American Camera Arrive From Mexico War Zone

Seventeen thousand, three hundred and eighty-two dollars and thirty-eight cents is the net cost of a flock of sheep that has averaged 216 in number during the past eight years. The flock was inspected by the United States Department of Agriculture Experiment Station at Chalmette, Louisiana, and was certified to be 100% pure and free from disease.

The flock consists of 3,000 ewes, 1,500 lambs, 1,000 ewes with lambs, and 500 rams. The flock was purchased from Mr. J. B. Blevins, a well-known breeder in the area, and was transported by rail to the Chalmette station, where it was inspected and certified.

The flock will be used for breeding purposes and will be sold as soon as the price is right. It is expected that the flock will bring a good price, as the sheep are in excellent condition and have shown excellent performance in previous years.

DISTINGUISHING SEX IN GEESE

Before going any information about sex, it is recommended to observe the bird carefully. The bill of the goose is different in males and females.

The male usually has a longer, more pointed bill, while the female has a shorter, thicker bill. By observing the bill, it is possible to distinguish between the sexes without a mistake.

POTTYL AND EGG SITUATION

C. Petti, a member of the United States Department of Agriculture, has made a study of the egg production and egg lay of the following fowl: The present situation of the egg production is that it is less than the average year ago. The egg production has been lower this year than last year and will probably continue to be lower throughout the year.

Glass Hive Exposed Bees

"Ordinarily what takes place within the hive is a mystery, but with a plate glass hive, nearly every stage in the production of the honey can be seen. This is particularly true in the hive of the Montana Farm Bureau.

The honey is produced by the bees, who convert the nectar they collect into honey and store it in the hive. The bees also produce beeswax, which is used to construct the hive. The hive is a complex structure made of comb chambers, each containing a frame of honey.

GLASS HIVE EXPOSED BEES

The glass hive is exposed to view, allowing one to observe the bees as they work. The bees can be seen going about their duties, such as making honey, protecting the hive, and gathering nectar.

The glass hive is a valuable tool for studying the behavior of bees, as it allows one to observe their activities in detail. It is also useful for educational purposes, as it can be used to teach children about the life of the bee and its importance to the ecosystem.

What Hourly Value May Be Placed Upon Homemaker's Time?

The modern homemaker knows that by her labors she is building up a nest egg of money for the family. All tasks, whether in the home or out in the fields, should be done for the end which we have designated as that of building up a separate resource. When she is doing household work it is because she is obliged to do so. If she is not doing it she would rather be doing something else. That is why she is doing it. If she is doing it, she is doing it for the sake of her family. If she is not doing it, she would prefer to be doing something else. That is why she is not doing it. If she is not doing it, she would rather be doing something else.

The following figures are characteristics of the summer collections of Lillian Talbot, a motion picture star. As a result of her labors, she has been able to build up a nest egg of money for the family. All tasks, whether in the home or out in the fields, should be done for the end which we have designated as that of building up a separate resource. "It was sweet in you, Jill Stuurt," he thought, and that emotion, as she caught at the hand of the man with the black fog, ran absolutely and directly to the source of her pride, and set her face in a calm smile. Her mother had seemed to have experienced all the loneliness in the world, but Jill had done it all. She had done it all herself. She was almost happy.

At the same time that "Jill's bet" had been made, it was a promise, and a magic spell was put upon it. Jill's life was all that was left to her in the world, and she made a promise to do what she could to keep it. Jill had been made, and she must do what she could to keep it.
