Another Fatality

This community was stunned early Saturday evening when it was learned that Frank Fry was dead.

Many rumors are current as to the cause of his death which occurred in front of the Grove store and the circumstances warranted the calling of a coroner's jury which is in session as we go to press.

Frank had lived most of his life here and leaves a host of friends and acquaintances who deeply regret his untimely death.

With his aged father, Frank was planning on their usual trip to Florida for the winter and the fact that the two have lived together makes it doubly sad.

Truly a most sad and unfortunate ending to the life of one who is much needed here.

Election

Tuesday Van Buren county returned to the solid republican ranks giving substantial majorities from president to coroner.

The state and nation joined in doing likewise. Late national returns may change the majority slightly but will not effect the fact that this is a republican year.

Winter-Kridler

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Kridler Tuesday eve, Nov. 6, when their daughter, Evelyn became the bride of Linus G. Winter. Promptly at eight o'clock the bridal couple took their places under an arch of pink and white (with Dan Cupid in the background.)

Mr. Winter was attended by Mr. Emerson Kridler of Kalamazoo, brother of the bride, while Miss Isabelle Winter of Detroit, sister of the groom acted as bridesmaid. Rev. Mark Penoyer of Gobles community church performed the ceremony, the impressive ring ceremony being used; after which the wedding lunch was served, the dining room being decorated in blue and white.

The bride was gowned in peach silk georgette and wore a bandeaux of white wax flowers. The bridesmaid was gowned in orchid satin while the groom and best man were dressed in the conventional blue.

Those from out of town were Mrs. Elizabeth Winter and daughter, Isabelle and son, Michael of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Crawford of Chicago, Emerson Kridler and Bernice Brotherton of Kalamazoo.

Mr. and Mrs. Winter left Wednesday morning for a short honeymoon among relatives at Detroit, West Branch and Lansing, after which they will be at home to their many friends at the Emery cottage at Lake Mill.

Mrs. Winter is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Kridler and is well known in this vicinity. Mr. Winter is the genial book keeper in the Ford garage.

Their many friends are extending congratulations.

This affair was not quite so quiet a few hours later when a jolly bunch from Gobles headed by the only single member left in the Ford Garage came for an old time chivarari and to extend congratulations.

School Notes

Last Friday evening Rev. and Mrs. Penoyer entertained the Junior and Senior classes with a Halloween party at the Community church club house. The party was a masquerade. James Clement won first prize for the boys, dressed in a black witch outfit, and Guinevere Thompson won first prize for the girls, dressed in a red devil outfit. Both costumes were very clever. There were other unique costumes but these two were picked by the judges, Mr. Ojala and Mr. Stratton. There was something doing every minute throughout the evening; many new games were played, under the direction of Mrs. Penoyer. Plenty of cake and ice cream were served and all in all it was one of the peppiest and nicest school parties the writer has attended in Gobles.

Catherine Hudson and Roberta Dorgan gave campaign speeches for Smith and Marie Waber and Anita Stimpson for Hoover last Friday morning in Chapel. The talks were well given and showed a great deal of knowledge of the two candidates. The talks were prepared in conjunction with the Public Speaking class, and were part of the preliminaries of the election held Tuesday. Results were as follows: Pres., Hoover, 77, Smith 12. Governor, Green, 78, Comstock 11. Senator, Vandenberg, 77, Bailey 11. Representative, Ketchum 70, Jarvis 12. Prosecutor Williams 71, Cavanaugh 16. Sheriff, Buckley 73, Foster 14. The above shows a landslide for the Republicans as far as Gobles High School is concerned.

Glad to see a few of the parents at Chapel last Friday morning. Everyone is welcomed at our chapel programs.

A practice debate was held with St. Joe last night at the schoolhouse. The debaters expect to have another practice debate tomorrow night and one with Otsego next Wednesday night.

Question for debate this year is "Resolved that a Government Subsidy to Build a Strong Merchant Marine is a Wise Policy." Our first debate is with Hope College High School in Holland. Gobles will take the negative side and Hope will entertain the debate.

The Board of Education has decided that there will be no charge for the debates held in Gobles this year. It is hoped that many people will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this important question discussed. As yet the team has not been selected, but will be announced next week.

Mr. Ojala will make a formal call for basket ball boys next week.

MAY JOIN FAIRS OF NORTHWEST

Union of northwestern Michigan county fair associations was considered at a meeting of the Manistee Board of Commerce recently.

According to plans of the Manistee County Agricultural Society, which promotes the Manistee county fair, merging of fair associations would permit joint dealing with concession and entertainment companies and arrangement of a short circuit for horse racing. Duplication of dates also would be prevented through making of a schedule in which each fair would have separate dates.

Among those who presented their views on the proposal were Arnold Engstrom, secretary of the Northwestern Michigan Fair association; George Powers, secretary of the Oceana County Fair association; James Mulliken, Traverse City mayor; W. J. Hobbs, secretary of the Traverse City Board of Commerce; John Novak, Traverse City; George Hawley, Hart, and several Manistee residents.

Moving the Manistee county fair from Onkema to Manistee city was proposed at the meeting. It is believed the increase in attendance will offset the $30,000 cost of removing the buildings from the old grounds, where fairs have been held the past 25 years. Means of financing the venture, which is expected to be the chief obstacle, were discussed.

State Beans Range From Excellent to Poor, Report Says

The 1928 bean crop ranges from poor to excellent, says the October crop report of the state department of agriculture. The report continues:

"In the south central counties, good yields are being obtained and the quality is unusually good. In the Saginaw valley and eastern counties, heavy rains caused increasing losses of acreage from month to month during the growing season, and damaged the stands in many of the fields that survived. The area thus affected is roughly estimated to be about one-half of the state's bean producing section. The amount of acreage abandoned has not yet been determined, but the loss is very heavy in several important counties and partial in a number of others.

"The best interpretation of the situation at this date, taking into consideration the present condition, increased acreage harvest in certain counties, the greatly reduced acreage harvested in others, and early reports of yields, indicated a total production of 5,100,000 bushels. This is a small increase over last year's."

Old Records Broken By Michigan Horses

The world's records for pulling held by Michigan horses last year have been broken this year by other Michigan teams, according to the records compiled from the horsepulling contests held at 15 Michigan fairs.

In the light team class, the new record pull, 2,875 pounds, was made by a team owned by Allen Haskins, Ionia. The team weighs 2,890 pounds and the record pull was made at the Ionia fair where 10,000 people watched the horse pulling contest.

A pair of purebred Belgians owned by the Lansing Excavating Company are the new record holders in the heavy team class. The record, 3,175 pounds, was made at the Fowlerville fair, October 4.

The pulls are measured by a dynamometer to which the horses are hitched, and the pull made is a dead lift of the load, for a distance of 27.5 feet. A pull of 3,175 pounds on the dynamometer is equal to that made in keeping a load of 108 tons in motion on a level pavement.

Two dynamometers were needed this year to fill all the fair dates at which horse pulling contests were scheduled. The contests were supervised by members of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College who report that there is no decline in the popular interest in equine horsepower.

Association Places 78 Pure Bred Sheep

Seventy-eight purebred sheep, 71 rams and 7 ewes were distributed this fall to farmers in Missaukee, Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, Presque Isle, Alpena, Montcalm, Oscoda, Alcona, Ogemaw and Gladwin counties through the co-operation of the Michigan Purebred Sheep Breeders' association with the animal husbandry department at the Michigan State College.

Meetings were held in each of the counties visited to discuss breeding problems and flock culling. The purebred sheep were transported by truck by the college extension specialists. In this way farmers were able to save transportation charges and to obtain animals of approved type of the breeds better known in Michigan.

The breeds represented in group distributed included 32 Shropshires, 26 Hampshires, 16 Oxfords, one Rambouillet and one Black Top Merino.

Last year 21 purebred sheep were distributed.

Wouldn't it be reminiscent of that seventh round in Chicago if Tunney's wedding had been delayed because he couldn't find the ring.

Michigan Crops Mostly Larger Than Last Year

With all the crops harvested or practically ready for harvest on October 1, the estimates of this year's crop production for Michigan are nearly all larger than in 1927 according to the crop report issued recently by Herbert E. Powell, Commissioner of Agriculture and Verne H. Church, Agricultural Statistician for Michigan. If corn yields as well as the October 1st condition of 77 per cent indicated, and the present estimated bean crop is saved; the total production of Michigan's grain crops this year will be ten per cent higher than in 1927. Potatoes are much better than last year, and the total fruit crop as estimated is over a third larger than in 1927. Contrasted with this is the poorest sugar beet crop on record.

According to October 1 prospects the Michigan corn crop will be about ten million bushels larger than last year but considerably below average. The United States corn crop is 129,000,000 bushels larger than last year's average crop. Michigan's oat crop yielded 35.8 bushels per acre and totaled nine million bushels more than the ten-year average crop. The State's barley yield of 30 bushels has not been exceeded in 25 years and only equaled in 1928.

The potato outlook varies in different sections of Michigan considerably. Some of the central and southern counties will have yields only average or below, but in the northern section the yields will be above average. The October forecast for the Michigan crop is 35,700,000 which is large, but this size crop has been exceeded eight times in the last 25 years. However, the United States potato crop of 463,722,000 bushels forecast is the largest on record. Most of the late potato states have a higher condition than Michigan and large crops so that careful grading and systematic marketing is imperative this year.

The Michigan bean crop ranges from poor to excellent with good yields and fine quality in the south central counties. But roughly one-half of the State's acreage comprising the Saginaw Valley and eastern counties has been severely damaged by rains and acreage has been lost throughout the season. The best interpretation of the Michigan situation on October 1st, taking into consideration the condition, the increased acreage for harvest in certain counties, the greatly reduced acreage for harvest in others, and early reports of yields indicated a total production of 5,100,000 bushels or slightly more than last year. The United States October 1 bean crop forecast is 15,896,000 bushels or little changed from last month.

Do You Know These?

1. Why is Grimm alfalfa seed preferred by farmers of the north central states?
2. What method of cooking vegetables is considered superior to boiling?
3. How does the blister rust of white pine spread?
4. What is dodder?
5. How is salt used in eradicating barberry bushes in the state?
6. Why is the commercial canning of peas supposed to be superior to the common open kettle method?
7. What feed bill does alfalfa hay reduce?
8. What is "shoddy"?
9. Why is oil effective in combating many insects?
10. Will sand or clay soil hold the most moisture?
11. What is the dressing percentage of a well finished steer?
12. How many pounds of wool constitute a high annual yield for one sheep?
13. What is "green manure"?

It's This Way

1. It not only produces high yields, but it is strong and hardy, being able to withstand the cold winters of northern United States.
2. Steaming, as it retains the valuable mineral matter which is often dissolved in the water while the vegetables are boiling.
3. In its life cycle it attacks currant and gooseberry bushes on which it forms galls, which in turn infect healthy white pine.
4. A parasitic plant which destroys clover.
5. Destruction of this rust-spreading bush is greatly simplified by applying salt on the sprouts and crown of the barberry.
6. Although heat will destroy vitamins, more of these valuable substances are retained when the peas are efficiently cooked in well regulated steam kettles rather than in the open pots at home.
7. The bill for high-protein dairy feeds such as linseed meal, cottonseed meal and bran.
8. Shoddy is wool which has been reworked into cloth after having been used once or more for that purpose.
9. Oil fills and covers the tiny pores through which insects breathe, suffocating them.
10. Clay will hold considerably more moisture than will sand.
11. The dressed carcass of a well finished steer will weigh about 57 to 60 per cent of its live weight.
12. Nine pounds or more.
13. "Green manure" is a crop plowed under to add humus to the soil.

PAYS TO FERTILIZE FERTILIZING CROP ON RUN-DOWN LAND

Green manuring is a practice growing in favor among food farmers, even in the Central and Northern states, although because of mild winters it is of greater present importance in the South. Farmers realize that this is an excellent method for increasing the fertility of their crop lands. However, the fact that this is a method of soil improvement and fertilization sometimes leads farmers to try the practice under conditions in which it can not be successful.

The object in growing a green-manure crop, according to forage crop specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, is to produce especially on poor soil as much material as possible to turn under. On very poor soils it frequently happens that even the strongest feeders can make but a poor growth and consequently the benefit from the crop is decreased. Even cowpeas will sometimes make only a poor growth unless the plants are stimulated by an artificial fertilizer.

When a legume is grown the addition of nitrogen is not usually necessary, as the legume will gather its own nitrogen; but an application of phosphorus and potash often increases the crop greatly and thus enables the plants to gather more nitrogen. The phosphorus and potash that may be applied for the benefit of the green-manure crop are not wasted either, as they will all be available for the next crop when the green-manure crop decays.

What fertilizer to use and how much will depend on the soil and on the crop, but generally 300 to 400 pounds of 16 per cent superphosphate and 100 pounds of muriate of potash per acre will be found to stimulate the growth of the green manure so as to produce a larger crop than could have been grown without fertilizer.

The larger crop, if a legume, will gather more nitrogen than a small one could, and the soil will receive correspondingly greater benefit. It is also good practice to apply stable manure to particularly poor spots, so as to encourage a good growth, and thus bring the field up to a more uniform productiveness.

Protect the Strawberry Plants in Cold Weather

In the northern states strawberries need to be protected during the winter and especially during the period when frequent freezing and thawing takes place. Heavy losses result from plants being thrown up and consequently killed by the soil being raised with frost and in a honeycomb condition. The ground after freezing and raising the plants settles to the normal level, leaving the roots exposed and the sun, wind and cold, and as they have practically no connection with the soil, soon dry up.

A liberal use of straw, leaves or old hay for mulching will prevent much of this damage and loss. This material when properly used prevents more or less the rapidity of freezing and thawing, or in other words causes the change to be more gradual and consequently doing less damage to the plants.

As a material for mulching, rye straw seems to give best satisfaction, because it may be broadcasted over the bed to a depth of four to six inches and not pack down hard like other mulching material. The time to apply may be put off until the first freeze of fall hardens the ground, so that a wagon load of the material will not cut through. If the bed is located in a windy place it will help retain the covering if limbs or pieces of boards are placed on the straw.

Much trouble will be saved if care is taken in the selection of material that contains no weed seed or other matter that will make extra work the following year. Because of the noxious weed seed, oat straw is usually found about as unsatisfactory as anything used for this purpose, and wheat straw has some of the same disadvantages and is not quite as good as rye straw. When marsh hay can be obtained from either fresh or salt water swamps or low lands, a very satisfactory material is had. On small beds or in the garden, evergreen boughs may be used to good advantage. But whatever material is used do not smother the plants by too heavy mulching, and here is where rye straw is best, because it remains loose and does not pack. The plants require covering enough to protect and this covering should be removed before it does injury in the spring.

Labor Asks Same Fund Farm Gets

The Grand Rapids Federation of Labor petitioned the board of supervisors for a $65,000 appropriation for the technical educational and the promotion of the general welfare of the workers in Grand Rapids, such sum to be used under the supervision of an industrial educational director approved by the federation. The petition was prompted through a request for an appropriation of a like amount for county farm work and home economics extension in this county.

Some of the whispering in this campaign is due to poor radio reception.

MICHIGAN NOT FIRST TO TAG FISH

That fish culturists of the Michigan conservation department are wrong in their belief that brook trout recently tagged at the Baldwin rearing station were the first fresh water fish in America to be so marked for identification is the contention of Wallace Van Cleave of Thompsonville.

The fish at Baldwin were tagged as part of the conservation department's program to mark 10,000 trout for identification. At the time the work was begun at that rearing station, early in October, fish culturists in charge of the tagging declared it to be the first experiment of its kind ever undertaken on fresh water fish. Van Cleave denies this. At least 30 years ago a tagging experiment was carried out by his father, Col. J. R. B. Van Cleave, in Lake Milona near Alexandria in central Minnesota. A great many fish were tagged, mostly black bass, Van Cleave states.

The tags were pear-shaped pieces of light metal, apparently aluminum, not more than an inch in length, with a small hole through the small end. On one side they bore a serial number, on the other side the name of Van Cleave. They were fastened to the fish by means of fine copper wire onto the gill cover.

The purposes of the experiment were to learn the yearly gain in the weight of the fish, their migratory habits, whether bass would again take a bait after being once caught by fishermen and other valuable scientific information.

A reward of $1 was offered to anyone catching one of the tagged fish if he would bring it to Col. Van Cleave for inspection. Many of them were returned and much interesting information gathered, Van Cleave says.

VICKS VAPORUB
Over 21 Million Jars Used Yearly

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Where Outdoor Political "Speaking" Originated

On a hillside near the historic old Walker tavern, shown above, at Brooklyn, Mich., the first outdoor political mass meeting in the United States was held 88 years ago. It was during the campaign between Martin Van Buren and William Henry Harrison for the presidency that Thomas Ewing spoke at this spot in behalf of Harrison. The idea of open air meetings struck the popular fancy and soon outdoor political rallies became numerous.

TO REMOVE BUOYS NOVEMBER 28

In Lake Superior the gas buoys at Grand Island Harbor will be withdrawn about November 29 and those at Presque Isle about November 30. Other gas buoys in Lake Superior will be withdrawn beginning December 2. Gas lighted beacons will continue in operation until the close of the season. Shore stations at Keweenaw and west of that point will close December 15 and shore stations east of Keweenaw will close December 16. All gas buoys in Lake Huron, Saginaw Bay, and the Straits of Mackinac will be withdrawn about November 2. Buoys in the Straits will be removed last. Poe Reef lightship will be withdrawn about December 12 and Lake Huron lightship will be withdrawn about December 15-18. Gas beacons will continue in operation until navigation has ceased. All shore stations will close December 18 should it be found necessary, and earlier if possible, but not earlier than December 16.

State in Effort to Get Rid of Gar Pike

Gar pike, notorious bad actor of the fish family, is constantly pursued by the department of conservation. A crew of two men are just about ready to close up an active season of work in dragging this unwanted inhabitant out of the lakes of Michigan.

The fishing crew goes about the job in a businesslike manner. They have ten 300-foot nets of inch mesh which are set in the lake. They are lifted daily and all the gar pike are promptly dispatched. Daily catches run as high as 70 to 80 and after the first day's fishing drop off rapidly until two or three are taken. The party seldom remains on a lake longer than five or six days.

Very seldom do any other species of fish become entangled in the nets. A report that comes to the department shows that occasionally a grass pike or an oversized perch is ensnared, but the number is negligible. Most of these are in perfect health and turned loose immediately.

Jackson County Plans To Employ Chemist

The Jackson county board of supervisors are considering hiring a full time chemist as an economical measure. Supervisor William Antcliff recently declared that a salaried chemist would be more economical than the present method of paying for analysis of liquor, water and other ingredients.

Saginaw Man Heads Institute for Blind

Announcement of the appointment of Eric S. Wessborg, vocational director of the Saginaw public schools, as superintendent of the Michigan Employment Institution for the Blind has been made by Jacob Steketeer of Grand Rapids, chairman of the institution commission.

At the same time Mr. Steketeer announced a change in the policy of the institution under which making a profit will become secondary to training blind persons to earn their own livings.

Wessborg succeeds Edgar E. Putnam, who resigned during an investigation of charges by residents and former residents of the institution. The commission held the charges had not been proved but accepted Putnam's resignation, which will become effective as soon as Wessborg can take over the duties.

Mr. Steketeer issued a statement saying: "Mass production of mops and brooms for the purpose of showing a profit will be eliminated. Every person admitted to the institution here will be given an opportunity to study the vocation for which he is best fitted, that he may return to his home and put into practical use the training he received.

"The law will be adhered to strictly by the commission. When a resident has received three years of training, he will be discharged, even though he may know he is not properly equipped to make his own way. This may seem hard, but it should be remembered that there are others who seek the same advantages he had and there is no reason why the state should assume a responsibility when it rightfully belongs to the community from which the man or woman came."

Reopen Seneca Mines

Mines of the Seneca Copper Mining Company in the upper peninsula of Michigan, which have been closed since June, 1927, will be re-opened shortly as a result of the New York Stock Exchange's approval of an additional issue of 100,000 shares of common stock. Proceeds of the sale of 100,000 shares, which bring the number of shares outstanding to 550,000, will be used to defray the cost of re-opening the mines and continuing the development work and mining operations abandoned when the price of copper metal failed to assure a profit. Copper is now selling around 15 cents a pound.

The new stock is to be sold to bondholders at not less than $3 a share, which compares with the current market price of approximately $5 a share. The Seneca company was organized in 1925, although the mines had been in production since 1920. Cessation of operations in 1927 was necessitated by the high cost of labor and supplies, the low price then prevailing for copper metal and the lack of funds for carrying on the business of the company.

Grand Trunk to Build Port Huron Bascule

C. G. Bowker, general manager of the Grand Trunk railroad, announces he has received authority from Montreal headquarters to proceed at once with construction of a steel bascule bridge over Black river.

A plan whereby the Pere Marquette railroad may abandon its swing bridge over the mouth of Black river and join with the Grand Trunk at Fifteenth street, was discussed by shipping men before the board of supervisors, but no definite action was taken.

State Will Consider Improvement of US27

A petition for paving US27 from Charlotte to Coldwater, presented by representatives of Eaton, Calhoun and Branch counties to the highway committee of the state administrative board will be taken under consideration, Gov. Green has announced. The route is through Olivet, Marshall and Tekonsha.

WAYNE BOOSTS OWN TAXES

Recent action by the Wayne County Board of Supervisors makes the county tax in Wayne greater than the state tax in the county. The board ordered a 50 per cent boost in county taxes, exclusive of annual levies for county roads and special purposes, or approximately a 33 per cent increase if those items are included, as compared with the tax figures for a year ago. The budget approved by the supervisors provides for a gross county and state levy for the ensuing year of $26,229,280 as compared with $24,708,402 for last year. Of this total, the county tax will be $12,456,128 as compared with $8,079,841 last year.

The total assessed valuation for the county is established at $4,476,658,500, an increase from $4,275,991,294 for a year ago. The rate this year will be $5.804 per $1,000 of assessed valuation as against $5.685 a year ago. This amounts to an increase of 1 1/2 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Upper Peninsula Air Line Proposed

A proposal was made to the 200 delegates who attended the recent Michigan Air Congress at Menominee by George W. McCormick, of Menominee, that the Detroit Board of Commerce subsidize an air line from Detroit to Menominee, which it was claimed would pay for itself not only in revenue, but would also effect a closer state unity. If the plans for this line discussed at the air congress are carried through, planes will be operating from Detroit and other lower peninsula cities to the upper peninsula next summer.

Will Manufacture Gliders

Announcement has been made of the organization in Detroit of the Gliders' Inc., which will manufacture engineless airplanes for pilot-training and sport. This will be the first concern now existing outside of Germany where gliding has been greatly encouraged during the past ten years. The new company is capitalized at $37,500 and is headed by W. J. Scripps. Among its directors are: A. V. Verville, E. V. Rickenbacker and Edward Stinson, all prominent in Detroit aircraft circles.

$109,000 Voted for Mecosta Roads

W. A. Stillwell, chairman of the Mecosta county road commission in a forecast for the coming year says the 1929 road budget comes to $109,000 and 44 miles of highway will be improved in the next 12 months. The board of supervisors has granted the budget asked.

It is planned to build 20 miles of new gravel road throughout the county, to resurface 24 miles and to complete eight miles now under construction. In the way of maintenance 85 miles of state trunk line are to be cared for by the county, which includes work on US-131, M-66 and M-20. Besides state roads, the county has to maintain 260 miles of gravel highway.

Highway officials are getting the snow machines in shape for the winter campaign.

Start Lopping Three Hills Near Freesoil

Work of cutting down three hills, averaging 75 feet high on the county road running from Freesoil west to Pelton's corners on US31 has been started.

The Darr hill, said to be the highest point in Mason county, will be graded and the road widened. A cut in the Bennett hill just at the edge of the village will divert traffic from the old road going around the hill, and the swamp road connecting the Bennett and Hukil hills will be widened. These improvements will make the road eligible for a trunk line.

Battle Creek Plant to Have $500,000 Addition

Expansion plans calling for the immediate construction of a new assembly plant for combine harvesters, at a cost of approximately $500,000, are announced by the Nichols & Shepard Company, of Battle Creek.

The construction, to be under way shortly, will be the first unit in a general remodeling and enlargement of the Nichols & Shepard factories, made necessary by the quadrupling of its business from 1924 to 1928, and the splendid outlook for the future. The rest of the work will be over a period of about 10 years, it was indicated.

The new assembly plant, built on the north side of and in conjunction with the old one, will be 100 feet wide and 500 feet long, though being nearly twice as long as the present assembly quarters. Two straight assembly lines thus provided for will tax the capacity of the rest of the plant to supply it with materials. Estimate was made that it would result in a 100 per cent increase, almost upon completion, in the number of combine harvesters turned out by the Nichols & Shepard Company.

One of the prospects which induces Nichols & Shepard Company to take immediate steps for present and future expansion is the foreign trade situation. During the last month harvesters were shipped to Mexico, Argentina, Uruguay, New Zealand, South Africa and British Burma. Juan Homs, export manager, who joined the company about a year or so ago, left three weeks ago for the Argentine, where the machines are now entering their second year. The first Argentine drive of the company, conducted a year ago, resulted in many machines being placed, with decidedly satisfactory results. Roy Funk, of the experimental department, is also in the Argentine.

Oil Company to Start Fifteen Wells in Mason County

Tremendous development of Mason county is seen by the leasing of 13,500 acres, announced recently by Warren A. Cartier, Ludington, to Pure Oil company, Chicago. Drilling of 15 oil wells before the expiration of a year is promised.

Terms of the contract call for the driving of a well on each lease before Aug. 8, 1929. Wells will be sunk in Freesoil, Meade, Hamlin, Sheridan and Sherman townships in Mason county, and Elk in Lake county, where 80 acres are leased. In Freesoil there are three leases; Meade, three; Sherman, three; Sheridan, three; Hamlin, two; and Elk, one.

Mr. Cartier owns 8,000 acres of the 13,500 leased; he holds coal, oil and mineral rights to the remainder.

Pure Oil company is said to be a subsidiary of Standard Oil company. Charles G. Dawes, vice president, is said to be a heavy stockholder in the company.

Nuts and Fruit Along Highway Are Private Property

Nuts and fruit along state, county and township highways are private property, the attorney general ruled recently.

The annual autumn sport of collecting nuts which have fallen over the fence onto the highway right-of-way or even from trees actually growing on the right-of-way amount to nothing less than theft, he held. The state acquires, in most cases, only a right-of-way release. The crop and pasturage rights remain with the owner. On county and township section line roads the adjacent section holds title to the middle of the road.

Refrigerator Plant Wins Damage Suit

The Michigan Refrigeration corporation, after a week's trial of its $1,500 damage suit against Walter C. Wachs of Chicago, was awarded a verdict of $1 by a district court jury. The corporation sued to recover money said to have been paid Wachs for rights to a refrigeration unit which it was claimed did not produce the results represented.

FLYING SMOKERS MAKE FIRE HAZARDS

The fire hazard from smokers continues even though they are winging their way high in the air. Figures compiled by the National Board of Fire Underwriters indicate that careless smokers cause an annual fire loss of many million dollars, but one would expect that they would exercise a little more care when riding in an airplane. Apparently this is not the case, according to Pacific coast reports.

In the regular passenger airplane service operating between Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, there is grave possibility of serious fires developing in the wheat fields and stubble, as well as in the timberlands, caused by lighted cigars and cigarettes dropped from planes enroute.

It is apparent to passengers in the planes that fires have been numerous in the dry grass and grain along the route. Although there are "no smoking" signs in the planes and the pilots endeavor to prohibit smoking by passengers, they cannot control the situation from their positions ahead of the passenger compartments.

A very real fire menace may develop from this situation in the future when airplanes have multiplied (a future that isn't very far distant) unless something is done to curb offenders. The National Board is making an effort to have the Department of Commerce issue regulations that will definitely bring the hazard to the attention of passengers using planes over the route when the danger has arisen.

CONSTANT EXPANSION

—to serve Chevrolet owners better consecutive year, the world's largest builder of automobiles!

This outstanding achievement has been attained not only because of the quality and value of Chevrolet cars—but also because there has been a constant expansion of Chevrolet service facilities.

In order to bring these mammoth facilities of the Chevrolet factories to Chevrolet dealers and owners everywhere, there have been erected 26 huge parts warehouses in the principal centers of distribution. This expansion program is continually going on—for four great additional warehouses will be in operation by January first and seven more by the summer of 1929.

Into the service departments of all Chevrolet dealers, Chevrolet has brought special tools and shop equipment—designed under the supervision of Chevrolet engineers. This equipment definitely assures maximum speed and precision and the lowest possible cost in the performance of every Chevrolet service and repair operation—which are charged for on a flat rate basis.

Furthermore, all of these tremendous facilities have been made available to 15,000 authorized service stations manned by skilled mechanics, over 25,000 of whom have been factory trained to efficiently handle every repair operation on a Chevrolet car. In addition, there are over 4,000 other points where genuine Chevrolet parts may be obtained.

Uniformly efficient, uniformly reliable and within easy reach of everybody everywhere—this great service organization is maintaining at peak efficiency the fine performance for which Chevrolet cars have always been renowned.

We cordially invite you to come in and see how our service facilities reflect the influence of this great national service program.

Fakir's Filthy Robes

Sought for Shrouds

A little farther along, in the street, where shrouds are sold (in Damascus), a devil-like figure, but pale and emaciated, with his head drooping like a flower under his tall yellow bonnet, measures off cloth with his arms, in a pose that suggests a crucifixion.

"All the merchants here are on the verge of bankruptcy," Ali Bey says to me. "In the old times they were very rich."

"Don't people die in Damascus any more?"

"Shrouds are not bought for dead men; they are worn almost entirely by pilgrims to Mecca; and since no one now goes to Mecca . . ."

"Oh, that explains, then, the mystical expression of distress on that dancer-undertaker's face."

"Moreover," continues Ali Bey as we cross the street of the water pipe makers, where most of the work seems to be done with feet, "the fashionable shroud for rich people is a poor man's tunic."

"A poor man's tunic?"

"Yes; I mean a fakir's robe. Especially if it is ragged and filthy. All the sultans of Damascus are interred in these—Nureddin, Saladin and Bibars. In a fakir's garb, you know, one is sure to get a drink at the celestial springs."—Myriam Harry in Le Temps, Paris (Living Age).

No Possibility That

Home Will Disappear

A certain professor in Great Britain prophesies that fifty years from now there will be no more homes, but everyone will live in hotels and eat in restaurants. The professor makes no allowance for human nature, a writer in the Montreal Family Herald comments. It is love that requires a home and makes it. Love is enduring, and so homes are enduring. There were homes in the old savage days when a hundred or more lived in a long wigwam or in a series of cliff dwellings not unlike our modern hotels. There will be homes even if the changes of custom send us back to cliff dwellings—with modern improvements. Where mother and father and sisters and brothers are, there is home, whatever its shifting style. In appreciating our homes and enriching them, we are devoting ourselves to one of the most permanent of earthly institutions.

MICH. TECH PROFESSOR'S INVENTION

The Michigan College of Mining and Technology at Houghton continues to justify the faith and backing of a great state by its practical aids to mining and metallurgy.

Its researches during 1928 in milling methods are resulting in the recovery of several additional pounds of metal from every ton of copper ore and tailings treated. The big copper mining companies are adopting the processes worked out at the college, and the eventual result will be worth millions to America and the world, far exceeding, in this particular alone, the state's total investment in the institution.

Particulars have just been made public of a recent invention by Roland D. Parks, assistant professor of mining at the college, consisting of a yieldable metal support for use in counteracting the ground subsidence pressures in all mines where the workings are extensive.

Great quantities of timber have been used for the purpose, but timber is becoming very expensive, and it is a material which loses its strength with the years. Structural steel and reinforced concrete have been used with partial success, but it has remained for Professor Parks to devise a sliding metal contrivance which works efficiently and indefinitely when subjected to heavy pressure. The principle involves two pieces of metal sliding one within the other, the degree of action being controlled by a third piece of metal which retards the sliding process.

Engineers who have examined the invention agree that it will do the work and thus solve what has been a perplexing and costly problem in the deep mining of ores.

Wedding Breakfast Of Venison Expensive

Harvey Parker's dream of venison for his wedding feast was dispelled rudely by game wardens and instead of wedded bliss he was faced with a 60-day jail sentence. The clemency of the law, however, partially solved the difficulty. In order that he might be married as he planned, Judge John A. Colwell suspended sentence.

The venison was confiscated. Parker and McPherson, both of Sault Ste. Marie, killed a deer out of season. McPherson paid $50 fine.

Game wardens recently arrested five persons, placed two in jail, confiscated 50 traps and a rifle and collected $190 in fines. Among their victims was Sam VanGilder, deputy sheriff of Strong's, who was found carrying a rifle in a deer area.

Albion Freshmen Lose In Annual Tug-O-War

Albion college freshmen swam the icy waters of the Kalamazoo river when the second year class won the traditional tug o' war which opened the official program of the sixth annual homecoming celebration.

The ancient rope, which has seared hundreds of hands during its annual pilgrimage across the river, was taut about three minutes before the feet of the 15 yearlings began to slip toward the water, amid the cheers of several thousands of spectators.

Co-ed Routers' Band At Western College

Western State Teachers' College is to have a co-ed routers' club, according to action taken by the Women's League council of the college. They are to appear en masse at the games, have their own yells, and make themselves distinctly heard. Miss Jeanette Veatch of Grand Rapids, a physical education sophomore, is yell leader. The student council has made an appropriation for a suitable uniform for her.

Poems That Live

A PHILOSOPHER

To take things as they be—
That's my philosophy.
No use to holler, mope, or cuss—
If they was changed they might be wuss.

If rain is pourin' down,
An' lightnin' buzzin' roun',
I ain't a-fearin' we'll be hit,
But grin that I ain't out in it.

If I got deep in debt—
It hasn't happened yet—
And owed a man two dollars, Gee!
Why, I'd be glad it wasn't three!

If some one come along,
And tried to do me wrong,
Why I should sort of take a whim
To thank the Lord I wasn't him.

I never seen a night
So dark there wasn't light
Somewhere about if I took care
To strike a match and find out where.
—John K. Bangs (1862-1922)

Co-ed Works at Forge and Lathe

Donning a blacksmith's apron, Miss Katherine Meyer, daughter of a professor of psychology and a co-ed at the University of Missouri, attends the forging class as an engineering student. At left Miss Meyer is shown at work, and at right, on her way to classes.

Statistics On Deaths In State Are Compiled

Nearly one-third of the deaths in the state of Michigan last year were caused from wearing out of human organs, a report issued by M. J. V. Deason, M. D., director of the bureau of records and statistics of the Michigan department of health, revealed.

Organic heart trouble, cerebral hemorrhage or apoplexy, chronic nephritis and diseases of the arteries—called degenerative diseases—caused 30.7 of the 50,000 deaths.

Of the 10 principal causes of death, the report shows that cancer now occupies second place; that tuberculosis, which for years was in second place, has dropped to fourth; that lobar pneumonia, regarded as an infectious disease, and broncho pneumonia, which is a secondary infection, are in sixth and eighth places; that premature birth is in seventh and that automobile accidents, which a few years ago were unknown as a principal cause of death, are in ninth place.

The ten principal causes of death are:

	No. Deaths	Pct.
Organic heart disease	7,450	14.7
Cancer	4,156	8.2
Cerebral hemorrhage	4,092	8.1
Tuberculosis	2,952	5.8
Chronic nephritis	2,893	5.7
Lobar pneumonia	2,069	4.1
Premature birth	1,909	3.8
Broncho pneumonia	1,475	2.9
Auto accidents	1,237	2.4
Diseases of arteries	1,091	2.2

Influence of sex on the death rate is recognized, the report said. In 1927, 55 per cent of Michigan deaths were males and 45 per cent females.

Males show the same ten principal causes as is shown on the combined table, but with a few transpositions: Cancer drops to third place instead of second. Automobile accidents as death causes are charged with broncho pneumonia in the male group.

In the female list, it is seen that two of the diseases which appear in preceding lists have been dropped and are replaced by diabetes and puerperal causes (childbirth). Organic heart disease still occupies first place among the ten principal causes of death, but the number of deaths it causes is less than in the general table. Cancer is in second place and premature birth as a cause of death is in sixth instead of seventh place.

Automobiles and diseases of the arteries, which appear in the male and general lists, drop from the female list as one of the ten principal causes of death.

Yes, Mackinac Has Hospital

"It is not generally known," says Superintendent Frank Kenyon of the Mackinac Island state park, "that the park commission and wealthy residents of island summer homes maintain in the fort grounds on the island a small but well equipped hospital, open to all island hotel guests, visitors and cottagers in case of emergencies.

"The hospital has been in existence for the past five years and has amply justified its establishment. It was sponsored by Drs. McArthur and McKenna of Chicago, yearly summer sojourners at Mackinac, and cottagers, hotel owners and the park commission alike have shown a constant interest in its maintenance."

Miss A. Dunbar, graduate nurse, is in constant attendance. The operating room is kept abreast of the times and all other equipment is adequate and up-to-date. Several of the island hotels have a house physician. Dr. Mooney maintains residence on the island and the year around, and visiting physicians are always available during the summer season.

State to Build New Ypsilanti Library Soon

Bids for the construction of a library building at the Michigan State Normal college campus at Ypsilanti will be asked for soon, according to a statement this week by Governor Fred W. Green. The appropriation of $250,000 was provided by the last legislature and released by the administrative board on May 1, 1926.

It will be the same architecture as the administrative building and will be located just west of the old main building, facing east, and opposite Pease auditorium. The extreme end of the old main building will be torn down to make room for the new building.

The new library will make room for 150,000 volumes with a filing and cataloguing system similar to the University of Michigan.

Only One in Ten in And Near Boyne City Visit Church Pastor Says

Within a radius of 25 miles of Boyne City in Charlevoix county only one person in ten attends church, Rev. William Helrigel, Boyne City, told the Grand Traverse district conference of the Methodist church at Kalkaska.

The figure was established, Rev. Helrigel said, in a thorough survey made by himself and an assistant. An address by Dr. Hugh Kennedy, Detroit, secretary of the Michigan Methodist organization, closed the conference. About 150 delegates, representing all northwestern Michigan counties, attended.

Plane Brings Stray Gowns for Bridesmaids

The Spirit of St. Louis that made the first flight across the Atlantic is nothing to the airplane that played fairy godmother to a Grand Rapids bride and saved the dignity and decorum of the wedding day for her.

As everyone with a lick of sense knows, a church wedding without proper bridesmaids' gowns just can't happen. But this one nearly did.

After weeks of planning the bridesmaid's gown for this particular wedding were selected. Then a local firm sent the order to New York, but when the wedding day arrived and advanced to high noon and the bridesmaids' gowns hadn't arrived the bride began to worry, even though the wedding was not to take place until 8 o'clock.

The local firm wired to New York. The gowns had been shipped. Come 5 o'clock and still no gowns.

Substitute gowns were sent and the bridesmaids were having a hectic time trying to match colors with complexions and sizes with figures and still maintain harmony.

Telegrams were bombarding the New York gownmakers' establishment where frantic efforts were being made to locate the missing gowns.

It seems in New York one Grand Rapids is just as good as another and the shipping department had selected Grand Rapids, Neb., as the destination for the gowns.

It was early in the afternoon that this mistake was discovered. An airplane promptly was requisitioned and a trustworthy pilot flew from Grand Rapids, Neb., to Grand Rapids, Mich. And the day was saved.

Frosh to Lead Central State Teachers' Band

E. S. Knirk, freshman, has been elected drum major of the band at Central State Teachers' college at Mt. Pleasant. The band plans to play at all home football games.

To insure a larger personnel in both the band and orchestra this year rehearsals are being given as regular classes under the tutelage of a new director, Clarence Kelley. Kelley holds a degree from Iowa State college and for two years was flute player in the Chicago Civic orchestra. He taught flute, clarinet and other band instruments in the Cragun School of Music, Chicago.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT

Cream of Celery Soup
Roast Beef
Sweet Potato Finger Puffs
Apple Sauce Lettuce Salad
Prune Whip Coffee

Do you get in the habit of serving Irish potatoes every day, and boiling, baking or otherwise cooking them in ordinary ways? I find I get into such a habit. So I am giving two recipes for sweet potatoes to vary the Irish and two different ways of cooking them.

Today's Recipes

Sweet Potato Finger Puff—Four large sweet potatoes, pared and boiled until soft; mash with a little milk and butter, and put aside to cool. Add one egg and beat for five minutes with a silver fork. With floured hand, mold into finger puffs, and fry to a light brown in beef drippings. Serve in hot side dishes.

Uses of Bran

If washed in bran water colored goods will not fade.

Bran water is made by covering a small bag of bran in a bowl with boiling water.

Bran will clean painted and varnished woodwork.

Bran will whiten and soften the hands when used in place of soap.

If used as a shampoo, bran will impart gloss to the hair.

Dry bran rubbed on a spotted wallpaper will absorb a great deal of the grease and dirt.

French Omelet, Onion Sauce

Two onions (chopped), three slices bacon (diced), two tablespoons flour, one cup milk, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Brown the bacon slightly, add the onions and cook slowly ten minutes. Now add the flour and seasonings; when blended, pour in the milk and cook until it thickens, stirring constantly. Place the folded omelet on a hot platter and garnish with the onion sauce.

Cheese-Stuffed Fruit

One-half cup of cottage cheese, two tablespoons of cream or milk, eight figs, prunes or dates, and one-fourth teaspoon of salt are needed. Steam the figs for about twelve minutes, cook the prunes ten minutes in lemon juice or water, or seed the dates. Soften the cheese with cream or milk and add salt. Stuff the centers of fruit with the cheese. Chopped peanuts can be mixed with the cheese if desired. The stuffed fruit may be served with mayonnaise dressing on lettuce leaves.

Oatmeal Cookies

Cream together two cupfuls sugar and one cupful of butter. Add two beaten eggs, one-third cupful sweet milk, one and one-half cupfuls oatmeal, one cupful chopped raisins, enough flour to make soft dough sifted with two teaspoonfuls baking powder.

The World and All

SPEAKING OF VANITY

A girl came into my workshop this morning with skirts of the customary shortness—you wouldn't exactly call it length, would you? Anyway, they were just a tiny trifle above the knees. Above the entire knees, I mean. And the stockings weren't nearly as thick as consomme.

Both knees were artistically and modernistically decorated with intriguing splashes of that bright red substitute for iodine that has come into general use for wounds and scratches.

The way that red splash talked was, I admit, disconcerting. The young woman was trying to tell me about a Turkish lady who lectures about several interesting things, but I could hardly hear her.

At length I made bold to ask her whether my caller had been in a very bad accident, and how many were killed. She probably felt sorry for my ignorance, so she told me she had been struck by a bicycle while crossing Broadway.

But I am wondering whether we are in for a season of mercuriochromed knees to add to the colorful aspect of our streets and subways this winter.

In a Fifth avenue department store I served a half hour among those disconsolate men who wait near the front doors, each one so apologetic in appearance. Which reminds me that department stores should devise some way to amuse the men near the doors while the women do their own shopping. Post the scores of the games, the race results, or the stock quotations, or get them to examining neckties. A little lecture on shaving and the relative merits of various razors would take the embarrassment away.

I saw in a showcase some smokers' supplies, and thought here might be some finds for Christmas. I asked to see a little rose-quartz figure of an elephant. The elephant seemed to be sitting up and holding a shallow container for your ashes. The whole figure was not more than six or eight inches high, and was all in one piece. The price quoted me was $295. Two hundred and ninety-five dollars, in case you don't get it from the figures the first time.

Looking about, I found a hundred or more of these rose-quartz ash receivers, in various forms. A very small one with a dragon figure was fifty dollars, and the simplest little saucer, no bigger than an individual butter dish, was ten dollars.

How to Achieve Beauty

Early Fall Care of the Hair

Your hair is probably the one thing that has not profited by a summer vacation. As a matter of fact, although vacation days are over, unless you are unusually fortunate, your hair requires special attention. The sun and neglect which usually accompany a summer vacation, is likely to have taken much of the luster from your hair.

To restore beauty, let us begin at the beginning. In the first place, the prime essential for a healthy scalp is good circulation. This means, to be sure, an active circulation of good blood throughout the body, and exercise and diet may thus be said to be vitally related to hair health. Health and growth of the hair depends upon the blood supply of the scalp as well as your general condition. Consequently, the value of hair tonics lies in two things. First, the stimulating properties of their ingredients, and secondly, when prescribed for dry hair, the special qualifications which impart a natural oiliness, or, if prepared for excessively oily hair, their drying qualities.

Brush orris root thoroughly out of hair after dry shampoo. Cover brush with cheesecloth, changing cloth until it comes out perfectly clean.

Simple massage, when used in company with an efficient hair tonic, will quite frequently correct the common scalp troubles of dandruff and falling hair. Massage brings the blood to the scalp, tones up the tiny muscles that are attached to each hair, thus permitting nutrition and general good health of the scalp.

Regular brushing is another important aid in developing beautiful, abundant hair. It is an excellent thing for you to remember, at this season of the year, that if you massage your scalp as thoroughly and regularly as you eat your meals or clean your teeth, you will not have to spend time and money later on curing scalp conditions that are unhealthy.

Shampoos are important, too, in the care of the hair, but as I have gone so thoroughly and completely into this matter just a little while previous, I am not going to repeat by caution, however, that if you are using hard water, you must use a little borax or lemon juice to neutralize the sticky soap curd that results from the combination of soap and lime in the water. One tablespoonful of lemon juice added to the last rinsing water will do very nicely for this.

When it is possible, avoid the drying machine for your hair. After it has received its final rinsing, wring it out thoroughly and wrap a warm towel around the hair, rubbing well until most of the moisture is absorbed. Then divide the hair into sections, rub each section with a second warm towel. This is an excellent time for you to use your hair tonic, massaging it well into the sections of the scalp. Shake your hair well, let it hang loosely over your face while you shake it, then, while it is still slightly damp, brush and, if possible, finish your drying operation with a sun bath.

For a dry shampoo, and this is a good thing to know, for this is the season for head colds, the following will be quite effective: First, brush out the hair thoroughly, divide it into sections, part in the center and then subdivide each side. Mix together one ounce of powdered orris root, one ounce of cornmeal, and if your hair is excessively oily, add a little camphor. Put the mixture into a powder box, shake a little along the partings, and then rub well into the hair.

LIVING AND LOVING

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

If all the world and its wife would only play fair, there would be no need of heaven. Don't most human differences arise because someone is trying to "put something over" on someone else? The husband who plays fair with his wife and children and doesn't think the home should be solely for his majesty's benefit. The wife who tries to carry her fair share of the burdens and be a real pal, instead of a parasite. Such people would not only do much to alleviate the divorce evil, but would set standards for their children which would make the next generation much finer and better.

A wife writes me that her husband is a good man and they love one another, but, while he takes two or more nights a week to have what he considers a good time, he never thinks she should go out at all. All she sees is the four walls of her home. What can be done to show such a man how unfair he is? A man who wants to do the fair and square thing, even if it means sacrifice, writes me:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a man 25 years of age and am very much in love with a girl 15. This girl also seems to care for me. But some tell me that I should get a girl nearer my own age. My work would be promoted by marriage, but I do not wish to destroy the girl's happiness. What shall I do? Wondering."

It is unthinkable to me that a girl of 15 should be married. She is not even grown up physically, and is certainly immature in her way of thinking. I don't see how such a child could be of much help in your business career. It does seem to me, Wondering, that the girl should not be cheated out of her girlhood by marrying so young, and that it would mean ultimately more happiness for both of you if you could wait two or three years, or care for a girl nearer your own age. * * *

Toots: As you treated the young man indifferently, and refused his escort home, he naturally thought you didn't care for him and probably grew tired of being snubbed. Don't send him a graduation gift unless he sends you an announcement. * * *

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 15, have one brother and a married sister, who stays with us. None of them care for me. I'm out of school and work all day, besides taking care of the children when evening comes. They hustle me around. Even my father complains that I don't do anything throughout the day but rest. Now, Mrs. Lee, do you think they treat me right? I sit at home nearly every day. When I do go out I have to go before dark. I work and work, but get no kindness from anyone. "Fifteen."

Are you sure you have not exaggerated the state of things, dear? I know when I was your age I thought I was doing a lot of work, but really, now as I look back, I can see how much more helpful I might have been. If you really are overworked, you can appeal to the social agencies of your city for protection. Think things over very carefully and, if you decide you really are not being treated right, do the best you can until you are old enough to leave home.

In the meantime, try to be as sweet tempered as you can, and see if there are not many things left you to make you happier. Things are never so bad but that they might be worse, and if you make it a rule now, not to cry and whine at life's unpleasantnesses, but to try to find a way out, it will be the greatest help to you all through life.

WEEK OF NOVEMBER 11

Counter action in air currents at the beginning of the week of Nov. 11 in Michigan makes it uncertain whether storms will be in full action on Armistice Day or whether they will not appear until a day later.

The characteristics of the storms at this time will show out in heavy rain or snow storms, mostly accompanied with high winds. Temperatures during the early part of the week under the influence of this storm period will fluctuate considerably, being quite warm for the season during Sunday and Monday and turning much colder during Tuesday and Wednesday.

During the middle days of this week we are expecting the weather to be mostly fair with the temperatures ranging below the seasonal normal. It is quite likely they will remain so during the remainder of the week, although they will modify somewhat about Friday.

The closing days of this week in Michigan will again be stormy. The storm will be of a general nature and will carry considerable precipitation. The wind forces will not be as strong during this storm period as they are expected to be in the storm center covering the early days of the week.

Gaudy Truck to Advertise Traverse

Guy H. Lloyd of Grand Rapids, a sign painter who expects to make his home in Traverse City beginning next spring, will drive to Texas this winter with his big house truck painted from radiator to stern to advertise "Traverse City, the Heart of Nature's Playground."

He parked the truck, already painted and ready to put out, in front of the Chamber of Commerce recently. The advertising mission is to cost Traverse City but $250 for the entire winter. The truck not only will carry its gaudy message but Lloyd, who has become a great devotee of the region in the few weeks he has been there, will pass out Traverse City literature. Modestly placed on the right side of the truck are several remarkable scenic views of the region.

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night you may find your very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless that may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless, Castoria is never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

RESTLESS LOVE

By Samuel Merwin 1928 RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Ackland, little old town in New England, is proud of its beauty and traditions. But the modern world crowds in on its peace and quiet. Finally a notorious roadhouse, Jazzland, is opened by a gang of bootleggers. Liquor flows. Gals of the town are lured there. The editor of the "Weekly Age" is murdered for his editorial attacks. His brother, Homer Pew, takes up the fight. Homer is joined by Stella Bagot, one of the home-town girls, who has made good as a writer in New York. Stella comes to write a story, and remains to fight Jazzland. Homer is beaten up in a mysterious midnight attack. Stella takes charge of the paper and writes sizzling editorials. She also tries to trace a telephone call, believing it to come from the murderers. Stella finds her little sister, Martha, who has run out on a lark to Jazzland, and has been drinking. She gives her a lecture and Martha complains that she is kept at home while Stella has been allowed to go to college and later take up her own life in New York. Stella persuades Homer to keep quiet about Joe Harmer until they can get more evidence.

Stella tells Homer about her sister Martha's escapades. Stella is beginning to fall in love with Homer, the fighting young editor. Homer is notified that the bank, of which Joe Harmer is the head, has called his loans. Stella and Homer visit Jazzland, and to get evidence Stella persuades Homer to buy a bottle of liquor. Ernie complains that Stella is not seeing him much since she has returned to Ackland. They leave Jazzland for a drive in Ernie's car.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"It's pretty difficult, Ernie. . . what I've been going through. I. . . I'm carry quite a burden." This didn't interest him. "I'm afraid I'm pretty tired." Nor this. "I tell you, I must get home."

"Why?" She had no ready answer for that. The car sped on and on. They were half way to Worcester when he spoke again. "You're not going home tonight, Stella."

She caught her breath. The easiest course, in her bewilderment, would have been to break down and cry; but she wouldn't do that. She didn't know how to meet the strength of the man. But something she must do. Being a woman, she fell back again on evasion.

"But, Ernie, you're. . . you're unreasonable. I can't just dash off like this. I haven't so much as a handbag."

"What on earth has that got to do with it! Neither have I."

Worcester lay far behind. The state road wound over and through the hills toward Springfield. Shadowy villages flashed by in blurred succession. She clung to the side of the car. He was driving pretty fast; fifty and sixty miles an hour.

"Ernie, you're putting me into a situation that's going to be pretty hard to explain."

He didn't reply. "Won't you tell me what you're planning. After all. . ."

"Not here," said he. "I don't propose to tell you anything here."

"You're taking a good deal for granted."

"Possibly. But I have no choice."

"No choice?"

"It's a showdown, Stella." The man was more than strong, he was bitter. "We're going to talk it out. But not up here."

"You won't tell me where we're going?"

"Certainly. To New York. We'll be there before morning. You can get some sleep. Then we'll talk. Settle it."

"But I can't go to New York."

"Yes you can! Oh, I'm going to treat you well enough, Stella. Better than you deserve. But first I'm going to get you out of that damned Victorian atmosphere. See if I can bring you to your senses. If I can't, all right. We'll just break. But I'm going to find out, once and for all. We'll do our talking in New York, where there's free air to breathe."

An all-night lunch wagon stood by the road in a Connecticut city. She didn't know what city. She asked, listlessly, if she might have some coffee. They hadn't spoken for an hour or more.

They sat on stools at one end of a long counter. Stella couldn't eat, but sipped her coffee from a thick cup. Her eyes were weighing her again. He seemed a stranger.

Her thoughts were becoming more coherent. If the time had arrived for decisive action, she reflected gloomily, she should be equal to it. She must be. There were lives at stake. Her own, anyway. She had been decisive enough at times; when she broke the home ties to go to college, and when she took the plunge into New York. Since then she had permitted her life to be caught in drifts. First in the New York sort of thing. The big, careless city had stirred and possessed her. No doubt about that. Her standards had gradually shifted. She hadn't had much to show in the way of a personal sense of direction. She'd been just one of those little strutting egos. Homer was right. Her eyes filled.

He asked: "Are you beginning to understand, Stella?"

She didn't reply. "I mean, why I've done this—"

She lowered her eyes. "Have you nothing to say?"

"No." She saw the man in the white apron looking at them as he moved about behind the counter, but didn't care whether he heard or not.

"You'll remember that we had something of an understanding, Stella."

She inclined her head. "Yet you were willing to leave me cooling my heels in Boston. Indefinitely."

CHAPTER XXVII She lifted her head and looked at him. It was interesting to find that she could. "I'm sorry about that. But you were pressing me pretty hard, and I was confused. I see that now."

"No. My place right now is in Ackland. I'm needed there. You had no right to take me away."

"I did that with my eyes open. If you were really the kind that couldn't cut yourself clear of that conventional little village, the sooner I found you out the better."

"Well, you've found me out."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Do you know where we are now?"

"Where we are? . . . Oh, New Haven."

"Then there will be early trains to Boston. I'm going to ask you to leave me at the station."

"You propose to break like that?"

"Yes. Break."

"Yes. I know. I was out with a man, Martha."

His watching eyes flashed angrily, but she could face them. "Look here, Stella," he added, abruptly, "have you been falling in love with that boy?"

The question struck home. She couldn't control the color that rushed up into her face, and she could no longer look at him. Her temples were pounding again. He had found her out, indeed. He had dragged their oddly impersonal conversation from the plane of reason and plunged it into the narrowly personal. If only her heart wouldn't beat so fast! What would Homer think of her if she confessed? He needn't know, of course. Ernest wouldn't talk. He wasn't cheap.

The instinct of truth was strong in her. She sipped at the cooling coffee; then lifted her eyes. "Yes," she said. "I am."

"Mm! I see. Just a washout, isn't it." This wasn't a question. "Well, what do you want to do?"

"I'm going straight back there."

"Very well. I'll drive you."

"I can take a train."

"I'll drive you."

It was a little after ten in Ackland. Church bells were ringing. The folks of the Center, dressed more sprucely than on week days, were moving sedately through the quiet streets, under the arching elms.

The roadster pulled up by the drug store. Stella said: "I'll get out here."

She gave him her hand. Without further words, he drove off. She watched the car swing round the corner from the Green into the Boston road. She felt bedraggled, spent. She had the pint bottle of Scotch in her hand, still, wrapped in its bit of newspaper.

Slowly her eyes became aware of another roadster, standing at the curb before the Age office. A familiar car. Homer's. He was sitting in it, looking at her, a startled expression on his face. He was hatless, as usual. And the strips of plaster were still on his forehead. All that seemed queerly remote; a long time back. Wanly she smiled at him, but he gave only a nervous nod and bent over to shut off his ignition. He'd seen Ernest, of course. Did he suspect that she'd been gone all night? He was acting queerly. A sudden recollection came of her talk with Miss Curry. In the evening. That seemed long ago, too. The bank had called his loans. Perhaps he didn't yet know. She could hardly speak of it. But her heart warmed toward him. He was in trouble; desperate trouble, likely enough. A surging impulse rose to explain about Ernest. But how could she? What was there to say? Certainly he wouldn't ask.

Confused, she moved toward the car. He got out, and nodded again. Now she saw that he was embarrassed. He said: "I tried to get in touch with you last night. Wilbraham arrested a man, and wanted you to hear his voice. But it proved a false scent. He turned him loose this morning."

Her color was up. She couldn't think of anything to say.

"You'll excuse me," he remarked, in that embarrassed manner, and turned to unlock the office.

It was a dismissal. She moved back to the corner. He disappeared, and she heard the screen door slam. Soon the bus came along. Numbly she mounted it and found a seat.

"I've lost them both," she thought. The clumsy vehicle rumbled away from the Green. Very soon she would be home. It meant one more lie. The last one. She compressed her lips on that.

The barn door was open and the Ford gone. Of course! Her mother and father would be off at Sunday school and church. She'd forgotten about that. About the sort of thing. Thankful for the respite, she entered the house, thinking of sleep. A few hours, anyway.

She had dropped her hat and coat

"It looks like the end of something," she thought. "The end of just about everything I've supposed was life." She fell asleep.

The parents were too weary to think of dinner. Mr. Bagot dropped asleep on the sofa in the living room with his handkerchief over his face. His wife, constrained, nervous, finally went upstairs and lay down. Martha, when she awakened, picked up a cold meal in the pantry. Martha could always eat. Prompted then by a grudging sense of duty, she went out to tend the stand, Sunday was the big day by the roadside. That the folks should have let it go was something of a commentary on their upset state of mind.

Along toward mid-afternoon strange sounds came from the house. Sobbing and laughing. Queer. At the moment Martha was selling raspberries to a tourist family from Ohio. They had a German shepherd dog that rode on the running board without so much as a strap to hold him there. Martha wished the family would get another dog. The last one they'd had, an Airedale, had been killed by an automobile. Her father had been pretty cut up about that. He'd taken the position since then that with the traffic growing worse every day, you simply couldn't protect a dog. The house was too close to the road. But some of the small varieties could be trained to stay in. Kitty Pew had a toy wire-hair, a French dog, that never went out of the yard. And he could do tricks.

That queer noise was going on, in the house. Upstairs. Sounded like Stella. What could be the matter with her, carrying on like that? Had she gone off her head? It was enough to give you the creeps. A limousine stopped, and a kindly old lady stepped down to buy a jar of honey. The car was a beauty. Martha's shrewdly appraising eyes rated it at eight to ten thousand dollars. She liked the silver lamps and the glimpse of luxury within. A New York license. How she'd love to go to New York!

What had Stella been up to, anyway? She'd certainly made a night of it, that handsome big sister. And she'd had them all by the ears. Too much liquor, probably. Or bad stuff. You simply couldn't hope to know what you were drinking these days. Everybody said that. Martha found the thought disturbing. You could take care of yourself, if you were smart, but you could never be sure of other people; even of a competent-looking big sister. As soon as the limousine had left she stepped into the house to find out what was going on.

Her mother was running down the stairs. At sight of Martha she stopped short and said: "Call up Doctor Billford, Martha. See if he can't come right away."

"What's the matter with Stella?"

"It's just a hysterical attack, I think."

The doctor came, and went. That unpleasant noise had stopped. An hour or so later Mrs. Bagot appeared, saying: "I'll watch the stand now, Martha. You might go up and see if Stella's all right. Just look in. If she's asleep, don't wake her."

Martha turned the knob slowly, softly, and peeped within. The bed was rumpled, but empty. A glass full of a pale liquid stood with a saucer over it on the commode. She opened a little wider. Stella, wearing a pretty Japanese kimono, was sitting in a straight chair by the window, looking out.

"Ahem!" said Martha. Stella turned with a start. She caught the mischievous arching of the girl's eyebrows.

"You made me jump, Martha. What is it?"

"Mother wanted me to see if you were asleep."

"Come on in. I want to talk with you." The girl slipped in and shut the door. "Come over here. . . You think

"I've been out battling all night." "I didn't say a word."

"You looked it." Stella's quick fingers were tapping on the window sill. She was very sober, but tense. "I didn't dream they'd be out hunting me. Never thought of it."

"The folks were wild. They had you murdered."

"Yes. I know. I was out with a man, Martha."

"Well. . ."

"But I had to fight something out. We drove all night. It's settled now. I'm through with him. And there's quite a few other things I'm through with. Homer Pew thinks what you were thinking. I met him downtown this morning. He saw the man driving me in. But I can't help his thinking things. I've had rather. . . well, an awakening, Martha."

The girl waited, demurely. "I've been thinking about you for one thing."

"Me?"

"Yes. You're not getting a square deal. From the folks or me. You're good stuff, Martha. But you've got to have your chance."

"If I could only get to New York. . ."

"Not yet. You don't want to drift in there as one more unequipped girl floating around Greenwich Village. There are thousands of those. Nothing in it."

"Well. . ."

"See here, if I can work it out. . . you know, persuade the folks, bring 'em around, somehow. . . will you consider going to college, as I did?"

"Where's the money?"

"I've saved some. Quite a lot. enough to start you. Oh, we'd get through somehow. I don't mind telling you that I've taken a fresh hold. I'm going to pitch in here. I rather think I'm needed."
