Antecedents that Perseveral is to pay its share of the school bonds in the two school districts in which the municipal airport is located but that the airport is to be stripped from the township tax roles, was made by Geo. H. Roper, of Lyons city attorney.

Roper stated that the city was not being offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that there was a moral responsibility involved in the question of school bonds. The Waterford Center school board had also been assured that the major was not interested in the airport if the Waterford Central school board had ever been assured that the major was not interested in the Johnstown airport.

The resolution that is to be introduced soon by the Waterford City Council is to be introduced as a compromise, in which the school board would not be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would not be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Congress airport, but that the Waterford Center school board would be offered a site larger than the Cong

Another of Michigan's faculty is to be the Robert P. Phillips, for 18 years a member of the teaching force in the University of Yale, for a year's leave of absence, and afterward will assume the duties of director of the history department of Yale university.

Phillips came to the University in 1913, and has been in outstanding authority in the field of political science during the period which led up to the opening of the new school. He has written several texts dealing with the political situation as well as with economic and financial problems.

He has also published a number of monographs and textbooks on the subject of the political science of the modern world, and has more recently been engaged in research in the field of "Life and Labor in the Old West." It is reported that he is now working on the completion of his monograph with the expectation of having the work ready for publication in the fall as an addition to his first book, which has been very successfully received by the public.

It is a funny story, with a Japanese and an Oriental friend recently, I have learned some interesting facts about Japanese foods and the methods of preparing them. In one of the scenes, a large beef is cooked until it is tender, and then served with rice and vegetables. The beef is cut into small cubes, and the vegetables are served on the side.

Individual parts of the play, such as the setting and lighting, are well done. The costumes and make-up are also excellent. The actors carry the audience with them from the opening scene to the final curtain.

Isn't it a bit unfair the way we women are treated, and that we are supposed to do all the work? Well, I think we are smarter than men sometimes, but they are smarter in other ways. Men have more money, and they can afford to spend more time on leisure activities. I'm not sure I agree, but I have a way of looking at it that makes sense to me. I feel that I have the knowledge of that phrase: "A woman's place is in the home," but I'm not sure I agree. My husband and I are both working outside the home, and I don't think I'm doing any less than him.

Askew of the Stuyvesant, and Shreve of the Senate, both, back home in Washington, have developed formulas to cure the epidemic of recent paper-mill diseases. The two men have been working on a safe vaccine for some weeks. The results of their work are being sent to a lab in the White's office on the sixth floor. By this morning, Spring St. was in the process of receiving the first shipment of the new paper-mill disease vaccine.

"We're not sure what to call this," said Askew. "But we're confident it will cure the disease." Shreve nodded in agreement. "We've been working on this for weeks, trying to find a cure." He added, "It's the only way to save the paper-mill industry." The two men were both deeply concerned about the epidemic, which had spread quickly across the country.

Meanwhile, in the lab in the White's office, the vaccine was being prepared. cott Morris, the lab assistant, was busy mixing the ingredients. "This is the most important work I've ever done," he said, "and I'm sure it will work." The lab was quiet except for the sound of the lab equipment and the low hum of the air conditioning.

The vaccine was sent out to the paper-mill workers in the area, who were eager to try it. Some of them had already received the vaccine, and they were reporting back that it seemed to be working.

"We're hopeful," said Morris, "and we're working hard to make sure it works for everyone." The lab team was dedicated to finding a cure for the paper-mill disease, and they were determined to succeed.
