Alumni Banquet

The annual banquet of the Goble High School was held at Barber's Bathing Beach last Friday night and drew the best attendance ever and a most enjoyable time is reported with many old timers present.

Following a most excellent banquet with the Sunny Day club as caterers president Mrs. Grace Churchill Thomas, in well chosen words introduced the business session and Harry Bingham was chosen president, Berniece Bush Petty, secretary Pauline Lober Monroe, treasurer, after which the program was turned over to the toastmaster, Prof. Frank DeYoe.

After a series of interesting facts relative to the students, faculty, school board and school affairs of his reign as superintendent, he introduced Adah Lyle Hyames, who welcomed the new addition to the alumni and Max Brown responded. Supt. Stratton was then introduced and made a final appeal for continued interest in our school, that it keep pace with the times and maintain the exceptionally high standards of the past.

Following the program all repaired to the hall where Alah Whelan entertained with songs Her pleasing voice does not pass with the years but continues to give joy to her hearers.

The evening closed with dancing and renewing acquaintances and all were convinced that it was the best reunion yet.

Obituary

Jennie Boyer Munn, wife of Alvin Munn, finished her earthly course June 10, 1929. Had she lived until Nov. 22nd she would have been 65 years old.

She was one of a family of eight children of Israel and Susan Boyer, but one, Alice Spears of Petoskey, Mich. of whom survive her. Her early life was spent near Breedsville where she was born.

She was married shortly after her seventeenth birthday and for nearly forty eight years has been a most devoted companion. Their lives were blessed with three children Celia Herrington, Melissa Goble and Fred who have given her diligent care in her months of ill health preceding her death.

She was of a quiet disposition cheerful and kind to all and deeply loved by those who knew her best.

She was one of the charter members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church of Gobles and has endeavored to live a justifiable life before God and man.

For many years her health has been failing, death coming as a sweet release from physical and mental suffering. May it be said of her as of the apostle Paul "She has fought a good fight, she has kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness."

Loved ones shall miss her but with the hope of a glad reunion when the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible in the morning of the first resurrection.

Services were conducted from the home, Mr. McKenzie, a personal friend of the family, officiating.

Some Showing

Last weeks achievement exhibits by 4-H clubs turn our attention to some of the figures the boys and girls give us as to the national proportions of this young giant. They say:

We have 650,000 members.
We own 175,000 head head of livestock.
Our Bank accounts average $123.00 each
We own 1,000,000 chickens.
We canned 3,000,000 quarts of fruit last year.

Our property is valued at $185.00 each.
The total value of our products is $12,000,000.00.

Eighty per cent of us expect to stay on the farm.

This looks like a pretty good aggregation for the Van Buren County boys and girls to hook up with.

VALUE AMERICAN FARM PRODUCTS AT 17 BILLION

The total value of American farm products, including livestock, for 1928 was $17,391,000,000, an increase of 2.1 per cent over the 1927 total of $17,033,000,000, according to the estimate just completed by the Farm Journal, national agricultural magazine, recently made public.

The magazine's figures, gathered from state agricultural organizations and experiment stations, are generally regarded as authoritative, since they approximate closely the official estimates released annually by the Department of Agriculture in July. The estimate also is the only annual calculation of farm product values by states released from any source.

The total value of crops alone for the year is placed at $10,004,000,000, and of livestock and livestock products at $7,387,000,217,000,000. Texas is second with $1,168,000,000, and Illinois third with $999,000,000. Twenty-eight of the 48 states reported increased values ranging from 1 to 24 per cent, three others produced 100 per cent of their 1927 values, and 17 showed decreased values of from 17 to 1 per cent.

The Farm Journal's total estimates of the 1928 crops and livestock products ranks the 15 leading states as follows:

State	Total Value of Products of 1929	Per cent
Iowa	$1,217,000,000	103
Texas	1,168,000,000	105
Illinois	999,000,000	108
Kansas	791,000,000	102
Missouri	762,000,000	108
Wisconsin	733,000,000	101

Ohio	683,000,000	101

New York	650,000,000	99
Minnesota	628,000,000	101
Indiana	572,000,000	103
Pennsylvania	562,000,000	98
Oklahoma	523,000,000	104
Michigan	495,000,000	102

Maple Sugar and Syrup

The 1929 season for harvesting maple products was unusually short, not only in Michigan but throughout all of the states where maple sugar and syrup are made in commercial quantities. The average date of the end of the season was April 2. The weather was relatively warm during the period with less freezing and thawing than usual. The buds started quickly and brought the season to an early close. The first runs were unusually sweet and made a good quality of syrup, but the later ones were less satisfactory, and the production as a whole had an average quality of 95 per cent of a high medium grade.

The estimated production was 1.52 pounds of sugar per tree as compared with 2.00 pounds last year. Only three per cent of the total production was made into sugar, the other 97 per cent being converted into syrup. As the estimated number of trees tapped was 886,000, the production for the state amounts to 163,000 gallons of syrup and 40,000 pounds of sugar, as compared with 172,000 gallons of syrup and 72,000 pounds of sugar in 1928.

The average price received by Michigan growers was $2.60 per gallon for syrup and 35 cents per pound for sugar. The price for syrup was slightly higher than last year, and prices in other maple states average slightly higher due to the shorter crop.

While the industry has greatly declined in this state, the number of trees now tapped each year is quite stable. Many producers have up-to-date manufacturing equipment and tap about the same number of trees yearly. Farm wood-lots are receiving more care than formerly so that, while some trees are blown down or cut for wood and lumber, each year, the loss is not materially affecting present-day operations. However, in the eastern states, where the business has continued on a much larger scale, the industry shows some falling off.

Healthy Hogs

Too many swine growers immunize their hogs against hog cholera only to raise them under unsanitary conditions. Anti-hog cholera serum and hog-cholera virus can not be expected to save the hogs regardless of their condition when treated, says Dr. U. G. Houck, hog-cholera authority of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The immunization treatment must be given under favorable conditions to be effective. By raising healthy herds, by avoiding ways of spreading the disease, by following the advice of a veterinarian, and by giving special attention to the herd for at least two weeks following immunization, losses from cholera can be reduced. Farmers' Bulletin 834-F, "Hog Cholera," which can be obtained from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, contains further information on this subject.

Lambs for early market should be kept growing from the very beginning, and the best way to accomplish this is by feeding them through a "creep." Provide a rack for hay and a trough for grain, arranged so that the lambs can not get their feet in them. Liberal feeding of lambs dropped before pastures are ready is profitable with average grain prices.

Over-Production Faces Petoskey Cherry Growers

With 57 per cent of the cherry trees in Michigan less than five years old and therefore not bearing, the Wolverine cherry crop will be nearly doubled during the next five years. That situation presents the industry a grave problem of taking steps to care for over-production and possible surpluses, authorities from the government, state college and the industry itself told 300 farmers at an organization rally of the Michigan cherry growers at Traverse City.

Unless the day when the public demands cherry pies comes soon, the industry will face dark days, the speaker agreed.

Harold Titus, author, cherry grower and a director of the new co-operative organization, was toastmaster.

It was the threat of over-production which prompted A. J. Rogers, Beulah, one of the state's leading growers, and a number of others to launch the co-operative organization for purposes of promoting cherry consumption and removing surpluses. Growers representing approximately half of the Michigan crop, pledged their participation.

Significantly, this is not a year that forces the growers to organize in search of better prices. On the contrary, the price is favorable, from 6 to 6½ cents a pound and a good crop is in sight.

No attempt will be made to market the crop co-operatively this year and possibly not in 1930. If the Michigan cherry growers are successful it will be unusual among co-operatives in that it came about through foresight rather than necessity, authorities, including J. A. Rickert, vice president of the Federal Intermediate Credit bank of St. Paul; B. V. Derrick of the U. S. department of agriculture, and H. W. Ullsperger, head of the Door County Fruit Growers' union of Wisconsin, told the assemblage.

Experts Favor Grain for Cows

The use of grain for dairy cows on pasture is advised by members of the dairy department at Michigan State college. The grain should be fed at the rate of one pound of grain mixture for every six to seven pounds of milk. One Michigan farmer whose feed records were checked by a herd improvement association tested increased the production of butterfat in his 10 cow herd by 900 pounds through the use of a grain mixture on pasture. Records were kept on this herd through two successive years.

His cows received a full grain ration on pasture the first year and the grain cost an average of $9 per cow for the three months. The next year the same cows received no grain while on pasture and their production of butterfat was reduced 90 pounds per cow from the previous year's record. In this case, the feeding of $90 worth of grain during the three pasture months made this dairyman a profit of $440.

The grain mixture recommended by the dairy department is made up of equal parts of barley and oats, or corn and oats, and one-half part of linseed oil meal or cottonseed meal.

Feed analysis figures show that sweet clover is the most evenly balanced crop for pasture. Cattle can obtain sufficient protein by eating 100 pounds of this clover and enough total digestible nutrients by consuming 103 pounds. Eighty pounds of alfalfa furnishes the protein needed by a cow but the animal has to eat 160 pounds of the plant to get sufficient total digestible nutrients.

Gardens May Fail From Food Lack

The chief reason for the failure of many city and farm gardens is lack of sufficient plant food in the soil to permit the cropped seed to thrive. Plenty of well rotted barnyard manure covering two or three inches or even more is not too much if it is well worked into the ground. In most cases, some commercial fertilizer should be used, for while barnyard manure is reasonably high in nitrogen and potash, it is lacking in phosphoric acid.

Good results will be obtained from using about 4 pounds of a high grade fertilizer on a plot of 10 feet by 12 feet. Any concentrated fertilizer should not come in direct contact with the seeds or roots of the plant. Local seed and fertilizer dealers can supply high-grade commercial fertilizers.

Every garden should have a compost pile where vines, leaves, straw, grass, sod, and the waste of vegetables and fruits can be piled and allowed to rot for garden fertilizer. The important thing is that the soil in the garden be of a good texture and that it be worked into a fine mulch.

Muskkrat raising has the advantage over the production of most other fur-bearing animals in that muskrats feed and breed when left to themselves, and all the owner of a marshland has to do is to maintain an attitude of "watchful waiting" until the trapping season. Muskrat fur is increasing in popularity, and muskrat raising should receive consideration in any agricultural plan of land utilization, according to the Biological Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Marshes provide the food; the muskrats take care of themselves and, being prolific, will produce enough young for the trapping season.

Poultry

CARE OF GROWING TURKEYS

Turkey management problems are probably as little understood by the average poultryman as are any of the problems connected with any of the domestic fowls. This is especially true from the time the poults are hatched until they reach a marketable age, during which time they must be carried through the summer in a manner that will enable them to reach the market in favorable season.

The first problem is that of brooding the poults. Many investigators have found that turkeys can be raised with greater success in a confinement than on unlimited range, especially where chickens have been raised on the same farm. Chickens are susceptible to the cecum worm, which is host to the blackhead germ, which, in turn, is the greatest single cause of turkey losses. Because of this, good management demands that poults be raised on fresh ground and away from old turkey or chicken yards or runs.

The Nebraska station gives some very valuable pointers on turkey production. Poults will thrive best if not overcrowded. One square foot of brooder space per poult is recommended. Units of over 100 are not recommended except for those who have had considerable brooding experience. An 8x12 or 10x12-foot colony house will accommodate 100 poults until they are eight weeks old when they will be well feathered out so they can be moved to a cheap, simple shelter shed on another clean range.

If the colony house is used to raise some of the poults to maturity not over 25 will be accommodated in an 8x12 foot colony house. A 12x14-foot open shelter shed will provide roosting space for 50 birds until they are ready for market. One lot of 120 birds was reared to maturity at the Nebraska University poultry farm in a one and one-half acre yard with a fenced-in roosting enclosure 20x30 feet and about 150 feet of roosting space. The rear half of the roosting enclosure was covered with barn boards. The sides and front were enclosed with wire only. This trial indicated one method of handling larger flocks, after they were feathered out, with a low equipment cost.

Many poultrymen who are just starting into the turkey raising game wonder what should be fed to the poults. A number of different recommendations have been made on this subject but a good general rule to follow is that of feeding just as is advocated by the best authorities in regard to feeding chicks. The Nebraska station has this to say in regard to feeding poults:

"Poults can be started on a dry mash mixture when they are 48 hours old, and we advise the continuation of dry mash feeding through to maturity. A satisfactory starting mash may be made up of the following ingredients: 300 pounds ground yellow corn, 200 pounds shorts, 100 pounds bran, 100 pounds meat and bone meal, and seven pounds salt. Feed the mash in protected feeders. A small amount of scratch grain made of equal parts of cracked corn and wheat may also be given. Water or milk can be given in fountains. Remember that clean feed and clean water are the important parts of the turkey raising program.

"Green alfalfa, lawn clippings, dandelions or other green stuff will help to provide the vitamins which are so essential. By all means feed liberal amounts of green feed right from the start. The poults should be exposed to direct sunshine as soon as possible. Our experimental work has shown that poults get leg weakness or rickets even more promptly than do chicks when sunshine or its vitamin substitute is withheld. During long periods of cloudy, rainy weather the feeding of a pint of high grade codliver oil per 25 pounds of mash is recommended."

It is a good plan, when starting into the turkey raising business, or if in it now, to plan the production program over a period of more than one year. If this is done yards can be planned so that they may be raised on fresh ground. This precaution is necessary to keep down blackhead and other diseases. Soil disinfection through any measures other than rotations and cropping has not proven successful, according to number of experiment stations. The blackhead organism is quite resistant to natural destructive agencies and has been known to live in the soil for long periods of time after turkeys and chickens had been removed from the area. For this reason it is necessary, for success with turkeys, to plan a definite rotation of yards and to avoid all short-cuts in the yarding and management program.

If a strict separation of turkeys and chickens is to be secured, as is vitally necessary for success with the former, the producer is obliged to raise his poults in confinement. In addition to the value of this method in preventing disease it also has its merits in that the poults can be given closer supervision. Feeding and care can be given more attention and more rapid growth will be obtained at less cost.

It is important to supply protein in the poultry ration, and it is also important to furnish the right kind of protein. Meat foods, fish meal, and milk are some of the best sources of good protein, say poultry experts of the United States Department of Agriculture.

'GATE TO BEAUTYLAND' BERRIEN'S NEW SLOGAN

Berrien county, "the beginning of Beautyland," leads all others in the vacation directory just issued by the West Michigan Tourist and Resort association.

Each county is given two pages in the directory. One is a map, in colors, showing the roads, lakes and rivers, resorts and golf courses. There is also a map, in the Berrien county section, listing all the hotels in St. Joseph and Benton Harbor.

The other page contains reading matter, telling briefly of the history of the St. Joseph river, Blossom week, the horticultural products of the county, forms of recreation available, and of the mineral baths.

The map lists 11 golf courses in Berrien county. These are the Benton Harbor municipal golf courses, Berrien Hills County club, Martin Hills, Taber farm at Sodus, Advertisers' club at Bridgman, Chikaming Country club at Lakeside, Grand Beach, at New Buffalo, Watervliet-Paw Paw Lake public course at the Paw Paw Lake Country club at Paw Paw lake, and two courses at Niles.

Included in the directory is a large road map of Michigan.

U. S. Title Given To Water Front

At least some owners of Lake Huron frontage in Port Huron are snapping their fingers at the action taken recently by Fred W. Green in vetoing the Atwood relicted land bill. Owners of frontage in the La Salle tract, which is bordered on the north and south by Lakeside municipal park and the lighthouse reservation tourists' camp have title to their property direct from the United States government through the patent issued in 1811 to Antoine La Salle. The patent of 1811 to the 626 acres antedates by 18 years the government survey of 1829 when the controversial meander line was established.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Japanese Giant Radish

This is the great Sakurijima Radish from Japan. The largest radish grown, often attaining an enormous weight of 15 pounds, and sometimes 20 or 30 pounds.

It is a real "novelty" to most Americans, and the taste will immediately convince anyone of the fact that it is not merely a curiosity but a radish of extraordinary quality. Firm and brittle, and of most excellent flavor. It will grow and thrive in any soil or climate.

This is a radish that can be planted in the spring and eaten all summer long, and can also be kept through the winter, dug in the late fall and buried in a box of dry sand in the cellar. As a summer radish it is a wonder, and it will grow and thrive when it is so hot and dry that common radishes would be a failure. By all means try the Sakurijima Radish and you will be surprised at the real value of this monstrous variety. Send for package of the seed today before it is all gone. Packages, 10c; 3 packages, 25c; by mail, postpaid. Address Novelty Garden Club, 58 Market St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

STATE TO RUSH NEW BUILDINGS FOR HOSPITALS

Work has already been started on the institutional building program authorized by the Hartman bill.

The fiscal year begins July 1. Gov. Green hopes to complete the building operations scheduled for the first year before July 1, 1931, in order that the second year program may be undertaken promptly. The Hartman bill contemplates a four-year program, costing $23,427,300. The appropriations for the third and fourth years are subject, however, to the approval of the 1931 legislature.

In the forthcoming fiscal year, a total of $5,740,000 is to be expended, for building operations, as follows: Kalamazoo State hospital, $300,000; Pontiac State hospital, $350,000; Traverse City State hospital, $430,000; new hospital, $1,500,000; Michigan Home and Training school, $1,000,000; addition to University hospital, $250,000; nurses home at state tuberculosis sanatorium, $25,000; naval reserve armory at Detroit, $250,000; field artillery at Detroit (rental) $30,000; Detroit cavalry unit, $20,000; University of Michigan, $500,000; land at University, $175,000; Michigan State college, $250,000; College of Mining and Technology, $200,000; Girls' Training school, $50,000; State Public school, $50,000; Michigan Soldiers' home, $300,000.

The expansion of the Michigan Home and Training school at Lapeer will be undertaken immediately, the governor said. Already overcrowded, the institution has a long waiting list.

A site for the new mental hospital is being sought in southeastern Michigan by a special commission, the membership of which has not been disclosed.

"We are looking for land that can be purchased at a low figure," Gov. Green stated. "If we can't get a site at the right price, we can make use of the 915 acres of state land northwest of Lansing which the legislature made available as a hospital site. However, we want to get a site somewhere in the southeastern part of the state, for the congestion is there."

The Pontiac State hospital is to have a new power plant. When the new hospital is completed, it is the intention to abandon the Pontiac institution and sell the land, which has become valuable for subdivision purposes.

Leading architects will be consulted as to the design of the new mental hospital and certain other buildings, the governor said, but the supervision of construction will rest with the state building department.

State "Y" Secretary Lauds Iron County

The most outstanding work in the town and country departments of Michigan's Y. M. C. A. was accomplished by Ernest Richards, secretary of the Iron county organization, Mr. Freeman, state secretary, told a gathering of 300 during the fifty-fifth state convention held at Bay City. Mr. Richards was especially commended for the manner in which he had rehabilitated the work in the county, restoring it to a sound and healthy economic and useful status.

Mr. Richards was in attendance at the group conferences. He reported that additional opportunity will soon be provided Michigan's town and country department of the Y. M. C. A. through the terms of a large bequest by Millard T. Conklin, releasing a substantial sum for enlarged activity.

Urges Monroe Harbor

Monroe's industries have developed a volume of business sufficient to justify the United States government in building a lake port at that point without waiting for further development of the steel industry, is the opinion expressed by Henry E. Riggs of Ann Arbor, former professor of the University of Michigan, after making a complete survey of conditions at Monroe at the instance of the Monroe Industrial Commission. The survey was made with a view to making recommendations to the government for the improvement of the River Raisin channel.

In his reports Mr. Riggs shows how the development of the harbor would result in large savings to Monroe industries. He points out that the saving to the Monroe paper companies and to the first unit of the Newton Steel Company would amount to $553,380 a year. He declares that if the estimate of total savings were cut 25 per cent, it still would be sufficient to justify an expenditure of $7,500,000 for harbor improvement, an amount greatly in excess of any estimate he made.

Chain May Sell Autos

Agreement which has been entered into between research department of Sears Roebuck & Co. and Gardner Motor company provides for investigation into possibility of automobiles as a merchandise item distributable through retail store channels. The agreement calls for Sears paying a certain portion of cost of the investigation and does not provide for sale of a single automobile to Sears, nor does it mean that Gardner will produce a car which may be sold by Sears.

This step is in line with policy of Sears Roebuck to investigate all kinds of products for possible distribution through its organization. Company also has been submitted three propositions to distribute airplanes, but no investigation has yet been started in that connection.

AUTO ENGINE BIG IN FUTURE

Those who think car engines of the present sizes are sufficiently powerful for all time to come are not in step with engineering thought in the automotive industry. Twelve and sixteen cylinder engines, as against the present sixes and eights, are regarded by the latter group as certain to be developed.

One prominent leader of engineering thought, visualizing the next few years, goes beyond the average prophet and declares that the time will come when only eight, twelve and sixteen-cylinder cars will sell for more than $1,000. What a merry little battle would prevail in the lower price class should this prediction come true.

In looking forward to this greater power development, the engineer's thought is not so limited as that of the average layman. In spite of all the latter has read about the creation of superhighways, two decked streets and the like, he still is inclined to measure the future automobile by the present facilities afforded for automobile use.

Why have more power than can be used? he wants to know, thinking terms of even the best of present day roads. That is the juncture at which he and the engineer part company. The latter envisions as a parallel development, streets and highways made to order for motor cars driven by engines of 12 and 16 cylinders.

The whole history of motordom sustains the judgment of the expert. The average man can see the fact merely by looking backward to the day of the dirt road.

Janet Reached a Decision

By CORONA REMINGTON

(Copyright.)

AT LAST Janet Conrad came to a decision. With a sigh of relief she jumped up and started dressing. Only fifteen minutes in which to take her bath, put on her war paint and don the new dress she had hurriedly bought on her way home from the office.

She did not whistle as she usually did while she splashed around in the tub—instead there was a little frown between her finely penciled brows and her ordinarily sunny face was clouded with thought.

"No, sir," she told herself, "no love in a cat for me. Jack Benton's a darling, but nothing can take the place of my freedom and my hundred and twenty per. As soon as he rings I'll go down and tell him 'no,' then he'll go away and it will all be over and I'll have escaped the noose and the Elchra sink once more. These millionaires that come around offering their heart and their bank account to little art-nuggetters simply ain't—except in 'married' and 'novels'."

She thought back over the telegram she had received that morning. "Reach town via Chevrolet late this afternoon step May I see you seven o'clock snap something important to tell you, Jack."

She knew what the something important meant and at last she had reached her decision. She was glad, too, for Jack's frequent visits had caused her anxiety. She had always looked forward to them and at the same time she had dreaded them. He was so irresistibly boyish in his manner and so flatteringly infatuated that she had always felt the danger. If he had proposed to her without having given her the chance to reflect and think it over she would have probably fallen for him on the spot, but this way—thank goodness he had warned her. Now she had herself well in hand and it would be easy to resist his pleading. She wondered how he would take it. Of course, he would probably feel pretty well cut up at first, but that was natural. Nobody liked getting turned down. It must be a horrid feeling. She was glad that she wasn't a man; no one would ever get the chance to turn her down. Poor old Jack. She would be as gentle and considerate as possible.

Her thoughts ran along as she got into the little pink dress. It was alluring and feminine and accentuated her dark hair and eyes.

When Jack saw her a few minutes later he gasped involuntarily, but much to her chagrin he did not propose. And you simply can't say "no" to a man who has not said "will you?" He merely remarked after greetings were over:

"Say, I know a road by the river. I've always wanted to explore it. Shall we take a little spin in the car?"

Janet was slightly irritated. However, there was nothing she could do but consent to the ride, so they got into the little waiting car and were soon hurrying along the highway. The river road was several miles out of town and by the time they reached it dusk had crept off into the woods and had given the world over to the moon. Jack slowed down his pace and they moved quietly along the sandy road. Janet had no idea how long they had been driving when Jack stopped the car.

"Now it's coming," she thought with a little shiver. "He's going to propose right here and now. What shall I say? Goodness, I wish it were over."

But he did nothing of the sort. He said nothing, not a word. He simply took her in his arms and she felt his gentle kisses on her hair. She was hypnotized. She could not resist or utter a word. There was something electrical, magnetic about his touch and her mind whirled around in a chaos of thought. "If only he hadn't brought me here. Thank goodness, he brought me here."

After awhile he spoke. "I'll be tough sledding at first, honey, but we'll get along."

"Who cares about tough sledding as long as we're together?"

She heard herself saying the words, but still she could not believe her own ears. Then this new Janet said something else with a little lilting laugh: "Jack, I was beginning to be so afraid you wouldn't propose. You took so long to get to it."

As a matter of fact he never did actually get to it, but neither one realized it and just at that second the old dead Janet raised up her head for a last hurra as she chanted derisively: "Little trick nature plays on all of us."

But her words were entirely drowned by the voice of Cupid singing. "There is no joy that can touch the joy I give. Sorrow and self-sacrifice may come with it, too, but he has not really lived who has not loved."

United States Backward

This country is the only maritime nation of importance that has not a law fixing the lead line of a vessel, but permits its ships to go to sea with no federal precautions as to the depths to which they may load. American shipping interests are dependent on foreign rules and regulations for the fixing of load lines for their vessels and must make use of such regulations if they are to avoid penalties and costly delays in the ports of nations which have recognized by their laws the importance of this safeguard to life and property.

Finest Powder Money Can Buy

Pretty girls care little about price when buying face powder. But even expensive powders may not be good for your skin. Cold cream or oil base powders clog pores. Others dry skin and promote age-lines. The best powders are of Italian tale, like Gossamer. Smooths on like velvet, overcomes large pores and lines, gives lovely, natural complexion. Money can't buy powder better than Gossamer. Yet the new size costs only 50c at all good dealers.

1,248 SCHOOLS LIST PATROLS

That there are 1,248 schools with organized safety patrols in the lower peninsula is the statement of H. O. Rounds of Detroit, state patrol leader. The three southern tiers of counties, Calhoun included, are foremost in adopting the safety movement launched for the spreading of safety gospel. Outside the large cities of Detroit, Grand Rapids, Bay City, Saginaw and Flint, there are 217,000 enrolled for safety.

There are 10 to 25 boys on the school patrol, each one wearing the green felt arm band with safety patrol insignia, and each serving three months. At the end of that time these bands are turned in and service bars are substituted as awards.

A most interesting fact is that 60 per cent of the number enrolled for safety patrol duty are found in the rural schools. Kalamazoo has the highest number of perfect reports and Battle Creek ranks second.

Flags and cups are given patrol's for superior standing each year and the number is constantly growing, according to Mr. Rounds. Last year eight cups and ten flags were given out to winning patrols while this year 24 flags and 18 cups are to be distributed.

Poems That Live

TO F. C.

Fast falls the snow, O lady mine,
Sprinkling the lawn with crystals fine,
But by the gods we won't repine
While we're together,

We'll chat and rhyme, and kiss and dine,
Defying weather.

So stir the fire and pour the wine,
And let those sea-green eyes divine
Pour their love-madness into mine:
I don't care whether

'Tis snow or sun or rain or shine
If we're together.

—Mortimer Collins (1827-1876).

Beach Pajama Steps Into Sunlight of Fashion

By LUCY CLAIRE

Watch out for the high styles of today. They are usually destined to become the mode of tomorrow. This is what has happened to the beach pajama. When first introduced it was adopted by only a few of the selective smart women. Last year it was a little more popular, but this year Palm Beach stamped it with approval for general beach wear, and now the summer girl of 1929 will not have a complete seashore wardrobe without at least one pajama costume. It will play a much more brilliant, though less spectacular, part in the beach costumes of 1929 than of 1928, and the more conservative who have hesitated to adopt it must now bow to the acceptance of an established mode.

Wide trousers are the newest flare in the beach pajama. Not all pajamas are designed to wear over the one-piece or shorts and shirt bathing costume, but the wider trouser leg makes the pajama easier to slip on over the wet suit. Of course for the pajama to be worn over the bathing suit the fabric should be sturdy and washable. Mary Nowitzky, who has probably done more than any other couturiere in bringing the beach pajama to its place in the sun, is carrying out her ideas for bathing in gaily printed cottons, elaborately patterned linens, and shantungs with silk and wool jerseys and gabardines. Her pajama styles are adapted to practically every hour of the day, differentiating in materials, just as the coolie coat, more in fabric than in style for evening wrap, boudoir negligee, or beach wear.

Show Spanish Influence
At the extreme left of the sketch is portrayed a beach pajama costume copied from a Patou model. The wide trousers of wood brown flat crepe show the Spanish influence in a group of inverted pleats set in at the sides. The jumper is of beige trimmed with capucine shades, and the coat is of crepe printed in the same colors, the entire costume sponsoring the famous yellow of the season combined with brown.

The model sketched in the center shows a stunning effect in a black and white jersey beach costume with sun-back top, yoked trunks and knee-length matching coat. These costumes are still in vogue for the swimmer, though the pajama costume is newer for the beach lounging outfit.

The very wide trousers are again shown in a striking contrast of color in the pajama costume at the right of the sketch. This model effectively combines geranium red and white in flat crepe. The trousers and jumper are of white with red silk stripes stitched on, and the coat is of the red lined with white, lending a vivid spot in color contrast to the beach ensemble. One of Nowitzky's models for wear over a swimming suit of dark blue gabardine trunks and coral silk tuck-in shirt, is of a Rodier cotton print, which forms the pajamas and lower part of the jumper, with a red coat lined with the print. The upper part of the jumper is of the red that fashions the coat.

Brass rectangles lend a touch of individuality to the white sports coat worn by Clara Bow, diminutive screen star. She wears with it a small white hat of stitched silk and gaily colored sports sandals, which she matches with a purse of woven straw.

Here Are Remedies For Ivy Poisoning

If you are one of the many unfortunates who are highly susceptible to the torturing effects of poison ivy or sumac there is no need for your camping, fishing, picnic or other outdoor trips to be ruined this summer by accidental contact with these plants.

Scientists have discovered several simple remedies that are almost 100 per cent effective against ivy or sumac poisoning. Some of these are preventive measures, others are cures.

A preventive recommended by Dr. James B. McNair of the Field Museum of Chicago is a 5 per cent solution of ferric chloride in water or in a mixture of water, alcohol and glycerin. Wash the hands and all exposed skin surfaces with this solution before going into woods where ivy or sumac is likely to be encountered, allowing it to dry without wiping. The thin deposit of iron salt left on the skin neutralizes the poison immediately upon contact. This remedy has been used with good results for several years by the botany classes of the University of Chicago.

For persons who have been poisoned Dr. James F. Couch of the United States Department of Agriculture recommends a wash of 3 per cent solution of potassium permanganate. This oxidizes the poison and the area rapidly heals. The brown stain resulting from this remedy may be removed by a 1 per cent solution of oxalic acid.

In avoiding contact with these two poisonous plants, remember that ivy is a low, climbing shrub, bearing three parted leaves and should not be confused with the harmless five-leaved woodbine.

There is no danger of sumac poisoning unless you invade swamps, marshes and bogs which are the haunt of this tall shrub. Do not confuse it with harmless upland sumacs which bear clusters of scarlet red fruit in autumn. The fruit of the poison sumac is a grayish-green berry, borne in pendant clusters, and this species is never found in upland locations.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

AT THE GANGPLANK

As the gangplank is about to be hoisted aboard, and I am about to slide across the deep water for something of a stay in Europe, I bethink me of some of the things that need to be said once more.

I am still for Lindbergh. I think he has a perfect right to get married, to work for as big an income as he can get, and to be a little impatient of persistent publicity. I still want to see him in the cabinet as secretary of aviation. I still would be glad to see him given the freedom of the country. I still think his head should be put on a coin and on a stamp.

I am in favor of giving criminals found guilty of first degree murder their choice between prompt execution and life imprisonment, with the condition of availability for medical experimentation imposed along with the life sentence.

I still believe that congress sessions should be opened to the public by means of the radio.

I am opposed to cruel fraternity initiations and other forms of barbarism still widely practiced in some of our high schools and colleges. Alumni associations could put a stop to these murderous affairs if they would give their attention to them instead of to the sportification of the American educational system.

I like the magazine Plain Talk because it discusses interesting things. North American Review and World's Work are magazines that are coming back with good editing. I note outstanding improvement in the art department, as well as in other departments, of Cosmopolitan. Literary Digest doesn't amuse me as it once did. For fun I like College Humor, and for stimulating discussion the American Mercury. Harper's always has at least two articles that I have to read, and Smart Set seems to be plowing new ground extremely well.

I think there is plenty of room for both California and Florida in the Union, and I believe that grapefruit, oranges, grapes, lemons and pineapples are among the best foods for the health of the average individual. I do not believe that the mystery of the atom will be solved in our time, and I do not think the New York police will ever solve the Rothstein murder "mystery." Barring war, I believe that Washington will be the most beautiful city the world has ever seen, and Chicago the biggest.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"My Dear Virginia Lee: You mentioned in your column the other day that the general cry of your readers seems to be 'What can I do to be popular?'" I am a used-to-be popular girl who learned the secret of popularity. Listen!

"If you ever studied salesmanship, you heard about the 'you attitude.' The clever salesman goes to his prospective customer and tells him how the produce he has to sell will help his business or interests. He doesn't say, 'This is a wonderful cash register. It's just the thing I need in my business.' No, he appeals to the self-interests of the customer. He talks about the customer's business, not his own.

"A girl seeking popularity is trying to sell her personality. She can't do it by making clever remarks to a man or telling him what she thinks about things, or by smiling bewitchingly, or even by being beautiful. She must appeal to his self-interest. She must show an interest in the things he says to her, encourage him to talk about himself, and talk to him about the things he is interested in. Example: Bill says to you, 'I feel tired tonight.' You might say, 'So do I. I ironed all morning and this afternoon I helped mother can fruit.' If you did Bill would probably be bored. The reply he expected was, 'What have you been doing?' That gives him a chance to tell you something that he wanted to tell you.

"Every man has his talents and strong points. If you appreciate that fact, popularity is easy. If the man you are with is interested in biology and knows a great deal about it, encourage him to talk about it. That gives him a chance to shine. Be an intelligent listener. If you expect to hold his interest long, you must learn something about biology so that you can show an understanding of what he is saying. If baseball is his hobby, start him talking about it by remarking, 'I noticed in the paper that Babe Ruth knocked another home run yesterday.' Get the idea?

"Above all, never make a man feel inferior. Always laugh at his jokes, but never ridicule his opinion on serious matters. Don't express your ideas too forcibly; be good natured about it. If you disagree with something he says, tell him so, but don't treat his idea as if it wasn't worth considering.

Subtle flattery is the keynote of popularity. Make a man feel he is wonderful and he will respond by making you feel that you are wonderful. Make him feel that you are trying to be the star performer, and he'll start looking for a girl who will say, 'How do you DO that, John?'"

"Will you print this letter, Virginia? I realize that it is rather long, but I think it is what your readers are looking for. Cleopatra."

You see I am printing it, Cleopatra, and thank you. It is what I have been trying to say for some time and better than I could say it. I might add that the same rule works with all people, male or female, old or young, and that a genuine interest in people and their hobbies goes further than a feigned one.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a girl of 18 and have been keeping company with a fellow 19 for at least three years, but we are not engaged yet, but thinking about it. But we are accused of things that aren't so. Please give us your best advice, as I am very anxious to know what to do?"

"Go your own way and pay no attention to what people say, Polly E. They must have something to talk about. You and the boy friend happen to be the victims this time, that is all.

WEEK OF JUNE 23

Temperatures may be somewhat above the normal for this time of year in Michigan at the beginning of the week of June 23, but within 48 hours of Monday we are expecting lower readings. Thermal conditions for the balance of the week with the exception of Friday or Saturday will show readings below the June normal.

Before the middle of the week has expired Michigan will experience a severe storm of wind and rain with electrical storms and perhaps some hail. The barometric pressure at this time is expected to be more or less steep, more so than is usually the case for the season.

Following this storm center the sky will clear off and the temperatures will fall to low readings. This change will take place about Wednesday.

A marked change to warmer will occur in most parts of Michigan by about Saturday of this week. This condition will be the forerunner of some severe rain and wind storms that will hit the state during the first part of next week.

July Will Be Good to Farmer
The average precipitation for the state of Michigan during the coming July is expected to range about the seasonal normal. For a fair weather month it will be more or less living up to its reputation, yet there will be enough moisture to care for the growing crops. It will be a good ripening month both for grains and fruit. The month will not run smooth, as there will be several periods of extreme conditions.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

"Listen, Jack," went on the voice, faint at first, and then clear. "I'm telling you this because—well, because you've always been decent with me, and I want to do you a good turn. Tell me, do you want to know where your wife went? I found out—it came in a perfectly natural way, but I've got all the facts. Do you want to know?"

"Yes, yes, Nita," cried Jack, trying to get a grip on himself. "Go on—tell me!"

"They're driving—to—Cleveland," came the voice again.

"Who?" queried Jack hoarsely. "What d'yuh mean—they? Who is with her?"

"Le Tarte!" popped back the answer, distinct, sharp. "The professor."

"Go—on!" he gulped, his tongue thick.

"They—stopped at the—G—hotel in W—," came the voice over the wire. "Jim Blake met them just as they were leaving this morning at 9:30. Le Tarte told him they were going to Cleveland. Jim drove through from W— this forenoon; just arrived here in Elliston—came right up to see me. So you see there can be no mistake. You might catch them if you started at once. Jim said Le Tarte spoke of the C— hotel in Cleveland. I know that's where the professor stopped when he lived in Cleveland. Well, what do you think? Was it catty of me to tell you, or did I do right?"

"I'm—I'm glad you—you told me, Nita," said Jack, but in his heart he cursed her for it.

"Listen," came the voice again, faint at first, then clear. "I'm going to Pittsburgh on the 1:10 limited—only got twenty minutes. I'll be back in a day or so. Tell me, what are you gonna do? Are you going after her, as you said?"

"No!" shot across the wire to her. "I'm gonna let her go if she wants to!"

"Yes, you are—not!" snapped back the answering comment, and then a moment later a faint click told him she had hung up.

What should he do? Even as he put the query to himself, he knew. He would follow her!

He sat down to think. But, as on another and a far different occasion, the things came woefully slow. He got up again. Physical action seemed to stir his brain into motion. He went to the telephone and called up Mike Sweeney.

"I've got a line on Jill," he said, in a brisk, business-like tone, when her "hello" sounded in his ear.

"How—who told yuh?" came the sharp, double query. He answered neither—just then.

"She's on her way to Cleveland with—with Le Tarte!" he said, instead.

"Who told yuh, Jack?" asked Mike again. "C'mon, now," she went on, swiftly, "you want me to help you, so you might as well gimme the facts—as you know 'em. Who told you she's with Le Tarte on the way to Cleveland?"

Then he told her—all that Nita Ravelle had told him.

"Uh-huh," came her comment, "that's 'bout where I thought it came from. Listen, Jack—you come right over to the Central. We'll find this Jim Blake and get the truth of the matter!"

CHAPTER LII

Getting the truth of the matter, however, was not so easy. They found Jim Blake—in his room at the Elliston hotel, but the instant he saw Stuart he developed a rabid case of "cautionitis." He wasn't going to put his foot in a trap for anybody.

"But tell us this much," entreated Mike, who had assumed charge of "getting at the truth." "Did you meet Professor Le Tarte this morning in W—?"

"Yes," replied Blake shortly.

"Was it near the G— hotel, around 9:30?"

"Yes."

"Was there a woman in his car with him?"

"Yes."

"Was the woman a late resident of Elliston?"

"Yes."

"Will you tell us the woman's name?"

"No."

"Looka here, Blake," spoke up Jack Stuart, almost pleadingly. "Tell me th' straight o' this, won't you? Was th' woman with Le Tarte my wife?"

"I've done all the talkin' I'm gonna do on this subject!" declared Blake, gruffly. "You've got all you'll get outta me. That's final!" With which he stalked from the room, leaving his callers to follow or stay. They followed—but they didn't see him again.

"What d'yuh think?" asked Jack as Mike and he stepped from the elevator into the hotel lobby. "Seems as if it hadn't a been—been Jill he'd have said so, wouldn't he?"

The girl looked at him for a moment, rather searchingly.

"Tell me the truth, Jack," she said. "Is Nita Ravelle anything to you? That is, in anything more than a friendly way?"

He seemed surprised at the question.

"No—no!" he made answer, with emphasis. "I sh'd say not!"

"All right then," she said, and she seemed pleased. "C'mon, lets' go over to the bank. If Jill drew any amount of money, she might have mentioned her intentions."

If Jill went away with Le Tarte, she did it because she was crazy mad. It's up to you to rescue her from her own silly self! What'r you gonna do?"

"You know darn well!" said Jack Stuart, a sudden gleam leaping into his eyes that had been dull with gloom. "I'm goin' to Cleveland and I'm gonna bring her back to Elliston—if she'll come!"

"That's the way to talk!" commended the girl called Mike. "But don't you think," she added quickly, "it 'ud be better to take Tony along with you?"

The brother, she told herself, might be a restraining factor in the ever possible event of hostilities. Stuart smiled grimly as he caught her meaning.

"Don't worry over me running amuck," he told her, reassuringly. "I always aim before I shoot, and squint now beginning to see came about largely through my own folly. It was th' cursed money, just as Jill has been saying for a long time, and th' everlasting chase after pleasure—excitement—that finally culminated in this disaster.

"They say it's never too late to mend mistakes. God grant it may hold true with us. If Jill will come back I'm goin' t' play a different game than I've been playing. Since there's nothing I can do toward th' development of th' ore property I'm goin' t' try and get that job your father had lined up for me—that is, if Jill will come back!"

Tony Justin was strangely silent for a long time after hearing his brother-in-law's remarkable declaration and admission. It was obvious that Jack Stuart had been doing some very close introspective investigating. He had been taking a look at the inner Jack.

"Tell me the truth, Jack," she said. "Is Nita Ravelle anything to you?"

While his personal acquaintance with the subject was limited, Tony had heard that it is only the big man internally who can take himself apart in the first place. In the second place, having taken himself apart, and viewed the inner works, only the big man can reassemble those parts and run straight afterwards. Would Jack be able to readjust himself, according to plans and specifications? It remained to be seen.

They reached Cleveland shortly after noon the following day, and drove directly to the C— hotel, where they learned that Professor Le Tarte—and wife—were registered at the Annex, just around the corner. At the Annex they were informed the professor and his wife were not in their rooms.

"Well," said Tony, when they were back again in the car, "what now?"

"The district attorney's office now," proclaimed Jack.

At the federal official's office they received prompt service. If the man, Le Tarte, had brought Stuart's wife from another state, he was guilty of violating the law. Did Mr. Stuart wish to prefer a charge? Mr. Stuart certainly wished to, and did. Whereupon two detectives were assigned to accompany Jack and Tony back to the C— hotel Annex, which they reached just as night was spreading its blanket over the city.

It was learned upon inquiry at the clerk's desk that Professor Le Tarte and wife were in their room.

"Better call him down here," suggested one of the detectives, Mr. Burke. "Have the clerk do it. He can tell him a friend wants to see him."

Five minutes later the professor entered the hotel manager's private office.

Reforestation

The spring reforestation program of the forestry division of the conservation department has been brought to a close. A record season's work was accomplished this year with 8,550 acres reforested. This exceeds by 2,438 acres the spring planting of 1928. Approximately 5,000,000 trees were required to restock this acreage, and to assure an acceptable forest of the right density.

Contrary to the common belief that all the acreage contained in the state forests will require reforestation, the forestry division has found areas of swamp lands and localities where fire has not burned repeatedly, that are now sufficiently covered with desirable growths so that reforestation is not considered necessary. While in some cases this growth may only consist of the jack pines and not conform to the best principles of forest management, yet game cover has been formed and the area is green and presents an inviting view to the passing tourist.

The Big City

By James Fort Forsyth

IN CHICAGO

"Just a Good Weekly Newspaper—That's All!" reads the slogan of the Coopersville Observer, Coopersville, Mich. A paper, a weekly paper—this one—that has been extolled in the pages of the Saturday Evening Post. "Just a Good Weekly Newspaper—"

Not a W. G. N.—Not by any means the world's greatest newspaper. Such effective use of the word "just." But, after all, so effectively descriptive. And what more could the villagers of Coopersville ask?

Good weekly newspapers! Not a preponderance of 'em, not nearly enough of them! But quite a few, at that. Typically American institution—the good weekly newspaper! Wholesome. Clean. Pungent. Spunky. And, not infrequently, witty.

Each week I cull more darn good reading—more laughs—more pathos—more homely understanding from my weekly newspapers than from any other source. Each Monday morning I go through my favorites—what a morning!

Up in the Land O' Mears is the Mears Newz, a 5x7-inch paper printed and written by one Swift Lathers, who, I understand, wears a green suit, a red necktie, and a big, big hat. It's a hobby, or a disease, this paper. It lauds community prides and derides community shams. It skins the Town Tattlers of New Yawk a thousand different ways for good (?) unadulterated gossip and mud-slinging.

Swift Lathers is one of those editors who is always getting punched in the nose to no avail—for the paper never misses its publication date. Each week it comes in its penny wrapper—each week printed on a new shade of violet paper. Typographically rotten—hand-set—but graphically good. Verily, and rather!

And from Atehison, Kan., comes E. W. Howe's Monthly, subscription price slugged at two-bits the year. Scholarly. Cynical. Right. Wrong. But well worth reading. Written and published by a man whose pen the metropolitan journals and magazines have been bidding for years on end. A friend of statesmen—if that means anything—and a friend of the people—which means a lot. Good sound editorials. And terrible ones—well written—but unsound.

Rusta Biff, proprietor of a local Greek gobbleshop, recently defied traditions of thrift and installed a radio. Questioned as to his reckless expenditure, he made everything clear. Fans of the diamond can get returns from games in progress over the catchall—and when a handy restaurant has one on the shelf they all drop in to get the low. Pride demands that they at least order coffee and sinkers whilst getting the dope on what the Giants did to the Cubs.

Our friend, Kid Howard, proprietor of Kid Howard's Arcade Gym on Madison street, thinks, along with a lot of us, that the fighting game is going haywire. "Look at 'em," he declared—pointing out some nicely-muscled youths in the squared circle—"Why don't they go in for ping-pong?"
