South American Wall Rivals That of China

Away down in South America, away from the beaten track of tourists, in Cartagena, Colombia, stands a wall that rivals the great Chinese wall in many respects. It cost $59,000,000 to build and, in some places, automobiles could drive eight or ten abreast along its top. Above, a corner of the massive wall, giving an excellent idea of both inside and outside.

The Los Angeles Grain Exchange was partially destroyed by a dynamite explosion which, according to the confession of Perry Larson, inset, bookkeeper, was planted to destroy ledgers and records that would show Larson to have been embezzling money from the exchange. WESTERN FRUIT MEN ASK LAW TO PROHIBIT BOOTLEGGING APPLES

Bootlegging of cull apples and placing them on the market in connection with the legally recognized grades of fruit may be prevented, if a bill introduced in the Washington state legislature is passed. The bill is the same as the one which failed of passage two years ago. It was then sponsored by the Yakima Valley Traffic and Credit association, which sent one of its members to the state capitol to work for the passage of the measure. The main feature of the bill is the provision that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier to transport a carload of apples without first having received a release from the state inspection service. The release may be made by telephone, telegraph and confirmed in writing to the common carrier or to any person authorized by the railroad to receive such release.

The release is to be made under such rules and regulations as the state director of agriculture shall from time to time prescribe. All apples shipped in bulk or as culls shall be accompanied by a written statement that the same is free from infection. The bill will not establish compulsory inspection, for the shippers, in the event of the passage of the measure, would be free to ship with or without an inspection certificate for which a fee is charged. The release provided for in the bill would not require a fee and there would be no certificate issue specifying the grade or condition of the fruit.

The intent of the measure is to give the inspection service a practicable means of stopping the shipment of fruit which, because of infection, cannot go into any of the established and recognized grades. Power to stop such shipments is vested in the inspection service under the present horticultural laws, while the new measure would require a release of every carload.

A few unscrupulous shippers have in the past resorted to culls and even purchased culls and resorted them for shipment to market and such bootlegging of fruit is regarded as injurious to the sale of the better fruit which is packed in accordance with grading rules. In the actual working of the new measure the inspection service could issue blanket release to reputable concerns, thus obviating separate car releases, while in the instance of firms which have been given to illegal shipments in the past each car should be inspected, as it could not be shipped without a release.

The bill is essentially the same as that of two years ago with the exception of some minor changes, one of these being that culls could not be shipped outside of the state and that provision was stricken out of the measure.

Immunizing Hogs Is Worth Little Without Sanitary Quarters

Too many swine growers immunize their hogs against hog cholera only to raise them under unsanitary conditions. Anti-hog-cholera serum and hog-cholera virus cannot be expected to save the hogs regardless of their condition when treated, say Dr. U. G. Houck, hog-cholera authority of the United States Department of Agriculture. The immunization treatment must be given under favorable conditions to be effective.

By raising healthy herds, by avoiding ways of spreading the disease, by following the advice of a veterinarian, and by giving special attention to the herd for at least two weeks following immunization, losses from cholera can be reduced. Farmers' bulletin 834-F, "Hog Cholera," which can be obtained from the United States Department of Agriculture, contains further information on this subject.

Kill Apple Maggots With Special Spray

The appearance of the apple maggot in several localities in Michigan makes it necessary for the grower who wishes to produce first class fall and winter apples to apply a special spray to control this insect.

The apple maggot is the larvae of a fly and it differs from the codling moth larvae so that it can be identified by a careful observer. The apple maggot is white, is smaller than the codling moth larvae, and has no head. The maggot feeds throughout the flesh of the apple.

Successful control is dependent upon proper timing for the application of the protective sprays. The first spray must be applied after the emergence of the adult flies and before they have had a chance to lay their eggs, and a second spray is applied two weeks later.

The spray recommended by entomologists at Michigan State College is one pound of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water. This extra spray should be applied only in districts where the apple maggot is present. County agricultural agents can inform growers if the insect is found in their localities.

The spray is recommended for use only on late fall and winter apples. Notices of the proper time to spray will be sent to each section of the state as the fly appears.

Kiwanians to Study Problems of Mich. Farmer

Town and country groups will be brought together and given a better understanding of rural and urban problems under the ambitious program adopted by Michigan Kiwanis clubs for this year.

Kiwanians will study human relationships and not cold statistics in the effort to have the town and country men understand each other. The farmer is going to be invited to bring his economic and social problems to the weekly Kiwanis meeting and explain them. The town dweller is going into the country districts to meet with grange and co-operative groups for discussions.

With the help of Rev. Nicholas S. Sichterman of Port Huron, governor of the Michigan Kiwanis district, the 47 clubs in Michigan will immediately begin activity, it was stated. Farmers will be invited to meetings and to membership, which is limited to not more than two of a kind in similar occupations.

Clubs already active in town and farm enterprises are Hillsdale, Sault Ste. Marie, Mason, Ypsilanti and Kalamazoo.

Farmers' Day Set Early in August

Friday, August 2, has been selected as the date for the annual Summer Farmers' Day at Michigan State college and the college staff will be host to the thousands of Michigan folks who annually accept this occasion to check up on the new experimental work on the college farm and to listen to the speeches and music arranged by the program committee.

College departments will have men at the plots to explain to the visitors the experiments which are being carried out this year. Inspection of the experimental work is scheduled to begin at 8 a. m.

Demonstrations, which will be given during the forenoon, include horsebreaking, the use of the rotary hoe for cultivating, and the use of chemicals as quack grass eradicators. The new dairy barn will be dedicated and a special program for dairymen will be given. A banquet for dairy enthusiasts will be held in the new barn Friday evening.

The speaking and musical program is scheduled for the afternoon. A choir singing contest is a part of the day's program.

Arrangements have been made for a play hour for children and the home economics department has completed a list of events of special interest to women so every member of the family will have a part in this year's Summer Farmers' Day, Aug. 2.

Control Ants with Poison Bait

Ants are causing considerable damage and bother to housekeepers, gardeners and beekeepers in some sections of the state. In almost every case where the annoyance from ants has occurred in houses these pests have been attracted by some form of sweet food. Housekeepers report that ants are getting into pantries and carrying away the sweet foods. Gardeners say that ants are found on various plants, including peonies, tulips and others. Beekeepers write about damage done by ants in robbing honey and annoying bees in the colonies. Ants do not injure plants, but are attracted to plants to gather the secretions which come from them or from plant insects—mostly a sweet substance called honey dew.

A knowledge of ants' fondness for sweets has led to the discovery of a simple but effective control. Cut a sponge up into small pieces and soak them in sirup. The sweetened pieces are then strewn along the pathway of the invading ants. In a short time they will cluster around the sponges and cling to them. The sponges, now covered with feeding ants, can be dropped into boiling water. This process can be repeated many times.

Another method of control suggested is to mix 20 parts of honey with one part of tartar emetic. The bait should be placed on small pieces of cardboard where only the ants will get hold of it. Other insects such as bees will be attracted by the poison bait, and for that reason it should be hidden in the pathways of the ants under something.

Various cyanide compounds are now on the market. One cyanide compound which goes by the name of cyanogas costs little and is very effective. This material when applied on top of an ant hill forms a deadly gas which penetrates the ground and kills the entire colony. About a tablespoonful is all that is required to kill a hill of ants. Care should be taken when applying the poison not to breathe it, as it is very poisonous. All grass and weeds on an ant hill are killed where cyanogas is applied, but the following year will grow again.

Begin Education of Horse Early

The instincts in a horse that are opposed to obedience to man increase in strength with age, so it is very desirable to begin the education of the colt as early as possible. A good plan is to break colts to lead before they are weaned, and to harness them between the ages of 2 and 3 years. Accustom colts to work gradually and do not use them at heavy work until they are practically mature.

SUMMER COLONY HOUSES FOR PULLETS

There are two types of houses suitable for pullets that are being grown out for next winter's layers. One is the movable type of house while the other is a light airy house.

Probably the first method is the most economical in most cases. This is the best possible use to make of brooder houses during summer months. Roosts may be installed in them and large mash hoppers and watering vessels placed on the outside. This arrangement will make it possible to handle pullets with a minimum amount of labor and at the same time insure good growth and freedom from disease.

Where a brooder house is not available, it is often advisable to build a light, airy house for the pullets. It should be made so that it can be moved from place to place on fresh range. One of the mistakes often made in growing pullets lies in allowing them to be housed with the old flock during the summer months. This not only crowds both pullets and old hens but also subjects the pullets to contamination from parasites and diseases of all sorts.

A shed closed on three sides makes a good summer house for pullets. The fourth side should be provided with fine mesh wire to keep out rodents of all kinds. If such a house is built on runners it can be easily moved from place to place. A house of this kind should be about 10 by 12 feet in size. The rear side should be about four feet high and the front about six. This will give sufficient head room for the caretaker. The runners should be so placed that the pullets need not go through the door. If rodents are bad it will be necessary to close up such openings and provide an entrance for the chicks.

Houses of either type should be placed where there is shade. If trees are not available, a cornfield will allow the pullets to scratch without being in the sun. Good shade, plenty of grass, comfortable quarters away from old birds and plenty of good feed will insure pullets well enough matured to start laying next fall when eggs are high in price.

THE NEW TARIFF BILL IN REFERENCE TO POULTRY

Poultrymen in general will be pleased to note that for the first time a tariff is placed on baby chicks; being 4 cents a chick, as proposed in the bill now pending.

Breeding birds will also have a tariff of 50 cents on birds valued at $5 or under and 20 per cent ad valorem on birds over $5 in value. This is a new tariff also.

No addition was made to one of the most needed products. That is dried eggs which now are largely imported from China as low labor costs in China make it impossible for American factories to dry eggs without more tariff.

In submitting the report, the special committee of Congress mentioned that a new provision was made for a new product, baby chicks.

The ways and means committee introduced the tariff bill on May 7th. It will be called the Tariff Bill of 1929. The rates for poultry are:

Birds, live chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys and guineas, 6 cents per pound; baby chicks of poultry 4 cents each; all other live birds not specially provided for, valued at $5 or less, each, 50 cents each; valued at more than $5, each, 20 per cent ad valorem. The present tariff rate on live poultry is 3 cents per pound.

TUBERCULOSIS OF FOWLS BEING REDUCED

The influence which two farmers' bulletins are having in combating tuberculosis of fowls in Michigan is reported by Dr. T. S. Rich, federal inspector in charge of the work in this state. "In our tuberculosis-eradication work," he says, "the field inspectors make an investigation of poultry diseases on every farm they visit. Where evidence of disease is found and reported we follow up with a letter inclosing a copy of Farmers' Bulletin 1200-F, Tuberculosis of Fowls, and also Farmers' Bulletin 1554-F, Poultry House Construction. This system of follow-up work is of considerable value since we have found that nearly 50 per cent of the persons having diseased poultry on their premises follow the instructions of our letter and the bulletins.

DETROIT GETS NEW MAIL LINE

Detroit and Cleveland are now receiving an air mail service equaled by no other cities in the United States. For the postoffice department has authorized the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation to carry mail on the 10 o'clock plane of their trans-lake passenger, mail and express line, according to an announcement by "Tex" Marshall, vice president and general manager of TAC.

Through the inauguration of this new service air mail letters posted in Detroit in the morning before 8:30 will connect at the Cleveland municipal airport with planes on the trans-continental route flying east and west. They will also connect with planes carrying mail to the south.

The 12:30 plane of the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation's trans-lake passenger, mail and express line has carried mail since the intercity run began operations May 14. The extensive use made of this mail service was a big factor in the decision of postoffice officials to authorize the carrying of mail on the 10 a. m. plane. For letters posted in either city in the morning will receive afternoon delivery in the other city. Also, letters mailed in Detroit in the morning and addressed to cities in the east, west or south, will be delivered half a day or more earlier than previously.

Since the inception of the mail service on the 12:30 p. m. plane, letters sent special delivery and posted at the same time as telegrams were dispatched, have often received delivery before the wire. It is expected the new service will prove equally as efficient.

Insures 27,284 Employees

At the end of the third year of its operation, the group insurance plan of the United States Rubber company shows 27,284 employees carrying a total of $38,926,000 insurance. A total of $390,000 has been paid on 253 death claims, and $59,500 on 28 total disability claims.

The plan is operated on a contributory basis, the employees paying a proportion of the premium and the company underwriting the remainder. Among salaried employees eligible to insurance, 9,804 or 92.8 per cent are carrying insurance. Among wage employees, 17,480 or 89.1 per cent of the eligibles, are insured.

STATE FAIR BARS PRO-TYPE EXHIBITS

The wandering type of professional exhibitor, with a collection of fine horses, cattle and other livestock and poultry, to run away with all the prizes at agricultural fairs, has been barred from the Michigan State fair, Sept. 1 to 7.

Fair officials have ordered only recognized breeders of livestock and poultry shall be eligible to compete for the prizes. Eliminating the non-established exhibitor with his professional exhibits is expected to increase by 10 per cent the number of livestock and poultry exhibitors at the forthcoming fair.

The September fair will be the eightieth exposition by the state. The official program, just off the press, and copies of which are available to all prospective exhibitors, show the greatest total, $126,100, of prizes ever offered by the Michigan State fair. This compares with $120,000 last year and $107,000 in 1927, the first time the total exceeded the $100,000 mark.

Motor Bus Lines Link Most Cities

There are nearly 100,000 motor busses in the United States, and they cover some 800,000 miles of route. Practically every city in the country is directly linked with other cities by long distance bus lines; and terminals with waiting rooms, bulky time-tables and all the paraphernalia of full-blown transportation systems, have been established at points in every section of the country.

Switch in Paris Lights New Sign in Detroit

When the new public clock and spectacular sign atop the building of Frederick Stearns & Co., manufacturing pharmacists, of Detroit, was ready for use, officials of that concern decided on something away out of the ordinary for its "baptism of fire."

Accordingly, in Paris, on the night of June 29, Frederick Sweet Stearns, chairman of the board of the Stearns company, pressed a telegraph key, sending the tiny electrical impulse over 3,850 miles of cable and 790 miles of land wire to flash on the sign over the factory in Detroit.

At the same time a photograph was taken of Mr. Stearns at the key. This picture was rushed to London by air messenger, thence across the Atlantic by Western Union cable, from New York to Cleveland by telegraph wire, and thence to Detroit by airplane. Less than 24 hours elapsed from the time of the Paris ceremony to publication of the photograph in Detroit.

Sturgis Company Is Reorganized

C. W. Kirsch, president of the Kirsch Co., has been elected president of the Royal Easy Chair Co., one of the largest makers of overstuffed furniture in the middle west. The reorganization of the Sturgis plant includes other changes in the personnel of the executive staff.

Other officers are: Vice president and general manager, E. D. Voorhis; vice president and treasurer, C. E. Sullivan; treasurer, E. H. Lothian. C. E. Walton, who with his brother, J. F. Walton, established the firm and later sold it to the present owners, has been recalled to serve as superintendent.

Mr. Voorhis, in charge of sales, states the business for June was almost double that of a year ago. A new line of chairs and a new rest lounge will precipitate the plant into an unusual period of activity before fall, he states.

Sees $700,000,000 Exports

John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, recently returned from abroad, said that the 1929 automotive exports from the United States were shattering all past records and expressed the opinion that more than $700,000,000 worth of American automotive products would be shipped abroad during the present year as compared with a little more than $500,000,000 worth during 1928.

"It would be no surprise to me if American automotive exports for this year would reach the unprecedented figure of three-quarters of a billion dollars," said Mr. Willys.

RIVER FACTOR IN YPSILANTI

Excellent possibilities of the Huron river, in producing electric current by water power, has been an important factor attracting many industries to the Ypsilanti district in the past few years and forecasts an unparalleled industrial advance for the district in the near future, says Gardner S. Williams, chief consulting engineer of the Detroit Edison company.

"The development of the Huron river, the utilization of its water power to produce electric current and the influence of electric power in building industry has interested me for nearly 45 years. My first interest in the Huron river came during my student days at the University of Michigan, 1884 to 1889. In 1904, I became associated with the Detroit Edison company and have witnessed the construction of five modern water power plants on the Huron river," said Mr. Williams.

The Huron river, estimated to be between 200 and 300 miles in length, affords excellent possibilities and sites for electric power generation, which are lacking in many rivers which may be far larger. The Huron, Mr. Williams pointed out, may be utilized for electric power production because it possesses both the necessary requisites: sufficient water and a grade fall. The Huron river, fortunately, has a considerable fall between its source, located above Milford, Michigan, and its outlet into Lake Erie, near the mouth of the Detroit river, a drop of 200 feet being noted between the two points. This fall, which gives a rapid flow to the river and gives rise to favorable power plant sites, is concentrated particularly in the section of the river between Dexter and Ypsilanti. It has made possible the construction of dams, reservoirs and electric power plants furnishing power to numerous industries located in Ypsilanti district.

Electric power generated in these plants is consumed mostly by local industries and residences, nearly the entire amount of power produced being utilized west of Wayne, Mich. The Huron river is the only river used for the production of current by the Detroit Edison company, the other electric power plants throughout the Edison system being powered by steam. Plants on the Huron are hooked with the Detroit steam plant system and additional current needed either in Detroit or Ypsilanti, may be sent from either point.

The plants on the Huron vary in size and in the amount of current produced, the averages of horsepower produced ranging from 500 to 1,200. Reservoirs of water serve as storage plants, holding potential water power in reserve and as additional power is needed an increased flow is let through the turbine generators, Mr. Williams explained.

Michigan Gasoline Tax Revenue to Be $23,000,000

Michigan's gasoline tax revenue for 1929 will exceed $23,000,000 in the opinion of Burton F. Browne, director of the gasoline tax division of the department of state. Last year's receipts, the highest on record, amounted to $20,200,000.

The first five months of the current year showed a total of $8,244,127 with the heaviest traffic months yet to come. May's total, far in excess of that for May, 1928, was $1,968,293, net. The increase in revenue from this source has been remarkable since a gasoline tax was first resorted to as a means of financing highway construction and maintenance. A two-cent levy was established in 1925, netting during that year $8,742,391. The present tax is three cents a gallon.

The second $2,000,000 installment of weight tax funds collected by the state during 1929 was sent out to the various counties recently. A third payment of the same amount is to be made later in the year and some funds will probably also be returned to the counties from the gasoline tax receipts, it was said by Frank D. Fitzgerald, business manager of the state highway department.

The law provides that $6,000,000 shall be distributed among the counties from the weight tax funds and sufficient additional paid out to make the counties' share a full half of the weight levy collected each year. The distribution is on the basis of the amount paid in the purchase of license plates by motorists, each county benefiting in direct proportion to the number of licensed automobiles owned within its borders. Wayne county, of course, gets the lion's share of the funds, the Wayne allotment of the recent $2,000,000 payment being $813,889.

Retired Marine Engineer Building Another Vessel

Henry Bender, retired veteran marine engineer of Holland, is building a boat he plans to use as a business vessel on Black lake next year. The craft is 46½ feet long and has a 11-foot beam and a 5-foot molded frame. The material is white oak and the cost of the boat will approximate $4,000. Bender built a fish tug a few years ago and it is now in service at Frankfort.

Bender received his marine engineer's license in 1885 and spent a career of 40 years on the lakes. He was engineer on the steamer Charles McVea, which sailed between Saugatuck and Chicago 14 years, and was engineer for the Benton Transit Co. on steamers between Benton Harbor and Chicago for 18 years. He also sailed on lumber barges between Chicago and northern Michigan ports.

Airport Site Option Is Taken at Manistee

A group of Manistee residents headed by John Harvey and R. C. Vanantwerp, has obtained an option on 120 acres of the Herman Kolk farm, four miles northeast of Manistee, with the view of developing an airport.

Manistee's municipal airport recently was condemned by members of the First Michigan Air Tour as inadequate.

Makes New Steel

Ludlum Steel has completed its new plant at Dunkirk, N. Y., for manufacturing the new cutting tool steel, "Strauss" metal, and it is now in production. This is the new cutting tool steel developed by Professor Strauss of Krupp's on which Ludlum and General Electric have the exclusive American rights.

Ludlum has further extended its right on German steel processes, having closed negotiations with the Darmstadt Wire Drawing Corporation of Frankfurt, giving Ludlum exclusive rights of these machines covering the drawing of all metals, the original contract only covering the drawing of steel wire.

BERRIEN MAY BUILD T. B. SAN.

Mayor Leon D. Case of Watervliet, who is ex-officio a member of the Berrien county board of supervisors, has been named chairman of a special committee to conduct an investigation and report on the question of the county a tuberculosis sanatorium. Other members of the committee are Supervisor James Jakway of Benton and E. Houseworth of Bertrand.

The proposition was submitted to the voters of the county two years ago and was given a favorable majority of 1,200, but the county board by a close vote decided against building. The county now is paying something like $30,000 per year for the care of tuberculosis patients at Pine Crest sanatorium, Oshtemo. The committee will report at the October session of the board.

St. Joseph Lays Plans For County Centennial

St. Joseph county supervisors have appropriated $100 to further plans for the county centennial next fall.

Plans for the celebration call for the observance in the entire week of the Grange fair at Centerville with special emphasis laid upon Sept. 9, when a historical pageant will be presented.

French Shepherds Use Stilts to Advantage

Walking on stilts is a fad that does not die with the ages. On the tomb of one of the oldest Pharaohs is a crude bas-relief depicting a court procession. The procession is led by a trumpeter who is perched on high stilts.

Every nation, in fact, has had its expert stilt walkers. In China, and Japan the fad is popular with youths, some of whom are so adept in this mode of walking that they require no supports or uprights to steady them.

In southern France stilts are more than fads. There they are used almost continuously by the shepherds, who have to keep watch over large flocks of sheep as well as to pass through bogs. The stilts are usually from six to eight feet high and are strapped tightly to the knees.

Both men and women in that part of the country are expert stilt walkers. In their hands they hold a long stick or cane as a support. So accustomed are these people to the stilts that shepherds have been known to knit socks while walking on them.

A frequent pastime of these people are still races, and not a holiday passes without a stilt contest of some sort. One contest recently was won by a boy and a girl, each fourteen years old. The third to come in was a shepherd, whose age was about seventy.

The Boss on the Scene

By I. LOUIS RAYBOLD

IN ALL his fifteen years of running a dude ranch Jim Stanley had never concerned himself over any of his guests beyond their actual welfare and entertainment until Daphne Fremont started in making miserable the life of Jim's nephew, Brent Burgess.

Brent was an intermittent cowpuncher who turned to in the summer time and helped his uncle pack outfits for the dude camping trips. A nice-looking boy, but tremendously bashful, "Woman shy," his uncle called him, and was glad of it.

Funny, too, for Daphne was a good sort even if somewhat over-indulged by her father, who had been a friend of Jim's for many years. Jim had welcomed the advent of this particular party, who proved to be a very decent crowd of young people with an older woman in the capacity of that old-fashioned creature, the chaperon.

I sure do, Mr. Stanley," replied Daphne, with a similar effort to meet his casualness. "Everybody going?"

Three days with Redhead assigned as her guide, pondered Jim, would make her see the light. Would bring her to appreciate a fellow of Brent's caliber.

Evening of the second day of the expedition found the party camped under the pines beside lovely Lake Lupin. A semicircle of small peak tents was pitched around a central camp fire of mammoth logs.

The wit of conversation consists more in finding it in others, than in showing a great deal yourself. He who goes out of your company, pleased with his own facetiousness and ingenuity, will the sooner come into it again.

A man sent a small boy to deliver a note to a young woman who lived a few streets away. He gave the boy a nickel so that he would hurry.

CONTRACT LET FOR $430,000 "U" STRUCTURE

Spence Brothers of Saginaw, general contractors, have been awarded the contract for the construction of the $430,000 elementary school building for the University of Michigan. The structure will house a pre-school, kindergarten and grades in connection with the work of the school of education. Pupils of both the county and city may enter on the same basis as the University high school.

Spence Brothers erected the University Museums' building and the First National bank skyscraper.

It is planned to have the structure ready for occupancy by the fall of 1930.

Davidite Colony to Test By-Laws

A court test of the by-laws of the House of David which, as a voluntary religious association, claims communal ownership of property held by individual members, looms in the Berrien county circuit court, through action brought by the colony to get title to a lot in Eastman Springs, held by the late Leonard Rowe, confidant of the late "King" Benjamin Purnell.

The colony, in a suit filed by Attorney H. T. Dewhurst, seeks to recover the title to the real estate which it is alleged Rowe bought with $350 from colony funds, under the fictitious name of Frank B. Ross.

The use of the colony's funds by Rowe, the bill charges, was known to Benjamin, who kept Rowe near him as a bodyguard during his period of hiding from state officers and following his sensational arrest a few years ago.

Poems That Live

TO . . . IN CHURCH
If I was drawn here from a distant place,
'Twas not to pray nor hear our friend's address,
But, gazing once more on your winsome face,
To worship there Ideal Loveliness.
On that pure shrine that has too long ignored
The gifts that once I brought so frequently
I lay this votive offering, to record
How sweet your quiet beauty seemed to me
Enchanting girl, my faith is not a thing
By futile prayers and vapid psalm-singing
To vent in crowded nave and public pew.
My creed is simple: that the world is fair,
And beauty the best thing to worship there,
And I confess it by adoring you.

Sunback Dress Is a Fixture

By Lillian Campbell

Whether you like it or not, the sun-back dress is here to stay. This is the statement of Mrs. Edith Tadd Little, prominent business and club-woman of St. Petersburg, Fla., who claims the design of the first sun-back frocks last winter which were worn by girls of the Beta woman's club in the fashion show in that city. "Why shouldn't it stay?" she demands.

"When I designed the sun-back dress I kept in mind the fact that the healing rays of the sun have brought more health to mankind than any other single agent. More than that, it is recommended to healthy people by physicians as a form of health insurance.

"With this in mind I cut a low V in the backs of the dresses, and the sun-back appeared."

After it was revealed by the members of the club here, it quickly caught on among other members in the fashionable winter colony. Soon it had taken hold in other parts of Florida. Now it is a national vogue.

As its advocates point out, vigorous object to the sun-back frock in some cities has done more to popularize it than any other agency.

"Civic and school authorities were quick to see its virtues," Mrs. Little continued, "so they gave it their stamp of approval. As the vogue traveled northward it met with increasing opposition, but it has alighted in all of the leading summer resorts, and the coming winter in the south, and the following season of summer in the north, will see the sun-back dress an established institution—decent, economical, healthful, sensible, and here to stay."

Only Woman Magistrate

Miss Jeanette Brill is Brooklyn's first and only woman magistrate.

"Any young woman starting out as a lawyer will succeed if she goes to work in the right way," she says. "Let her remember, first of all, that she must not ask favors on the score of being a woman."

Schools in Session

Four summer schools are being held by the Y. W. C. A. this season. There is one at Asilomar, Cal., one at Geneva, Wis., one at Proctorsville, Vt., and one in New York City. These schools meet the demands of the college graduates who seek to study the Y. W. C. A. preparatory to entering the association as a profession.

STUDENTS TO TAKE JOURNALISM COURSE

The new course in journalism at Michigan State college has prospects of becoming one of the most popular studies at the institution next fall. Since the addition to the curriculum was announced last winter many students have inquired concerning the work.

Students specializing in agriculture are among those interested in the new course. This is true particularly of those students who are studying with the intention of entering the extension service in this and other states.

Ability to write a good news story is considered a valuable asset by extension leaders. Publicity has helped many county agents and extension specialists in selling their program to farmers, especially to the large percentage of farmers who rarely attend meetings and demonstrations where the college's work is explained.

Ouster of School Head Called Void

Declaring that the school board of Vandercook Lake acted hastily and illegally in canceling the contract of Floyd C. Wilbur as head of the school, Circuit Judge James A. Parkinson took under advisement the writ of mandamus obtained for the reinstatement of the superintendent.

A number of persons who were reported to have signed a petition, instrumental in bringing about dismissal of Wilbur, appeared at the hearing and testified that they did not realize the petition demanded such dismissal. R. J. Bradley told the court that he was under the impression that he was signing a petition asking for a new school board, while Mrs. Emma Abbott said that she had signed it because she thought the children were allowed too much freedom and that the salaries were too high.

Judge Parkinson asserted his belief that he was satisfied the board had acted illegally, and that the entire community was affected.

Do You Know How to Resuscitate Another?

What are the first aid rules for the with drowning.

As an aid toward the prevention of drowning accidents the National Safety Council has prepared a synopsis of the chief steps to follow in the application of the Schaefer Prone Pressure System, which has resulted in the saving of many lives. Here are the things to remember. Read them over carefully—and then practice them on some member of your family. That's the best way to remember.

1. Lay the patient on his stomach, one arm extended directly overhead, the other bent at elbow, with face turned outward and resting on hand so that nose and mouth are free for breathing.

2. Kneel, straddling the patient's thighs with your knees placed at such a distance from the hip bones as will allow you to assume a comfortable working position over the patient. Place the palms of the hand on the small of the back with fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger touching the lowest rib, with thumbs and fingers in natural position, and the tips of the fingers just out of sight.

3. With arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually brought to bear upon the patient. The shoulder should be directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

4. Now swing backward so as to completely remove the pressure. Then repeat the operation, regularly, timing it to about twelve to fifteen times a minute.

5. Continue without interruption until natural breathing is restored. Patients have been brought back to consciousness after four hours' work.

6. An assistant should loosen clothing about patient's neck, chest and arms as soon as resuscitation starts.

7. Keep patient warm. Do not give any liquids whatever until patient is conscious.

8. To avoid heart strain patient should be kept lying down after recovery. If the doctor hasn't arrived upon recovery, patient should be given some stimulant, such as one teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in small glass of water, or a hot drink of tea or coffee.

9. The work should be done immediately at nearest possible point to where patient receives injuries. He should not be removed until breathing is normal and he is fully revived. The treatment is to be used in gas or electrocution cases as well as drowning.

Try it now—and teach others. You may find that it pays to know how!

Coffee or Iced Tea

The chocolate lady fingers would be delicious to serve with lemonade when callers drop in or in the evening when everyone is hot and thirsty.

Today's Recipes

Liver a la Creole—One liver, one thick slice bacon (chopped), two tablespoons chopped suet, four tablespoons flour, one sweet pepper, two cups canned tomatoes, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one-eighth teaspoon curry powder, four onions. Wipe with damp cloth, skin and remove veins from liver. Cut in three-fourths-inch slices. Dredge with flour. Fry bacon and suet in a deep saucpan, add the liver, chopped onions, pepper, and turn until the meat is thoroughly seared and coated with a rich brown gravy. Add tomatoes and seasonings, cover closely and simmer three-fourths of an hour. Serve very hot on narrow strips of buttered toast. Serves five.

Chocolate Lady Fingers—Two eggs, one cup sugar, three tablespoons evaporated milk diluted with three tablespoons water, one-half teaspoon vanilla, one and three-fourths cups pastry flour, six tablespoons cocoa, four teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Beat egg yolks until thick. Add sugar gradually, then diluted milk and vanilla, beating continuously. Mix flour, cocoa, baking powder and salt together. Add to egg yolks and stir until smooth. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Shape four inches long and one-inch wide on a tin sheet covered with ungreased paper using a pastry tube. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for about ten minutes. A pastry tube may be made by rolling a nine-inch square of paper into a cone.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

The bay which forms the entrance to the Scotch town of Vigo is one of the most beautiful in the world. Blankets of fog lift and settle again as we feel our way slowly up the great bay. We spend nearly a day and a night entering. A ship of this line recently cut down a freighter lying at anchor in the New York harbor, and a terrible time followed, with loss to the line. I suspect our captain is, as a result, a bit over-cautious. The passengers grumble at the loss of a day, while we lie fog-bound. But the bay is full of rocks and shoals, and I, for one, would rather lose the day than my skin.

The waters hereabout are reeking with history. Just as we wait now for the fog to clear, so waited the Golden Hind, while Francis Drake (not yet Sir Francis) paced her deck, waiting for the fog to lift. He had just returned from his buccaneering voyage around the world, and his hold was full of Spanish gold that he had taken in the waters of the new world. As Spain and England were at peace, Drake wasn't looking for a Spanish harbor in which to display his loot. He had missed his way. He stayed but briefly at Vigo, and headed away for Plymouth.

Just as we wait, here where we lie at anchor, there waited for three days and night, in 1702, a fleet of English and Dutch war vessels. Within the harbor of Vigo lay the Spanish plate fleet that had recently come in from the Americas with a rich harvest of gold and silver.

The Spaniards knew the enemy was without, but delayed unloading the treasure. When the fog lifted, the enemy sailed in. The plate fleet still lies at the bottom of the bay, and on a clear day you can see the silt-covered masts and hulks that have baffled so many industrious divers since those faraway days of romance and wars between jealous kings.

As we warp in to the dock, the gorgeous Spanish policemen are pushing back a crowd of thousands that has assembled to welcome us. These policemen use their open hands, instead of clubs, to manage the crowds, and they are quite effective. In the course of half an hour they force the main body of the crowd back half a block, and hold it there. Some privileged hundreds line the pier at the water's edge.

These policemen wear blue uniforms with brass buttons, scarlet collars, scarlet cuffs, broad white belts and resplendent helmets with a coat of arms. Some carry short, light clubs which they keep hooked to their belts. Others, who probably are sergeants and captains, carry smart little swagger sticks with curved handles. All wear chinstraps. They are very polite, especially to foreigners.

Soldiers in khaki, some smoking and some holding newspapers in their hands, stand about the docks. They wear caps like tams. The customs officers are grand in olive green uniforms and lordly black caps that reach almost to their shoulders.

A collie has hurt his foot, and is crying. Soldiers, health officers, policemen and civilians forget the incoming ship while they attend to the wounded dog, dressing his foot tenderly and committing him to his master with a new leash. The dog barks his thanks. He likes these Spaniards. So do I.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

JEALOUS DISPOSITION IS USUALLY THE CAUSE OF MARITAL TROUBLES

By Virginia Lee
"From all jealousy and envy, from all unkindness, from offense given or taken, from unrighteous anger and an impatient spirit, from a hard and unforgiving temper, and from evil speaking, oh, Lord, deliver us."

This may well be the prayer of most of us. We all have our troubles with these faults, and sometimes, when our nerves get ragged with too much work or ill health, the jealousy, envy, anger, etc., play hob with our happiness.

If we realize our errors it helps us to safeguard ourselves from them, but even then they are hard to exorcise.

A young wife writes me pitifully to help her: She says: "Dear Virginia Lee: I am a young married woman with three children. Please try to help me. Please help me to overcome a jealous disposition. It is causing a lot of trouble between my husband and myself.

"He says I am always nagging at him for no reason at all. But it seems I cannot help it. He is certainly good to me. It is an awful thing to be jealous. At times my nerves get awful bad.

"Jealous Disposition."
I think that you are in a nervous and rundown condition, my dear girl, and that is the cause of your trouble, not your disposition. Go to see a doctor, tell him how you feel and ask him to prescribe for you.

If you cannot do that, take cod-liver oil every day and get out of doors just as much as you possibly can. You need fresh air and, above all, sunshine. Let your housework go as much as you can, and get out and play with the children.

Make up your mind that you are "not like that," and, when you feel an inclination to nag, shut your eyes and repeat this little prayer at the beginning of the column or count up to 25 or more until the mood passes. As you feel better physically you will be less and less inclined to be jealous and suspicious.

You know your fault and how much unhappiness it will bring on you, so you are forewarned. When you feel your nerves are bad, lie down and relax, if possible, even if only for a moment, and think how blessed you are to have him and the children. And write me again and tell me how you are getting on.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am madly in love with a married man and cannot forget him. When his wife leaves for the summer he gets very intimate with me. He has kissed me several times. I feel if this goes on much longer I will die, as I can't love anyone else or even get interested in anyone else.

"He tells me he loves me dearly and is very jealous of me. Shall I continue and have hope some day of being his wife, or shall I try to forget him, even though I can't?"

"Anxious."
Even though you can't forget him, you must, Anxious, although it would serve you right if your hopes were realized and he made you his wife. Now just think for a moment how pleasant it would be to be the wife of such a man. You know he made love to and married one woman. While married to her he makes love to you, on the sly, and kisses you whenever he gets a chance.

What guarantee have you that after you were married he would not be making love to and kissing other girls who come to his shop to have their hair cut? I think he is handing you a lot of hooey, my dear, and you are the proverbial "poor fish." Go and scrub your lips with plenty of strong soap to see if you cannot get the taint of his kisses off, and make up your mind that the next man who kisses them will not belong to another woman. And don't flatter yourself that your case is different to that of other poor girls who are flattered by married men whose wives "misunderstand" them.

WEEK OF JULY 28

During the week beginning July 28 in Michigan we are not expecting to see any great changes in the barometric pressure. This is, of course, a usual summer occurrence...

The early days of this week will bring rising temperatures. In fact, we believe there will be quite a heat wave cross the state from about Monday to Wednesday.

During the first half of this week, barring Sunday, it is quite probable there will be more or less cloudiness but, even so, we are not of the opinion there will be much rain from them. Local showers or rains will occur in scattered sections...

Temperatures will fall moderately sharp during the last days of this week in most parts of Michigan only to be checked about Saturday or next Sunday by the arrival of another storm center.

The Missing Attache

Sturdevant, Ace of the Secret Service, Risks Everything To Nab Mad Conspirator; He Wins and Loses

By SEABURY QUINN

"Does look childish, doesn't it," Sturdevant agreed as he paid the bill and rose. "Let's see if we can find another picture like it." "I followed him, resentment beginning to get the upper hand of me. He had dragged me off to a Bohemian restaurant to eat an indifferent dinner while he let his work slide by. Now he talked flippantly of finding the duplicate of a childish scrawl on a menu card, and a full hour had passed since he declared a diplomatic messenger's life and dispatches were in peril.

ture he crept away into the shadows. "I was about to call after him, when the creaking of the stairs warned me to silence. A glow of light was showing through the stairwell. In a moment a man bearing a torch appeared, followed by another, and still two others. They formed beside the stairway, two on a side, letting about twenty more people file between them. "When the entire company had entered the loft, two of the torchbearers took the lead, while the other pair brought up the rear, and all began a march about the enclosure. "It was the strangest procession ever seen on this continent. Every member of the band—men and women—was stripped to the waist, and daubed with streaks of green, yellow and red paint. The women's hair hung unconfined about their necks, the men's was disarranged and matted with some oily substance. All were crowned with eagle feathers, and, except the torchbearers, each carried a wand topped with a carved serpent. Heading the procession, immediately behind the light carriers, was a tall, fair-haired man, his white skin showing vividly between the bars of paint in strong contrast to the swarthy complexion of the others. "When they had completed the circuit of the clearing three times, the company formed a semi-circle before the altar, four of them mounting the steps with the blond giant, who seemed to be master of ceremonies. "Pronto!" he whispered to his assistants. "They raced off into the darkness, reappearing in a moment with a long canvas sack—the kind used by medical students for anatomical specimens. They flung the bag to the floor before him. As I looked, something in that bag writhed and uttered a whimper, like a frightened child! "The blond man pointed to the sack, the other four seized it, opened it, dragged forth a man, bound, gagged and bleeding from a score of knife-wounds. Without a second's hesitation, they threw the helpless body upon the round altar, fowed back his head, stood staring at their master with fiendish expectation in their eyes. "The fair-haired man drew a knife from his girdle, raised it toward the grinning idol, as if in invocation, and leaned above the prostrate victim. "A sudden chorus of cries and a scuffle in the darkness interrupted the sacrifice. Half a dozen of the gang were struggling into the zone of torchlight, forcing Sturdevant between them. "Never have I seen such a look of malignancy on human face as that with which the blond man regarded Sturdevant. "So, ho. Monsieur Sturdevant," he said mockingly, "we meet again, eh? In Buda-pest—you remember Buda-pest?—I tell you we meet sometime again when the smile be on the other face. I not think you smile very much now, ha?" "Sturdevant stood forward from his captors, and faced the other with folded arms. I crouched in my corner, steadying my pistol hand with my free one, as I drew a bead on the blond man's breast. If he made a step toward Sturdevant, I was determined it should be his last. But the drama before me held my trigger-finger paralyzed. Sturdevant was answering. "Sure of yourself, aren't you, Romolski?" he asked, forcing a smile. "It's typical of your brand of courage to play heroics when you've got your gang with you. But let me tell you something—you haven't a Chinaman's chance to win this game. I know all the devilry you've been up to; I know how you've imposed on these poor, credulous fools, making 'em think you can restore the old Indian governments. I learned your plans here in New York; I even learned your picture code—that's how I traced you here tonight, following your picture notices of this meeting from a cafe in Greenwich Village. Tomorrow morning I'll be telling a United States commissioner about your plot against the safety of friendly governments—" "Tomorrow morning, my dear Monsieur Sturdevant," the other corrected him, "you will be telling your tale to the holy angels, for tonight yours will be the second heart torn out for the glory of Tezcatlipoca." He turned again to the young man lying on the sacrificial altar. "See," he said, "like this will I pluck your heart from your breast!" "He raised his knife above his victim, but quick as he was, Sturdevant was quicker. Bringing his folded arms forward suddenly, he presented a pair of automatic pistols to Romolski's breast. "Put your hands up, you swine!" he ordered. "Put 'em up, or I'll make a flyscreen out of you!" "There was a crash. The torches were suddenly extinguished, half a dozen flashes burned the darkness as Sturdevant fired right and left into the gang. Howls, tramping feet, curses in Spanish, a wild stampede for the stairway. "Loomis, Loomis! Damn you, where are you, Loomis?" Sturdevant called through the Stygian darkness. "Here," I answered, "trying to decide where to shoot, and afraid to do it for fear of potting you." "Well, hold your fire. It's all over now. Come and help me with this chap; the poor fellow's fainted." "By the rays of Sturdevant's flashlight we resuscitated the unconscious Panaravian courier and clothed him temporarily in Sturdevant's long military cloak. Hunting among the debris, we found his musette bag with the dispatches still intact. Romolski's fanatical followers had been too intent upon their blood sacrifice to trouble to destroy the papers. "An hour or so later, conveyed by Sturdevant and me, the courier was on his way to Washington. "Loomis paused, draining the last drop from the bottle with which he had begun his story. He glanced impressively at his audience. "But that isn't quite the end of it," he added. "Romolski escaped in the darkness that night, and wasn't seen again until"—he paused ominously—"until day before yesterday. Sturdevant's agents reported him in New York then. "This second Panaravian secretary has been missing two days. Mark my words, men, Romolski's at the bottom of it. That young man will never be seen alive again. "Hullo, hullo-hullo-hullo," Wilson, the Advocate's rotund representative greeted the company as he entered the Blade's office. "See they've found the missing secretary, all right." "Found him?" Atkinson, Shreve and Jermyn looked at Loomis. Loomis looked at Wilson. "Found him, did they?" he asked, somewhat thickly. "Dead, of course." "Dead?" Wilson echoed. "Sure, dead drunk. He got in with some bootleggers on the train and stopped off at Baltimore. When a policeman found him wading around the fish pond in Harland Square, and started to pull him out, he told the cop to be sure to wake him early, for he was to be Queen of the May." "What about that, Loomis?" Atkinson asked. "I suppose Sturdevant had something to do with that, too, didn't he?" Loomis locked his lips, staring from one of his accusers to the other. "That's my story," he answered with dignity. "That's my story, and I'll stick to it." (The End)

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE MERGER AGE

This is the age of the chain and the merger. The vast demand for volume has stimulated men to greater production and greater economy at the same time. Perhaps suggested by the world of business and by the growing demand for efficiency, the merger idea has reached into the churches. Canada led the way with a United Church. It is not a complete job, but it is of large significance. Other mergers have been discussed in this column. Now the Reformed Evangelical and the United Brethren are discussing union. The popularity of mergers indicates, above all else, the gradual growth of the spirit of religious tolerance. All mergers may not be wise, but at least the tendency towards mergers is a good sign.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

The family doctor is coming back. He is going to come into his own. About 85 per cent of graduates from medical colleges have been becoming specialists and surgeons. The percentage won't keep up. The demand for the general practitioner is too great. Humanity has definite need of the wide experience and friendly counsel of the family doctor of the old style. It is a great field for young men who are willing to work hard and who want to make their lives count.

ARBITRATION

One reads that the arbitration board in New York grants 9,000 railway workers increased wages. This plan beats the strike, which bids fair to pass out of American industrial life.

FOR THE BOYS

If you want to do something worth while for a boy send him to a summer camp. The Y. M. C. A. and some other organizations sponsor camps where lads live the healthiest kind of life in the country for at least a limited period. Hundreds of men, seeking to do some definite good within their financial means, can send boys to Y. M. C. A. camps and other camps for a few weeks. This is a sound investment and it is bound to pay dividends of happiness all around.

UNDERSTANDING THE OTHER FELLOW

A mistake which some very able men make is to underestimate the intelligence of the other fellow. There are enough folks who are dumb. No doubt about that—but it is never safe to assume too great a degree of dumbness on the part of the man you are dealing with.

UPON PARADE

Mrs. Waring entered her milliner's in a state of exceptional excitement. "My new hat has been trimmed on the wrong side," she cried angrily. "I want it altered." "The trimming is on the right side, as it should be," replied the assistant. "It makes no difference where it ought to be!" shrieked the infuriated woman. "It's got to be on the church side." "Church side, madam?" "Yes, church side. I set close to the wall and I'm not paying for trimming that can't be seen. I want it on the other side so's all the congregation can see it!" Boy—When we reach that bend in the road, I'm going to kiss you. Girl—Isn't that going a bit too far?

FATAL ACCIDENTS INCREASE FOR 1928

Fatal accidents in the United States for last year increased by 3.1 per cent over fatal accidents for the previous year, according to an analysis just completed by the National Safety Council.

A total of 96,000 people in the States during the year 1928 lost their lives from accidents, as compared with 93,078 accidental deaths for the year 1927. The 1927 report is from the United States Census Bureau, and the 1928 estimate is the first national estimate that has yet been made public. The states included in the council's "Accident Facts" represents 48.7 per cent of the entire population of the United States. Unless the remaining portion of the country had an accident rate and that they were 30 per cent experience essentially different from these states, total accidental deaths last year were approximately 96,000.

A comparison with figures in previous years shows that the 1928 fatalities exceeded those of 1913 by 16 cent above the number in 1921, which was the lowest of the last sixteen years. The national death rate from all accidents decreased from 95.5 per 100,000 of population in the United States in 1913 to 68.7 in 1921, but since 1921 an increase to 78.4 has occurred. The decrease from 1913 to 1921 was 20 per cent; the increase from 1921 to 1927 was 14 per cent. Automobile accidents experienced an increase in death rates from 1913 to 1921 of 195 per cent and also an increase of 71 per cent from 1921 to 1927.

Comparing 1911 with 1925-26-27, the most important reductions are found in railroad accidents where fatalities decreased 37 per cent; and in street car deaths where a decline of 16 per cent occurred. Automobile deaths, on the other hand, increased nearly twelve-fold during that period. Accidents caused approximately 6 per cent of all the deaths occurring in the United States and there are only six causes of deaths that have greater importance, all of these being diseases of long standing seriousness.

Accidents to children are not increasing as rapidly as accidents to persons of all ages. Child accidents have been decreasing steadily since 1924. There were 27,500 motor vehicle deaths during 1928, an increase of 6.3 over 1927. The automotive death rate for 1928 is five times as high as in 1913 per 100,000 population. There were approximately 950,000 non-fatal automobile injuries during 1928. The cash cost of motor vehicle accidents approximate $900,000,000.

Of the 41 states reporting, South Carolina showed the greatest improvement in the auto accident situation, a decline of 11.9 per cent. Montana, with an increase of 75.9 per cent, showed the greatest upward change. In addition to the state-wide fatality records, 83 cities that report monthly to the National Safety Council show an increase of only 4.4 per cent. This and other evidence indicate that cities are not experiencing as large increase in motor vehicle accidents as are the rural areas.

There is a definite seasonal movement in motor vehicle deaths. A month's motor record for 1927 and 1928 indicate that the fall months beginning in September are the peak of the year for auto accidents.

Between the ages of 5 and 64, automobile accidents are the cause of more deaths than any other type of accidents. About 58 per cent of all deaths occurred in collision of motor vehicles with pedestrians. And of all victims in such collisions almost one-third were under 15 years of age.

There was a considerable increase in the carbon monoxide gas poisoning cases over the year 1927 when 277 victims lost their lives.

There were 20,000 fatal accidents in public places not involving a motor vehicle, such as drowning deaths, fire-arm fatalities and railroad accidents resulting in deaths in which the auto did not figure.

There were 24,000 fatal home accidents in American homes and approximately 40 per cent of the home tragedies occurred through falls, the most common causes being tripping over rugs, slippery floors, stumbling over obstacles and falls from ladders or substitutes for ladders. More than 6,000 lost their lives in homes as a result of explosions, burns and scalds. And there were more than 4,000 home deaths through suffocation and asphyxiation. There were about 2,000 poison fatalities in American homes during 1928.

Luther Woman Finds Turkeys Are Mortgage Lifter

The beautiful turkey has joined the ranks of farm mortgage lifter along with the lowly swine. Mrs. Sophia Miner, farmer, will vouch for the turkey's mortgage lifting capabilities. Six years ago she was left with a run-down farm and a $4,000 mortgage. Today, her farm is out of debt, thanks to a money-making flock of turkeys. She sold 400 prime turkeys in Detroit last fall, and expects to have around 500 to sell this year. It takes most of her time to care for her flock during the growing season.
