youth.

Heads that are flat should never be closely shingled. If, however, you have a well-shaped head, the hair may be cropped very close. A point down the center of the back is becoming if your hair grows low on the nape of the neck, and will make a heavy neck look slimmer. The thin neck requires a curved line, and as a last injunction, let me warn you that whether you are beautiful or not, there is one requirement for good hair grooming, and that is, a regular hair cut every two or three weeks, and a complete absence of the ugly stubble on the back of the neck.

WEEK OF NOVEMBER 4

The early days of the week beginning November 4 in Michigan are expected to be rather warm for the season.

Storm conditions will continue more or less over into the middle days of the week, by which time temperatures will have fallen to lower levels.

There may be some storminess with wind and rain close to Friday or Saturday of this week, but we believe the real storm center of this period will not reach Michigan until the early days of next week.

Weather and feed conditions among poultry will be a strong influence for the balance of the year in the fall and winter lay.

Sparks Cause Big Percentage Of Home Fires

Seventy-five per cent of fires in dwellings start in roofs or chimneys and are caused by sparks from the burning of coal or wood.

John G. Gamber, formerly state fire marshal for Illinois and past president of the National State Fire Marshals' association, is authority for the statement that the increase of oil heating will prove a definite factor in reducing the country's fire losses.

In addition to the reduction of the hazard from sparks, it eliminates the necessity of handling hot ashes, another prolific cause of dwelling fires.

"It's queer." Again that nervous chuckle. Stella was not calm, herself, now. She was sensitively aware of the finely proportioned old room.

"It's queer," she began again. "I find my notions of life getting upset. All this so terribly real. In New York, the way you live and get to thinking about things, you're inclined to forget that village life can be vital."

"I can," said Homer. He'd been gazing up at the ceiling. Now, abruptly, he moved his head and narrowing his brows, looked straight at her.

"I used to think I wanted to get into that New York life," said he. She laughed again. And hated herself for it. In her own ears it sounded tinnily self-conscious.

"No." "It's tremendously stimulating, of course. It's where all the big things happen. And it's the only place in America, I suppose, where the individual can feel free to express himself."

"She didn't understand. It was strange that they should be coolly discussing New York. Of course she ought to go."

"I don't know about the great genius," said he. "Probably such a person has to go it alone. Just frankly be disruptive. The trouble with New York is that it's full of little geniuses and persons with nothing at all to express, letting their egos loose all over the place."

"That was a stab. She drew in her breath quickly. Did he mean it as a stab? Apparently not. He was talking thoughtfully on. "One little constructive job is a tough enough proposition for any ordinary human being to tackle. It takes all you've got of courage and faith. It takes a lifetime. I see that now. Ham saw it."

"It's what they laugh at in New York, Stella. It's precisely what they laugh at. The millions of Orientals that swarm over the city. And all the little strutting egos. They're forever hacking at it. And that happens to be the finest thing we've got. It's really just about all we've got. Yes, Ham was right. It's a war. And here's the battle line, right here in Ackland. In any little American town that has a tradition that's worth fighting for. You have to take sides in a war, you know. Find out which side you belong on, and stand squarely there. I've found my place, thank God! It's here. Here's where I stand."

"But the world is changing so, Homer. Concepts, standards, everything. Haven't we got to change with it?"

"All the more reason to fight for our little real remnant of what hasn't changed? Oh, to the Cosmic Eye, if there is such a thing, it probably looks comic. A little town against a crazy world. And the town itself too bewildered to think clearly. Invaded, overrun, just as Ham used to say. But why isn't it the first job of the few who have faith to rouse them, rally their forces?"

CHAPTER XXIV How boyish he was! But how stirring! Stella couldn't look at him now. She folded her hands in her lap and looked down at them. There was a lump in her throat.

"Well," said he, "even so, there's no sense in preaching at you, you're with us, God knows."

"I wonder if God does know." "You certainly appear to be." "Yes, but . . . after all, Homer, I'm New York. It has meant everything to me."

"You don't seem New Yorky. You're a fighter. And you're the only person in the world, apparently, that I can talk with right now."

"I certainly thought you were with me, Stella. It has seemed so, today." "I am, Homer. But . . ." color flamed into her face. . . . "but I'm New York, just the same. I live with those little strutting egos. They're my friends. I've laughed at Ackland. I'm one of them. I'm disruptive, too, without even being a genius. I broke away from my family. Went out on my own."

"But you are gifted, Stella . . ." "No. Just restless. I wanted my life to myself. Martha taunted me with it last night—this morning—I caught her sneaking in from a ride and climbing up the woodshed to her room. She'd been drinking. She's just a wild little flapper. And defiant about it. She said the family had tried to keep her shut up to balance what I'd done to them. I've learned one thing. You can't protect a girl at home. Your brother was right. The world reaches in . . . Well, I really must go."

"Oh, no, Stella! Look here, Wilbraham's likely to drop in again. He may bring news. Why don't you just stay on and have a bite with us? You can call up your folks."

"I'm sorry, Stella. You must forgive me for hanging on to you like this. But you have to talk to somebody. And here at home I don't let them see my real feelings. You see, they've nobody else to lean on now."

Tears were coming. She moved to the window and looked out. She could see the clock on the Unitarian church. It was just a quarter past five. There was time to get the Ford home, fix up a little, work out some sort of misleading half-truth to tell the folks, and catch the six-ten bus for Coventry. She couldn't get out of that.

When she turned back into the room he was standing by the couch.

"Ernie is this . . . fair?"

He could see that her eyes were wet, of course. She wondered what he'd think if he knew the reason.

"It's a trick to get hold of the paper." "I suppose so. But the worst of it is, it's a perfectly reasonable thing to do. A lot of people would say it's what they ought to do. Protect themselves. They know that we've been running behind. And they know that Homer is hardly more than a boy, staggering under all that has happened. Things don't look any too bright, and these notes have run quite a while. Ham paid one off in the spring. He was planning to pay another in September. What do you think I ought to do? Shall I tell him tonight?"

Stella sat limply. She felt the blow as if it had been aimed at herself. Miss Curry was still quietly crying. "No," said Stella, huskily. "Let him have one more night's sleep. He told me he'd be coming down here tomorrow."

"Then I'll come, too," said Miss Curry. "Nothing can be done before Monday, anyway." "I have to go along," remarked Stella, after a silence.

The bus slowed down at the railway station in Coventry. Through the window she could see Hallam's roadster waiting, on the farther side of the street, under the elms. He sat at the wheel, smoking, a soft hat pulled down over his eyes. She thought he looked moody. She felt moody herself, and confused. Her pulse had quickened, and was beating uncomfortably in her temples. So she sat motionless until the other passengers had filed out of the bus. She had to go then, or be carried on. Deliberately she walked across the street. He didn't speak; merely started up his motor. She walked around behind the car and got in. Then they were in motion. She found herself a little afraid of him. In a sense, he had some right to feel annoyed with her. She'd kept him guessing.

"You said there was some place you wanted me to take you, Stella." "Yes. We're going to Jazzland. Near Ackland." "Oh! The scene of the murder." "Yes." Her tongue was released now. Nervously, swiftly, she talked. About the case and the attack on Homer; and then about the problem of Martha. It was a relief to talk about Martha. About anything which might appear to explain her preoccupation of mind. He let her run on, merely asking a road direction now and then.

Jazzland, set back under the tall pines, was attractive. Many cars were parked outside. The rows of tables on the glassed-in and screened verandahs were lighted by candles in yellow shades. Snatches of exotic cacophony, currently regarded as music, blared out into the twilight.

"We're going to try a little detective work," she remarked, as they crossed the yard. He said nothing. They were shown to a table; and went through the process of ordering dinner casually. Rather like a settled couple, she thought. His eyes disturbed her. They took her in, weighing her, judging her. So she brought up the Martha topic again. Something would have to be done about the child. She couldn't think what.

"The thing to do, of course," said Hallam, quietly, authoritatively, "is to get her out of the home. It's no place for a youngster with any vitality."

She knew, as he uttered the words, that her own thoughts had been groping toward that conclusion.

He went on, speaking quietly but eyeing her. "What they're trying to do is to smother the fire that's in her. Pinch back her budding faculties. They won't succeed. The human individual must be helped along. Encouraged to grow. You can't kill life. If you try you'll just turn it sour. Can't you rescue her?"

"I don't know. It's pretty difficult, Ernie." They fell silent. She wished he'd take those eyes off her. She looked out at the dancing floor. The lights were dim. The couples circling about impressed her as odd-looking people; the men mostly young and of a rougher sort than you saw about Ackland, the girls pretty, but rather overdressed and overpainted. There was liquor in evidence. The party at the next table were pouring gin into ginger ale from a flask. And a number of couples on the floor clung together, unsteadily. The Negro orchestra wailed about and jiggled in their chairs as they crashed out the jazz dissonances. The drummer sang in a voice of deep timbre, tossing his sticks in the air.

Stella drummed lightly on the table. If only Ernest would take those eyes off her! What was he thinking?" She said: "Let's dance."

Merely being active was something of a relief. Better, at least, than sitting there. Ernest danced well. He did everything well. He was mature, strong, determined. Back at the table, over the soup, she said: "Ernie, I want something to drink."

"I didn't bring my flask." "The waiter'll be back in a minute. See if he won't bring in something." But the waiter, after a quick scrutiny, shook his head. "No," he said. "Oh, no."

"Ask the headwaiter to come here," said Hallam. "His name is Albert," Stella put in, eagerly, when the man had gone. A tall, handsome Greek appeared. "Albert," said Hallam, "can't you get me a little whisky?"

Again that sense of being under scrutiny. Then, "No, sir, we are not allowed to sell anything."

Stella smiled up at him. "You don't know us," she remarked. "But really, we're all right. This gentleman is Ernest Hallam, the novelist, from New York."

The Greek stood there, merely looking. Hallam drew a handful of papers from a coat pocket and looked through them. "Here," he said, "is a card admitting me to Gustave's, in Forty-sixth street. Do you know Gustave's?"

The Greek stood a moment longer; then, without further words, moved away. "They're careful enough," said Hallam. "They have to be," Stella replied.

CHAPTER XXV Shortly the Greek returned and laid on the table a flat parcel wrapped in a bit of newspaper. "Four dollars, please," he said.

Stella peeped within the paper. "It's a pint of Scotch, Ernie. My word, but they charge enough!"

The thought came that he despised her small evasions. Probably he'd talk out before long. He'd never before been slow about expressing his thoughts. Was he waiting for her? She couldn't speak to the point. Certainly not until that pounding in her temples eased down. His grim self-control made her feel a fluttering feminine thing. Confusing mental pictures kept rising of Homer lying white and inert on a sofa while the doctor worked on his head. In that peaceful Colonial room, with the ceiling-high tiers of books and the huge globe and the dictionary on its wire stand and Kitty Pew standing breathless in a window alcove and the crushed Aunt Emma twisting her hands.

Soberly, more than ever like a settled couple, they finished their dinner. Then they smoked. And still the somber eyes were on her. So she suggested dancing again. The evening wore on. The crowd grew. The floor was crowded now. And the liquor was telling. She saw a middle-aged man, with gray strands in his hair, kissing his partner as they danced. The girl couldn't have been twenty. A hum of singing rose from the floor. A girl broke into hysterical laughter, and her escort led her out to the parking area.

They sat again at their table. Stella glanced at her watch. It was a little after ten. His eyes were on her. She stirred uncomfortably. "Ernie," she remarked, struggling to appear casual, "I must be going. I . . . I've got a lot to do."

"All right," said he, with a snap of decision in his voice. "We'll go." In that, curious, silent manner, they walked out to the car. She carried the whisky bottle, still wrapped in its bit of newspaper. She was aware of couples in the dim cars under the pines; a face here and there, and white arms. She thought of Ham Pew and what he had died for.

They drove out of the yard, still without a word. Hallam turned west. "This is the wrong turn, Ernie," said she. "We go the other way." He deliberately speeded up the car. She sank back in the seat. Now she sensed, back of the set face, blazing purpose. It was difficult. Doubtless she hadn't been fair with him. She felt tired. And more than a little afraid.

"Ernie, is this . . . fair?" "Fair?" He bent a quick look on her. "It's a great time to be saying that. Are you really laboring under the impression that you've been fair?" (To be continued)

New models and THE OPEN MIND

THE public, with its healthy desire for the new and the better, insists upon continuous improvement, and will withdraw its patronage from any product or service which stands still.

Nowhere is this more true than in the automobile industry. The car is more than a utility. It is a personal thing, involving your convenience, your comfort, your safety, your sense of beauty and color, your pride of ownership, your complete environment for many hours of your life. Customs and habits of living change fast; and the past holds many warnings of how quickly your favor can shift when an automobile, for even a single year, fails to show progress.

So continuous improvement is more than a policy with General Motors. It is a vital necessity.

THE PUBLIC DEMANDS NEW MODELS

And the public is right. Out of that demand have come electric starting and lighting, the closed body, Duco finish, four-wheel brakes and hundreds of refinements, big and little. Improvements that might have taken a generation have been born within a few years because people want greater performance, beauty and comfort.

Equipped with the largest research laboratories, proving ground and body building plants, and guided by an Open Mind which is ready to revise its thinking in response to new facts, General Motors believes that it is peculiarly fitted not only to sense but to anticipate public demand and to give the people better automobiles at better values year after year.

As evidence of that faith we presented some months ago the New Chevrolet, the New Pontiac, the New Oldsmobile. And now we offer, with equal pride, the New Buick, the New Cadillac, the New LaSalle and the New Oakland.

CHEVROLET. 7 Bigger and Better models, $495 to $715. 4-wheel brakes. More powerful engine. Luxurious Fisher Bodies. New colors. Also Light Delivery Truck chassis; $375; Utility Truck chassis with 4 speeds forward; $520.

PONTIAC. 7 models, $745 to $875. Lowest priced General Motors Six—now offers more power, greater economy—more speed, greater acceleration. Arresting beauty of bodies by Fisher expresses the vogue of the hour.

OLDSMOBILE. 7 models, $925 to $1085. Also 5 DeLuxe models, $1145 to $1235. "The fine Car at Low Price." Completely redesigned and improved by General Motors. More powerful. 4-wheel brakes. Longer, roomier Fisher Bodies.

OAKLAND. 7 models of the new All American Six, recently announced, $1145 to $1375. Distinctively new original appearance. Solendid new performance. Luxurious appointments, in new bodies by Fisher. A car you'll be proud to own.

BUICK. 18 Silver Anniversary models on 3 wheel-bases. $1195 to $2145. Lightning flash getaway. Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher. Comfort and luxury in every mile. Power for the steepest hill and the longest run.

LASALLE. 13 new models, $2295 to $2875. Attractive car of Continental lines. Companion car to Cadillac. 90 degree V-type 8-cylinder engine. Beautiful Bodies by Fisher. Striking Duco color combinations.

CADILLAC. 26 models, $3295 to $7000. Standard of the world. Famous 90 degree V-type 8 cylinder engine. Luxurious Bodies by Fisher and Fleetwood. An extensive range of color and upholstery combinations.

High Buildings Cause of Freak Whirlwinds

One may learn many interesting things about air currents and the way storms develop by watching the movement of pieces of paper or perhaps his hat as it is whirled about the street. A variety of miniature wind storms are caused by the high buildings of our cities or the forms of streets which well repay study.

On a hot day, when the air is perfectly quiet, the atmosphere as it becomes heated tends to rise along the sides of rocks or buildings, and if it travels high enough it develops into a strong wind, which descends on the opposite side and plays queer pranks.

A small whirlwind is often produced by the action of wind against a corner formed by several buildings. As the wind travels down a street, especially a narrow one, it rapidly increases in velocity. A little will spill into the side streets, but the main stream will flow on gathering momentum. Observe this wind strike against the side of a high building and notice how it "mushrooms" out on all sides, splitting into many air currents, and trace these till they come to rest, but be sure to hold tightly to your hat in the meantime.

Over-Expression Mark of the Inferior Writer

But all over-expression, whether by journalists, poets, novelists or clergymen, is bad for the language, and by over-expression I mean the use of words running beyond the sincere feeling of writer or speaker or beyond what the event will sanely carry.

From time to time a crusade is preached against it from the text: "The cat was on the mat." Some Victorian scribe, we must suppose, once wrote: "Stretching herself with feline grace and emitting those sounds memorially connected with satisfaction, Grimalkin lay on a rug whose richly variegated pattern spoke eloquently of the Orient and all the wonders of the Arabian Nights."

And an exasperated reader annotated the margin with that shorter version of the absorbing event. How the late Georgian scribe will express the occurrence we do not yet know. Thus, perhaps: "What there is of cat is cat is what of cat there lying cat is what on what of mat lying cat." The reader will probably annotate the margin with "Some cat!"—John Galsworthy in "Castles in Spain."

"Life a Universal Force"

Svante August Arrhenius, the noted Swedish chemist and physicist, believes that life is an interstellar element and may be transmitted from one planet to another. According to his conception, life is universally diffused and is constantly emitted from all habitable worlds in the form of spores. These spores traverse space for years, and possibly ages. The majority of them are ultimately destroyed by the heat of some blazing star, but some few, he thinks, find a resting place on bodies which have already reached the habitable stage. Life, according to Arrhenius, may also be transmitted from one heavenly body to another by means of meteors.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Talking About Oneself

Speech of a man's self ought to be seldom, and well chosen. I knew one was wont to say in scorn, "He needs be a wise man, he speaks so much of himself"; and there is but one case wherein a man may commend himself with good grace and that is in commending virtue in another, especially if it be such a virtue whereunto himself pretendeth. Speech of touch towards others should be sparingly used; for discourse ought to be as a field, without coming home to any man.—Lord Bacon.

Crows Unaffected by Gas

Crows have no fear of toxic gas. The chemical division of the army at Washington experimented with crows and gas. The crows were gassed but immediately flew high in the air where they escaped the fumes which clung to the earth. During the war pigeons returned to their cages safely when liberated in a gas cloud. This mystery was solved when the birds were seen to rise quickly above the gas. Tests show that crows fly out of gas clouds in much the same manner.

Took Indian Appellation

Perth Amboy was settled in 1683 and was expected soon to outstrip its neighbors and become the London of America. It was named Perth, after James, earl of Perth, but Amboy, the original Indian name for the place, was soon added. It was the capital of the province from 1684 almost continuously up to the time of the Revolution. William Franklin, the last royal governor, was captured there in 1776. Perth Amboy was incorporated as a city in 1718.

King Alfred's Candles

King Alfred, feeling the need of conserving his time, used candles made with rings and bits of different breadths and colors, according to an old legend. When the candle had burned down to the respective marks he knew he had been employed long enough at whatever business he was then engaged in. As the wind or drafts often produced serious irregularities in the time of burning, the king contrived special lanterns for greater accuracy.—Exchange.

Venable (for both the short and long terms as United States Senator) and Congressman John C. Ketcham mean a continuance of business stability and national well being under Republican policies.

The re-election of Governor Fred W. Green and all other Republican state nominees will mean a continuance of the administration of the past two years that has placed Michigan's state affairs upon a sound, economical business basis.

The re-election of State Senator George Leland and Representative Sheldon Coleman are important to strengthen the state administration.

Five weeks ago we came to town from Buffalo, N. Y.

We found the people very nice, but still there was some trouble; it was the bread they bought in town that got them real discouraged.

For it had no taste and it had no weight and it never saw no milk.

We changed the formula around and gave it weight and milk

And also gave it flavor and no one is discouraged

We told the grocers of the change in bread and in the people

And it only was a little while that the demand was getting bigger.

The name of bread we did so change to Gobles Golden Glow.

For it is baked in your home town and this is worth to know.

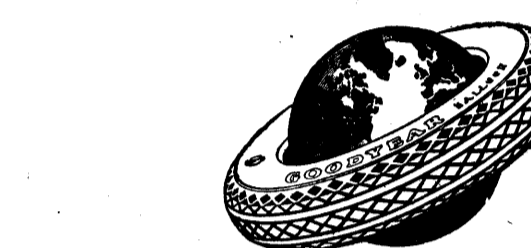

So ask your grocer and ask us for Gobles Golden Glow;

Take home a loaf and come back for more

And there be happiness I know.
