The families of Will and Seymour Walker held a reunion at Barber's Bathing Beach Sunday. Every member of both families were present for the first time. 34 sat down to a dinner that left nothing to be desired. After the game they went to the home of the latter to finish a perfect day.

Will Jeschke, of Buffalo, who with his family are regular summer visitors at Brandywine Lake, got into the public eye last Thursday night when he landed a 6½ pound black bass. Bill took the fish to Kalamazoo and registered in the contest for big fish catchers and is all to the good for this variety of fish so far this season. He has purchased a lot, plans to build a cottage and will no doubt take longer vacations here in the future and do his best to rid the lake of the big ones.

There will be many free acts at Allegan Fair. Sequist this year has secured as the headline attraction the Greer Society circus. This act has played the Florida State Fair and many other large fairs throughout the country. The Greer Society circus is a whole collection of acts featuring horse and chariot racing and special acts of horsemanship. In addition they have several other acts that are highly entertaining. Besides the Greer act there are the famous Royer Bros. in a thrilling acrobatic act; the Selbin Sisters in a globe act and Patricia Patty Royer, the girl Dempsey. This young woman is an accomplished boxer. In addition Swan Sequist announces the engagement of another added attraction, Mimi and Pomme, dancers unique in a clever, snappy dance act.

The crowd at Base Line Sunday were much disappointed that the visitors were not so good, but the visitors were more disappointed that the locals were too good. Their claims were strong and their price high but Curtiss was invincible and held them to 4 scattered hits while his teammates touched Smith, their crack slab artist for 16 bingles and 10 earned runs in 6 innings. Brown replaced him for the next two and held the locals to 1 score which with 2 unearned made the final 13 to 0. The visitors took no batting practice and no outfielding before the game and seemed to think they were out for a holiday with a bunch of sand letters and they will never forget their mistake. It was not that they were so poor but that the locals were too good. Pere Marquette team of Grand Rapids next Sunday and all hope they are as good as they claim, if they are it will be another battle royal.

Saturday being Nancy Ann Wauchek's fifth birthday her mother entertained several of her little friends in honor of the event. Favors and refreshments helped make a happy day with many gifts to help Miss Nancy remember the occasion.

Mrs. Ida Cole left for Ferndale Monday to see the new grandson, James Maurice, who arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice F. Cole, Saturday. A coincidence is the arrival of her first grandson on the fifth birthday of her first grand daughter, Miss Nancy Ann Wauchek.

Everything that goes to make up a week of real entertainment has been arranged for the 5 days commencing Tuesday and running through Saturday. A Saturday fair is a new departure this year and a special program is being arranged by Secretary Swan Sequist.

Annual Announcement and Course of Study of the Gobles Public Schools

Published by the Board of Education

Our school is on the accredited list of the University of Michigan for this coming year and therefore students and graduates may enter any other accredited schools or colleges without any entrance examinations or loss of credits. No school in the state can offer a higher qualification.

The greater number of our teachers have had experience in our own school or other schools. We have purchased a large athletic field for both the high school and grade school. The playground is carefully supervised by members of the faculty and interscholastic athletics will be coached by a former professional athlete with coaching experience. Interclass athletics will be encouraged for both boys and girls.

An experienced orchestra conductor has been retained for the coming year. Instruction will be divided into an advanced and elementary group. This will afford every student interested in music an opportunity to develop their talents. Music is also taught in the grades. Arrangements will be made for music students to participate in the state musical contests yearly.

The primary grade work is based on reading and the broadens to include English, Mathematics, Science and History as the more advanced grades are reached. The Junior High is Departmentalized. The course of study is based on the State Curricula and meets the full approval of the State Department.

It will be well worth your while to investigate the opportunities offered in our high school. We offer advantages equal to any school of our size in the state.

We especially invite eighth grade graduates to investigate the opportunities we offer. A splendid, friendly student body; a helpful and interested faculty enables you to gain the utmost from your high school course. Our classes are small enough to give each student individual attention and instruction. This means much to the new student who is not acquainted with high school work.

Admission

Pupils entering for the first time will be assigned to the grade their attainments seem to warrant. Eighth grade graduates will be admitted to the ninth grade without examination.

Students entering from other schools are urged to have their credits transferred to the Superintendent at their earliest convenience. Full credit will be given to pupils coming from schools of equal rank.

BORER PERILS MICHIGAN CORN

The shadow of the darkest cloud in the history of Michigan agriculture is creeping westward across the state on the crest of the present heat wave. Every county will be overcast by fall—the forewarning of the destruction, next year, of Michigan's second best crop, its corn.

In its most drab colors, this is the picture which A. C. Carton, director of the Bureau of Agricultural Industry of the Michigan department of agriculture, sees ahead of the crop which annually takes 1,593,000 acres of Michigan's best farm land and turns back approximately $50,000,000 to the rural sections of Michigan.

The European corn borer, according to Mr. Carton, is coming into its own. After a six-year fight by state and federal experts, the borer is down in Michigan this year and by fall the corn borer will be found in the stubble of fields even along Lake Michigan. The Federal Department of Agriculture has Michigan quarantined but is leaving eradication to the farmer and is confining its efforts to averting the spread westward.

The repeal of the corn borer act by the 1929 legislature was the collapse of the last fortification of the state department of agriculture and this year the motorist will encounter no state patrol lines or be stopped by uniformed department of agriculture men with the question: "Any green corn in the car?"

Except for the precautionary measures the Michigan farmer will take, the corn borer has the field to himself. Fifty Federal scouts came into Michigan this week from the Toledo headquarters, but only to check the spread of the pest. No report is available from these scouts, but Mr. Carton, who has directed the state's fight for years, believes the borer will blanket Michigan this year.

Nine counties and parts of seven others were added to the quarantined area during 1928 in the face of the state patrol and legalized clean up campaigns conducted under the corn borer act.

The same map shows 35 additional counties added this year to the infested area. Every county in Michigan is shown in the area quarantined by the Federal department and the nearest corn borer patrol station under Federal auspices will be in the northern tier of counties of Indiana. The state, with the corn borer act repealed, will have no patrol and the European pest will be held back only by the lakes which form the state's borders, Mr. Carton says.

Trees Aid In Fight To Stop Sand Dunes

Trees are playing a leading role in man's fight to keep the shifting sand dunes of the Lake Michigan shore from spreading disaster over farm lands, roads, and drainage ditches of the state's western border.

That many of the dunes are traveling "landward", often at the rate of several feet a year, is an established fact. Effective ways of checking the wandering tendencies of the errant dunes have become a real problem, and the usefulness of artificial tree plantings in this work is being determined this summer through a survey by forestry officials of Michigan State college.

Several hundred thousand trees were planted on the dunes 15 years ago, all the way from Holland to Petoskey, and the college foresters are checking this summer to see how much these trees have grown and how effective they have proved in slowing the relentless march of the sand.

Carolina poplar, box elder, and some of the pines give evidence of being best suited for the shifting sand plantings, according to Prof. A. K. Chittenden, head of the M. S. C. forest service. Methods of establishing plantations must vary with the character of the dunes and the exposure.

The dunes themselves are said to have increased greatly in value and importance with the development of Michigan for summer resort purposes.

Some Hints on Care Of Feeding Colts

A colt gets more than half its full growth during the first year, so it should be kept growing well. The mare needs plenty of pasture, grass and grain to stimulate a good supply of milk for the foal. When the colt is from three to four weeks old, it should be given some grain. A good mixture is four parts crushed corn, three parts bran and one part linseed meal. As soon as it will eat hay, some good legume hay should be provided. The colt should be weaned at from five to six months, when it is eating plenty of grain and hay.

Mosquitoes Are Killed By Fish

Common goldfish, silverfish, and top minnows feed on mosquito larvae and can be put in artificial ponds and such places to keep down mosquitoes. Top minnows, which are found in all parts of the country, are especially voracious feeders on mosquito larvae. The effectiveness of the minnows is increased if the water is cleared of any vegetation or debris, so as to permit the minnows to reach all parts of the pond.

U. S. May Lose Cuban Market for Potatoes

A gesture that will have deep significance for American exporting to Cuba is seen in the recent increase in Cuba's import duty on potatoes from 90.7 cents to $2.268 per 100 pounds if imported from November 1 to June 30 and from 45.4 cents to 68 cents per 100 pounds if imported from July 1 to October 31.

This increase is obviously intended to make the republic more self-sustaining. Cuba is practically a one-crop country, and that crop, sugar, is threatened with destruction through high tariff barriers on the part of the United States. As a means of self-preservation, the Cubans seem to be inaugurating a program of agricultural diversification with a view to greater self-reliance. It is a natural proceeding, but the consequences in this country will likely prove serious.

United States exports of potatoes to Cuba amounted to 111,113,700 pounds in 1922. That year the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act with its increase in sugar tariff was passed, and potato exports have fallen off since until they reached a level of 74,565,540 pounds in 1928. With the stimulation of Cuban potato production that will inevitably follow the new duty, our Cuban market for potatoes will rapidly disappear. Furthermore, the United States is granted a 20 per cent preferential in the duty on potatoes, a fact that makes the Cuban market especially valuable to us. Only last month a financial journal reported that Norfolk, Virginia, would handle approximately 200,000 barrels of potatoes for export to Cuba during the following 60 days, and that the Cuban demand was caring for part of the troublesome crop surplus.

Blister Rust War Opens in Newaygo

Three inspectors from the state department of agriculture are at work in Newaygo county eliminating the cultivated black currant bushes.

The 1929 session of the legislature passed an act providing for the control of the destruction of trees, plants and bushes infected with white pine blister rust, and authorizes the commissioner of agriculture to set aside white pine growing districts as control areas.

Under this authority the commissioner has set aside Newaygo county as a white pine area, in which the planting and possession of currant and gooseberry plants is prohibited for the purpose of protecting white pine trees from this deadly disease.

The white pine rust, which kills the trees was first discovered in this county in 1928. It is a fungus disease that has for its host mainly currant and gooseberry bushes and white pine trees. It cannot spread from pine tree to pine tree, but must come to the pine tree from the currant or gooseberry bush.

More Milk Produced By Fewer Cows

The number of milk cows on the farms of the United States has changed only slightly in recent years. The number increased from 21,408,000 in 1921 to 22,523,000 in 1925, and then decreased to 21,824,000 last year and 21,820,000 on Jan. 1, 1929. Production has kept up, largely because of better breeding and feeding of the smaller number of cows. The number of yearling heifers and tiefeifer calves kept for milk cows is now larger than for last year, but is less than 1 per cent larger than the number ordinarily required to maintain the present number of milk cows. Changes in the number of cows milked during the next two years will depend, says O. E. Reed, chief of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, largely on the relation between the price of beef and the price of dairy products, for this affects both the age at which milk cows are sold for slaughter and the number of beef-type cows milked.

Beaver Carries Mud In Arms, Not on Tail

Although most persons believe that the beaver uses his tail for carrying mud and sticks and other material used in building his lodge or dam, naturalists say this is not the case. Instead the animal carries his building materials in his arms, walking erect like a man and using his tail to balance himself.

His tail is used for a rudder more commonly than for any other purpose. When he is towing brush or heavy sticks about his pond he steers his course by means of his broad paddle-shaped tail. He also uses it to sound an alarm to other members of his colony when danger threatens.

Ottawa Supplies 10,000,000 Chicks

The baby chick season is rapidly drawing to a close and estimates place the season among the highest in recent years. While no figures have been tabulated millions of chicks have been shipped by parcel post and truck to all parts of the country.

Leading hatcherymen have aided to their equipment and it is proposed to make 1930 the banner year for shipments. Ottawa's contribution to the chick industry of the country this year is placed at more than 10,000,000.

Poultry

NEWLY DISCOVERED POULTRY ROUNDWORM

Discovered for the first time in Illinois, a rare species of poultry roundworm has been found to be a rather common parasite in many farm flocks of that state, according to an announcement by members of the animal pathology and hygiene division of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

Routine examinations made daily in the college animal pathology laboratories disclosed the new pest, which is a small roundworm known as capillaria. It is a type of parasitic infestation that cannot be detected easily by superficial examination. The mature worms are slightly visible, but are buried in the lining wall of the intestine and crop. This worm, like other internal parasites in fowls and other animals, produces unthriftiness, anemia, lameness, paralysis and ultimately death.

The newly discovered pest is only one more of many different types of internal parasites which contaminate farms in the middle west, it was pointed out. Bad management is the most common cause of infestation in the case of all these parasites. Worm infestation in herds and flocks cannot be checked even by repeated use of medicines, but must be attacked through sanitation and hygiene.

"Contaminated soil and water are the sources of worms in chickens, as well as in pigs, sheep, turkeys, calves and colts. The most efficient results in checking worm development can be obtained by simple methods of management. Worm remedies give only temporary relief and if farmers really intend to control worm infestation in animals, they must realize the importance of keeping young stock away from infested ground and of supplying clean feed and water.

"Clean houses, clean water and clean ground are better than medicine in the prevention of internal parasites. Rotation of pastures and plowing and cultivating of the ground constitute the most satisfactory way of preventing the development of worms. There is no medicine that will take the place of sanitation. If there was, there would be no occasion for cities to spend large sums of money in providing sanitary surroundings in centers of human population. It would merely be a matter of taking a pill.

"The idea that sanitation for farm animals can be substituted for by medical treatment is responsible for many serious losses. There are pastures in the corn belt where the same type of animals have been raised almost constantly from the time the prairies were settled. This has given parasitic diseases the opportunity to take hold."

PROVIDE ROOSTING SPACE FOR GROWING BIRDS

Adequate roosting room is essential to the proper development of chicks on range. Chicks that are crowded at night are overheated and weakened. From four to six inches of roost space should be allowed for each bird. If there are too many birds for the size of the colony houses, summer shelters should be built. A summer shelter consists of a roof, sides and door covered with wire and with roosts on the inside running from end to end. They provide shelter from storms and predatory animals, and can easily be moved to any desired location.

PULLETS NEED GOOD RATIONS

Fall and early winter production of eggs is the keynote to profitable poultry raising. Since the pullets are practically the only source of eggs at this time, they should be a good growing ration during the summer so they will be well matured and in good condition by October. They should be put into laying pens about the middle of September in order to be accustomed to the new conditions when ready to lay. If there is a tendency for the pullets to begin laying too early, it is well to reduce the amount of protein in the ration. Pullets that commence to lay too early (4 to 5 months of age) are inclined to lay very small eggs; or they may lay a few eggs and then go into a molt.

HENS ARE ENLISTED TO HELP IN GETTING FUND FOR MISSION

The Arcot mission in India, supported by the Reformed Church in America, has evolved an unusual plan for raising a jubilee fund in connection with the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of its organization.

The proposed plan is to induce every Christian family to have a jubilee hen and donate all the income from eggs and chickens to the jubilee fund and later to give the hen and chickens to be sold at auction or otherwise.

These hens are noted by their color, or a rag or a string tied around the hen's foot.

Quackgrass is an undesirable visitor on the farm and should be kept out, but it is usually a waste of time to attack it in wet weather or in spring when the root-stocks are growing. The best plan is to allow it to form a sod and then plow it in mid-summer during hot, dry weather, the U. S. Department of Agriculture says. After plowing the field, harrow it frequently until winter, and plant it the following year to some crop that needs very thorough cultivation.

Detroit Wars On Crystal Gazers

With a half dozen unsolved witch killings on its records, the Detroit police department, with the aid of Harry Blackstone, noted magician, has started a campaign to rid the city of crystal gazers and their like, raiding 20 places and seizing much paraphernalia. In the photo Blackstone is shown, left, questioning a crystal gazer and his assistant, arrested in one of the raids.

How New Waldorf Will Appear

Rising 43 stories in the exclusive section of Park avenue, New York, the new Waldorf-Astoria may be the costliest hotel ever erected. At least the plans call for the expenditure of many millions. Work soon is to begin. There will be 2,200 rooms and a ballroom four stories high.

May Head Michigan

Dr. Alexander Ruthven, dean of administration of the University of Michigan, has been prominently mentioned as successor to Dr. Clarence Cook Little, retiring president of the university. Little resigned under pressure following a stormy administration of four years.

Jarboe has denied the charges.

STATE MAIL POUNDRAGE HEAVY

Poundage reports of mail carried by planes of the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation in Michigan for the fiscal year ending July 17 shows a total of 154,203 pounds, Charles A. Rheinstrom, general traffic manager for T. A. C., has announced.

"The total amount of air mail carried in Michigan alone last year was over four times that carried by air mail planes in Great Britain," Rheinstrom reported. "British mail planes," he continued, "transported only 37,000 pounds last year."

Outside of Detroit the city sending the greatest amount of air mail for the year was Lansing with 19,135 pounds. Other cities in the order of volume of air mail sent follow: Kalamazoo, 12,932; Grand Rapids, 5,667; South Bend, Ind., 5,019; Bay City, 4,958; Muskegon, 4,914; Saginaw, 4,455; Jackson, 4,038; Pontiac, 4,019; Battle Creek, 3,379; Ann Arbor, 2,633; Flint, 1,523, and Dearborn, 490. The poundage carried out of Detroit was 30,365.

Oil Well Tax Mounts

The 2 per cent tax at the mouth of the well on gas and oil produced in Michigan, as fixed by the last legislature, is now yielding upwards of $10,000 a month, M. B. McPherson of the State Tax Commission, made known in announcing that the collections for June amounted to $8,702.37.

Under the law, the tax is collected by the state tax commission, and is turned over to the auditor general, who places two-fifths in the general fund of the state, and returns two-fifths to the township and one-fifth to the county in which the well is located.

He—"Who was that stupid looking guy you were dancing with?"
She—"My brother."

Thousands to See
Grade Crossing 'Accident'

Thousands of motorists who visit the West Michigan Fair at Grand Rapids this year, August 26 to 30, will witness all the thrills and horrors of a grade crossing accident without any of the real dangers. They will see a real locomotive on a real railway track collide with a perfectly genuine motor car filled with living passengers.

The spectacle is known as the Grade Crossing Accident and is being put on by J. C. Connolly of Des Moines, Ia., who originated the attraction and who personally supervises the setting up of the railway in the infield in front of the grandstand, and the handling of the locomotive and motor cars used in this extraordinary spectacle, which is intended to be a lesson on careful driving for motorists as well as spectacular exhibition for everyone.

The grade crossing accident is the climax of a demonstration of safety first methods of driving. It is an exact demonstration of the grade crossing accidents that occur in real life with a real train on tracks built exactly as real railway tracks are built, with all the signs and signals that the real railroad provides for the protection of careless drivers. Everything is exactly the same except the loss of life, for the motorists at the fair will leap to safety, a thing usually impossible in a real accident.

This attraction has been so well received that C. Sophus Johnson and Miss Olive Jones, receivers of the fair, tried to get it last year, but Mr. Connolly's previous engagements made this impossible. This year, however, they have been successful and added to the Great Siegfried, the champion ski jumper; Miss Gloria Hall, the aviatrix who guides a driverless motor car by radio from mher plane 1,000 feet above the earth; the Winter Garden Revue and all the other unusual amusement features that have been provided this year, there is every indication that the West Michigan Fair this year will be the best attended and most successful in the history of the fair association.

New Generation Taking Reins of Auto Industry

Young men are doing big things in the automobile industry today. E. L. Cord, just over 30, has made an amazing success at Auburn. G. M. Williams, another comparative youngster, is holding the reins at Marmon. James A. Bohannon and Don P. Smith, young in years but long in experience, have been made dual managers of Peerless.

Mr. Bohannon, the new Peerless president, is only 33, yet relinquishes the position of vice president of Marmon to take the job. He went to the Marmon Company seven years ago as purchasing agent and shortly became vice president in charge of engineering and production.

Mr. Smith, who is vice president, is 36, and has spent practically his entire business life selling automobiles. After a highly successful career, first as a motor salesman and later as distributor on the Pacific Coast, he became assistant to the president of the Guardian Detroit Company, acting as advisor on automobile matters for the important Guardian group of financial institutions.

BUSINESS LEVEL
ATTAINS HIGHEST POINT IN HISTORY

Business in the United States in 1928 reached the highest level ever attained, continuing the prosperity characteristic of every year since 1921, and reflecting the steadily increasing efficiency of both industry and trade, the Department of Commerce stated August 3 in a detailed review of the year's activities.

The review is contained in the Commerce Yearbook for 1928 just made public and covering the department's studies, statistical and otherwise, into business and industrial activities.

Manufacturing production was the largest ever reached, exceeding that of 1927 by 5 per cent, and that of the depression year, 1921, by 66 per cent, it was pointed out. Of the 12 groups of manufacturing industries distinguished, 9 showed increases in output as compared to 1927, the Yearbook said. Wages paid in factories were the greatest ever reported, with slightly larger earnings per worker, it was stated.

Agricultural production showed a further expansion in 1928, despite the decline in the number of workers on farms, and acreage planted to crops was slightly larger than any other postwar year, it was declared. The weighted index of farm prices averaged for the calendar year 1928 about 6 per cent higher than in 1927, and higher than in any other year since 1920 except 1925.

The general level of commodity prices in 1928 was comparatively steady, though the wholesale price index averaged somewhat that in 1927, it was declared. There was a slight decline in the cost of living index which reflects retail prices, it was said.

The value of sales reported by wholesale dealers in 1928 was about one per cent less than the year before, despite some slight rise in price levels, the publication stated. Sales of department stores, chain stores, and mail-order houses made record totals, partly due to a shift in their favor from other classes of stores for which there are no statistical data, it was explained.

Exports were 5.4 greater in value than in 1927, in spite of the fact that there was almost no change in the prices of the commodities sold abroad, it was said. The excess of imports was greater than in any other year since 1921, amounting to $1,038,000,000.

Financial transactions continued to expand and many new records for volume were established. Check payments by banks increased for the country as a whole by 20 per cent, it was stated, and total resources of American banks increased 5 per cent over 1927.

Building Permits Drop
In 1929 at Grand Rapids

Investments in building operations in Grand Rapids during the first seven months of 1929 amounted to $3,783,580, or $1,735,890 less than during a similar period last year, according to a report by Building Inspector Ralph E. Seeger. Permits issued in July were for a total of $522,265 as compared with $1,128,975 in July, 1928.

PRITCHARD'S WEATHER
465 UNIV. BLDG.
GRAND RAPIDS
MICH. U. S. 6-24-28

Severe rain and wind storms will be in progress at the beginning of the week of Aug. 25 in most parts of Michigan. Electrical storms will be a prominent feature of this storm period. The storms will last over until close to the middle days of the week.

All during the last half of this week we are expecting temperatures will be close to the seasonal normal with the sky generally fair. The one exception to this prediction will be the increasing cloudiness we are expecting to cover many parts of the state close to Saturday.

Just previous to the end of this week temperatures will become much higher. We look for warm weather for the season at this time—readings that will range close to 80 degrees or above in the southern half of the lower peninsula of Michigan.

Farming Adverse in September

The general farm conditions for the greater part of September in Michigan and in the eastern half of the United States, for that matter, does not promise to be as rosy as early crop reports would suggest. The average crops will not prove to be a success from either a harvesting or financial position. This tendency will show out during most all of the fall months, but instead of being a tragedy there will be an inclination towards a quiet readjustment that will benefit all.

Let Huge Contracts

More than $1,500,000 in contracts for work in connection with Detroit's new $20,000,000 water system have been awarded. The largest award was made to W. E. Wood Company, to build the sub-structure of the Springwells filtration plant. The amount of the contract was $1,572,898.

COMPARE the delivered price as well as the list price in considering automobile values. Chevrolet's delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

Less than eight months have elapsed since the first Chevrolet Six was delivered to an owner—and already there are more than a million six-cylinder Chevrolets on the road! And the reasons for this overwhelming success are easy to understand.

Into a price field that had hitherto been occupied exclusively by four-cylinder cars—Chevrolet has introduced a six-cylinder car of amazing quality and value. Not only does it offer the smooth, quiet, velvety performance of a great six-cylinder valve-in-head motor—but, from every standpoint, it is a finer automobile than was ever before thought possible at such low prices! Its beautiful new bodies—which are available in a variety of colors—represent one of Fisher's greatest style triumphs. And its safety and handling ease are so outstanding that it's as sheer delight to sit at the wheel and drive.

You owe it to yourself, as a careful buyer, to see and drive this car. For it gives you every advantage of a fine six-cylinder car in the price range of the four and with economy of better than 20 miles to the gallon! Come in today!

Family Reunion

The second annual Beardsley reunion was held Sunday, Aug. 18 at the old Beardsley homestead. After everyone came they went back to the woods where a bountiful dinner was served. The day was spent with games and races, taking pictures and the old folks talking over old times. There were over 40 present, from Kalamazoo, Mt. Clemens, Bangor, Otsego and Gobles. Officers were elected for the coming year: The next reunion will be held the 3rd Sunday in Aug. 1930, at Base Line Lake. Everyone left at a late hour saying they had a wonderful time and hoping to be with us again next year.

Annual Reunion

A reunion of the Lockman and Stevens families was held Aug. 18, at the old D. C. Lockman homestead, one half mile east of the Johnson schoolhouse. There were about 60 relatives present. The day was spent looking over the old home and grounds and talking over old times. The picnic dinner was spread in the chestnut grove near the house.

O. P. Hudson told of helping D. C. Lockman plant the chestnuts which he brought from New York. It was decided to hold the next gathering at Hudson's landing, Brandywine Lake on the second Sunday of August, 1930. C. E. Lockman is in charge of the arrangements.

HARVARD MEN LEAD IN U. OF M. FACULTY

The University of Michigan's faculty boasts of more men who earned degrees at Harvard than at any other school, with the exception of Michigan itself, according to figures compiled by Dr. Frank E. Robbins, president's assistant.

More than 100 men, starting with those holding the rank of instructor and continuing on through deans of schools and colleges, are listed. They hold a total of 724 bachelor's degrees and 714 degrees earned in graduate work. The University of Michigan conferred 268 of these bachelors' degrees and 348 higher degrees, and Harvard 38 bachelors' degrees and 74 graduate degrees. Eighty-five men reported having taken some work at Harvard.

Other schools ranked as follows, with the bachelors' degrees being listed first and the graduate degrees next: Columbia, 13 and 31; Chicago, 11 and 25; Minnesota, 13 and 10; Illinois, 10 and 16; Wisconsin, 16 and 13. Albion led the long list of colleges, 10 men reporting that they had earned their bachelors' degrees there and one a higher degree.

The One Minute Pulpit

I cried with my whole heart; hear me, O Lord: I will keep Thy statutes. I cried unto Thee; save me, and I shall keep Thy testimonies.—Psalm xxix, 145, 146.

Poems That Live

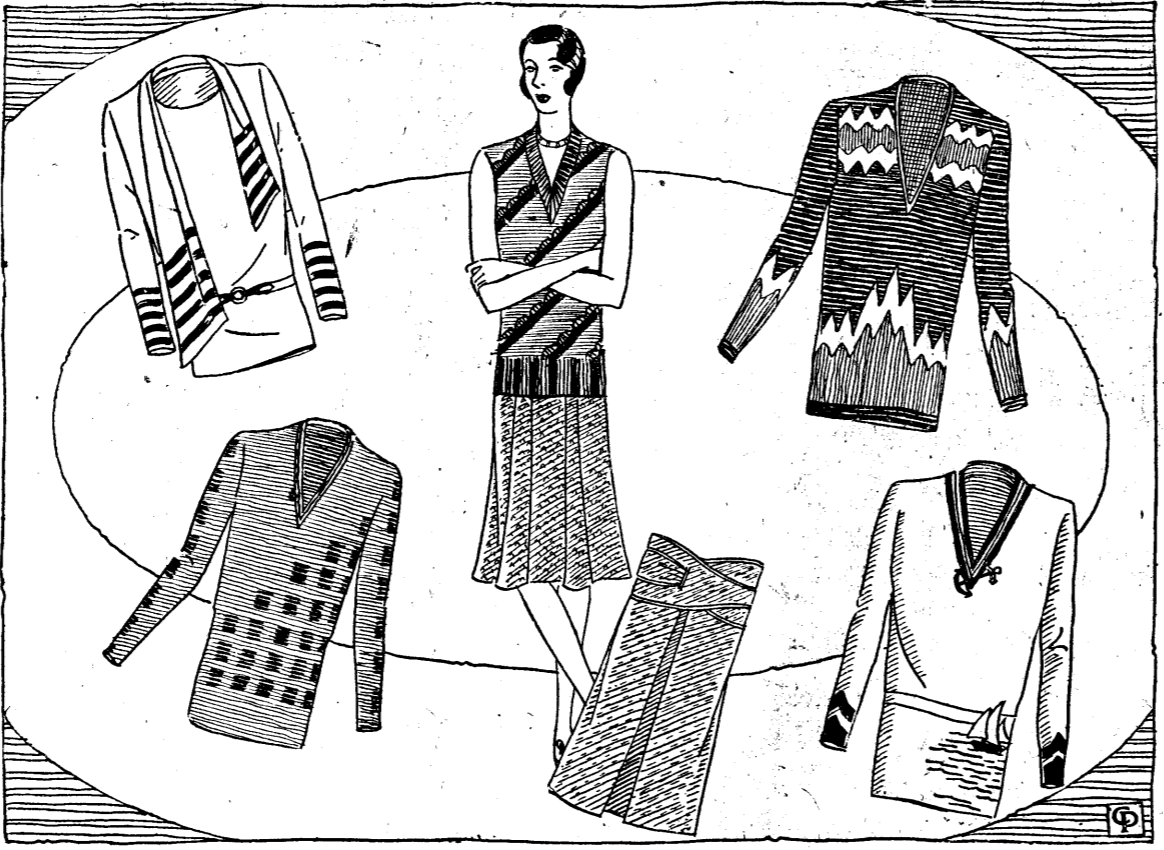

SONG
My silks and fine array,
My smiles and languished air,
By love are driven away;
And mournful lean Despair
Brings me yew to deck my grave:
Such end true lovers have.

His face is fair as heaven
When springing buds unfold:
O why to him wasn't given,
Whose heart is wintry cold?
His breast is Love's all-worshipped tomb,
Where all Love's pilgrims come.

Bring me an ax and spade,
Bring me a winding-sheet;
When I my grave have made,
Let winds and tempest beat:
Then down I'll lie, as cold as clay:
True love doth pass away!

Sweater Has Place On and Off Lines

By LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Expert for Central Press

Golf, tennis and horseback riding are the three active sports that call for decidedly sports cut clothes, unless we include aviation. The golfer or the tennis player may show the flair for the flare in a circular or pleated skirt, but frills, ruffles or jabots have no place on the fairway, on horseback or when swinging a racket.

The sleeveless tennis frock, with its colorful short jacket, and the golf skirt with its jumper or sweater, may be worn with all propriety of the court or links, and both are really quite necessary in the vacation wardrobe, even to those who never swing a golf club or a tennis racket.

But though it does not take to frills, jabots and fancy collars, the sweater has become far removed from its humble ancestor of a few years ago. The sweater at the left, for instance, is of rabbit's hair and silk in an angora effect. The belt and trimming on the scarf and sleeves are of flat crepe in a contrasting color. It is very charming with a skirt of silk crepe with pleats well stitched down at the top.

Red Silk Sweater

motif trim in a contrasting color, which gives an up-in-the-front effect to the waistline, and is repeated at neck and sleeves. In the sweater just below we find the nautical theme explicated. This model is ambitious in that it portrays a sailboat in applique on a silk embroidered sea, and gives a further nautical touch in the anchor finished neckline. The bandings and anchor finished neckline. The band anchor are in red, while the sailboat is white and the sweater blue.

The separate skirt shown is ideal for sportswear with the tuck-in blouse. It is a wrap-around model with the opening arranged to achieve width in the effect of an inverted pleat at the front. The hip yoke has long ends, one of which passes through the other at the front, and both of which are buttoned at the sides slightly to the back on the yoke.

Work Is Started on Adrian Gymnasium

Construction work on the new Adrian college gymnasium has been started and college officials hope to have the basketball floor ready for the first home game on December 20.

Only the main portion of the structure, 115 by 122 feet, will be finished at this time and as funds become available the building will be completed with one for offices and another for an auditorium. The basement will be finished with lockers and showers for use this season. Contractors have already laid out the site.

Don't for Bathers

Swimming is considered one of the most healthful of sports, yet many lives are lost each year because bathers do not always observe the common sense rules of safety. So if you would avert trouble while swimming or bathing observe these safety precautions:

- Don't swim soon after eating, wait at least two hours.
- Don't go in the water when you are overheated.
- Don't dive into water of unknown depth.
- Don't venture into deep water alone.
- Don't cry for help as a joke.
- Don't go bathing if not well.
- Learn how to revive a drowned person—you may save a life some day.

Style Whimsies

A new idea in necklaces consists of as many as 3,000 jeweled beads. The more fashionable necklaces consist of opal beads threaded on silk about 36 inches long, and as many as twenty rows may be used for the complete necklace. Next to opals, small jade beads or others of lapis lazuli are the most fashionable.

A number of the tulle and lace evening frocks of Nicole Groult, Paris, are accompanied by three-quarter length coats of self-fabric and by another of velvet, completing the ensemble.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

SEEKING HAPPINESS

It is interesting to see people seeking happiness. I know dozens of men and women who are constantly on the hunt, like bloodhounds on a cold trail.

Many of them have never picked up anything resembling the true scent. Many of them are suffering from the commonest of all delusions about happiness—that it is to be had by the possession of much money, much property, or a conspicuous place in the crowd.

This, of course, is basically unsound. Anyone whose philosophy of life is so ill-formed as to admit of such hypothesis, is destined to fail in his search.

You see them, worried, strained, eager, annoyed. Just around the corner, they believe, happiness may be found. Just a little more money. Another doubling of income. Another car or house or farm, or factory, and they will have happiness within their grasp.

Well, I can't imagine a more futile program than that. Observation and experience of all the ages is disregarded by those who thus think to find happiness.

I can hear the mental comment of the type of seeker I have been writing about, when he has read thus far. "Good," he says. "Here's another fool who doesn't want to make money. Let him starve and be happy, if that's what he wants! I wish more millions were like him. It would be so much the easier for me to grab the dough.

Wrong again, Mr. Seeker.

I cast no aspersions upon money. I wish I had a great deal more of it than I now have, and I intend to get as much of it as I can get without depriving myself of anything that is more valuable than money.

It would contribute to my happiness to know that my children would be secure in the possession of means to be comfortable after my death.

But do not deceive yourself about "grabbing the dough." That interesting exercise will never make anyone happy. Happiness is an altogether different kind of business than you conceive it to be, if you think it is at all related to the possession of cartloads of coin and parcels of reality.

Just as well try to catch a bluebird by putting salt on his tail as try to capture happiness with dollars.

What is required for happiness? Of course there is no universal formula. But there must be love.

There must be calmness of spirit.

With these two factors in hand, you will not worry about the rest.

Living and Loving

TOO OFTEN WE THINK THAT WE ARE ABUSED INSTEAD OF BLESSED

By Virginia Lee

"It is not modern thought that troubles me," says some one, "but modern want of thought."

Very true. And it's not at all a modern ailment. It's as old as men and women. How often do we excuse ourselves by the words, "I don't think."

Or maybe we do think and we think thoughts that don't help. We think we're abused instead of blessed. We think about the mean traits of those with whom we are associated, not of their good points.

to see that you like him. Good luck to you.

Lonesome is just another little girl whose people won't let her have boy friends. Just be patient, little girl, and they will find that you are growing up and give you more freedom, and try to think how nice it is you have a family who loves you. Some day, when you are a married woman, you will think about the times you were at home with your brothers and sisters, and you will think how happy you were then and what a lot of fun you had. As to the boy friend (?) who tore up your picture, unless you had been very mean to him, that was a very ungentlemanly trick, and I don't blame you for not speaking to him any more.

"The Lonesome Lover": I enjoyed your letter a lot, dear. You should have been careful about the boy friend's sister when his mother was down on that way sometimes with the best regulated people, won't they? I agree with you that mothers usually know best and think you are a very wise child to let people mind their own business. Write me any time.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a girl 18, and two years ago I went with a fellow six years my senior. I liked him for awhile but soon grew tired of going with him, so we qui. He didn't want to. I went with others and he came back and wanted to make up, but as I was going with another fellow I refused to do so.

"Now about two weeks ago I met him and he wants to go with me, but he still goes with another girl. He doesn't want to go steady with me. He says if we would go steady we would only quit again, but I feel differently toward him now. How could I regain his love for me?"

"G. E. O."

Now you think you can't have him you want him, is that it, G. E. O.? The only thing you can do is to go with him when he asks you and try to be so sweet that he will want to go with you alone, if you feel you are treating the other girl fairly by so doing.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT
Broiled Steak
Baked Stuffed Potatoes
Summer Squash, Mashed or Fried
Lettuce and Cabbage Salad
Banana Ice Cream

I would suggest that you cook the squash in salted water in the oven as long as you are using it for the steak and potatoes, then mash it with seasoning. The recipe for frying is given in case you want to use it with this or some other menu.

Today's Recipes
Fried Summer Squash—Yellow and white summer squash are abundant on the market. Do not peel the squash. Cut into lengths an inch and a half thick. Cook in boiling salted water until nearly tender. Drain and dip in flour. Season with salt and pepper. Fry slowly until both sides are a golden brown.

Banana Ice Cream—Procure three pints of heavy whipping cream. Take one quart of this and eight thoroughly mashed bananas and combine. Put the one pint of the cream on to scald. When hot, add one cup or one-half pound of granulated sugar and one cup of chopped walnut meats. Blend the two cream mixtures as soon as the hot cream has cooled. Mix and freeze at once.

Many people have a tendency to tire of the same kind of ice cream over and over, and for a little afternoon or evening collation or a Sunday dinner the banana nut ice cream will provide a delightful change.

A girl of 21 writes me how unhappy she is at home. Her mother continually finds fault with her, while her older sister does as she pleases. She doesn't sign any name to her letter, but she will recognize it as hers, I am sure.

You're of age, so why not leave home for a time and try being on your own if it possibly can be done? Nothing so gives one the proper perspective on home conditions than living among strangers for awhile. Your mother may be able to appreciate you more if she has to do without you for awhile and you may miss the home atmosphere so much you will be less likely to think you are being discriminated against. It's a great pity when a mother allows one child more privileges than another, making one the goat, so to speak. And in these days of independence no girl has to put up with treatment she thinks is cruel. As to the blame, I would not know where to place it without seeing you in your home and observing your actions and those of your mother.

B. P.: According to doctor's weight chart you should weigh 132 pounds, so you are not overweight. In respect to the young man who is to visit you soon, I will give you the advice one young girl I know gave another whose lover did not come to the point: "Get him in the moonlight, old kid, get him in the moonlight." And don't be too cold. Give him a chance

With the Women of Today

By Lillian Campbell

Mrs. Bernice Blackwood, Chicago, will be the keynoter at the convention of the Women's Advertising Clubs of the World to be held in Berlin. She has been chosen to place in nomination for the next president the name of Miss Florence Dart, president of the Philadelphia Women's Advertising club.

Mrs. Blackwood is a former president of the world organization of advertising women. She is secretary of the Advertising Specialty association of Chicago.

While abroad Mrs. Blackwood plans to spend some time in England, France, Germany and the seat of the League of Nations at Geneva, Switzerland. She wants to study the proposed changes in the Gregorian calendar. She states that she has found no real demand on the part of the American public for a thirteen-month calendar, but wants to find out how the leading European peoples feel on the subject.

The Women's Advertising Clubs of the World convention is coincident with that of the International Advertising association.

Members of the Women's Chicago Beautiful association have launched a drive of six months' duration to clean up the city before the 1933 world's fair. The members of the association plan to divide the city into districts, headed by women interested in civic affairs, and ask them to appoint their own subcommittees

Child Marriage Opposed by Women
Opposition to child marriage in India is coming from India's own women leaders, according to Miss Margaret Wilson, who is back in the United States after a number of years in Y. W. C. A. work in India. "Reforms are sweeping the country," Miss Wilson declares. "She realizes that she must have more mature mothers of the race; that as a nation she is weaker because of premature motherhood among her women."

THE QUEEN OF HEARTS

By SEABURY QUINN

"Good evening," Sturdevant greeted, "is Mlle. Sophie at home?"
"The fellow stared at us in bovine noncomprehension."
"I said," repeated Sturdevant, "is Mlle. Sophie at home?" He added a sentence in rumbling gutturals, as unintelligible to me as the gibberish of Chinese laundrymen.
"No," replied that individual, shaking his head negatively, but making no effort to take the card.
"Sturdevant sighed with vexation and thrust his hand into his trousers pocket. There came the clink of metal, and he held out three ten-dollar gold pieces cupped in his palm.
"No," repeated the servant, shaking his head more decisively than before.
"Sturdevant thrust the coins back in his pocket and took a step away from the door. A second later he turned suddenly, seizing me by the shoulder, spinning me half way round, thrusting his foot forward and tripping me at the same time.
"Look out, Loomis!" he called, and none too soon, for the bearded giant had drawn a heavy knife from his sleeve and hurled it at me. I heard the whir of its blade as it flew past my face, and its clatter as it struck harmlessly on the stone path.
"Grab him!" Sturdevant panted, launching himself through the doorway.
"I made a flying tackle at the fellow's legs; a second later the three of us were thrashing about the thickly carpeted hall, striking, gouging, scratching like enraged Tom cats, but uttering never a sound. Some subtle sixth sense seemed to warn me from outcry, and Sturdevant and the burly porter fought in silence as though by mutual understanding.

"There, damn you!" Sturdevant swung his fist to the point of the fellow's jaw, "that settles you."
"It did. The man collapsed like an ox beneath the butcher's mallet, and lay sprawling, appallingly still, on the rich Turkey carpet of the hall.
"Lend me your handkerchief, Loomis," Sturdevant whispered, "we'll just tie this little fellow up in case he gets playful." He bent over the fallen adversary, trussing him up neatly with strips torn from my handkerchief and two of his. "Sorry," I said, "I made a bad break, offering him money; he muttered as he bound the man's wrists behind him. 'These Slavs are suspicious as pawnbrokers by nature, and the sight of that gold must have convinced him of our bad faith. Come on; let's see what he's here.'
"We tiptoed through the wide archway leading to the drawing room. Save for the faint reflection of a street light coming through the window, the place was in perfect darkness. Dimly, we made out several pieces of massive mahogany furniture—a grand piano, its raised cover draped with a heavy silk scarf, a heavily upholstered sofa, a tabouret containing a tray with coffee cups and cigarettes.
"Close behind Sturdevant, I crept into the dining room adjoining. Four wax candles, nearly spent, flickered ambiguously in tall, wrought-silver standards, revealing a table cleared for dessert. Two glasses partly filled with yellow wine, a bowl of hot-house grapes, two Bohemian porcelain dessert plates and a crumpled napkin were on the table. One of the high-straight-backed chairs was moved somewhat back from the table, the other stood several feet away, as though swung back with sudden violence and not yet replaced.
"Sturdevant swept the room with a quick, stock-taking glance, then pointed suddenly to a far corner. I looked where he indicated and saw a heavy, three-paneled screen of black wood, picked out with mother-of-pearl. What did he mean? There was nothing unusual about the screen beyond the fact that it was an exceptionally fine piece of furniture. I looked again, and a shiver of excitement ran through me.
"Glistening faintly, where a vagrant gleam of candle-light found it, was the tip of a shoe—a man's patent leather dress shoe.
"S-s-s-h!" Sturdevant cut off my unspoken question, treading with cat-like softness to the corner where the screen stood. He folded back a panel, stooped and straightened up, the body of a young man in his arms.
"Carefully he bore the young chap to the drawing room, laid him on the sofa and bent his head to his breast. A curt nod announced he had caught the rhythm of the boy's heart beats. Next instant he passed his fingers quickly over the unknown's sleek, brilliant hair.

"Blackjack," he announced laconically. "Lump like a goose egg on his occiput."
"He began massaging the man's wrists swiftly, stopping occasionally to strike him smartly on the cheeks with his open hand. After a minute the unconscious boy's eyelids began to flutter, his lips opened and he uttered a low moan.
"Who did it?" Sturdevant hissed, his white mustache less than an inch from the fellow's ear.
"Don't know—hit me from behind, the blighter—wouldn't fight like a man," the youngster muttered thickly. Then, fully awake, he sat forward. "Here, what's up?" he exclaimed. "Sophie! Sophie, where are you?"
"Sturdevant clapped a hand over the boy's lips. 'Still, you young fool!' he warned. 'I've want another crack on the head? What's your name?'"
"The young man blinked at him. 'What affair's that of yours?' he asked.
"Don't waste time," Sturdevant snapped. 'I'm a government agent, if that'll satisfy you—' he turned back the lapel of his waistcoat pocket, displaying his secret service badge—'now tell me who you are and what you were doing here when they banged you on the head. Make it short, and don't raise your voice.'
"The youth looked from one to the other of us. 'I'm Colin MacCampbell,' he replied, 'and I came here to visit Miss Urbanokoff—Sophie. Last week I asked her to marry me. She put me off; I came for my answer tonight. We'd had dinner, and I think she was going to say yes, when someone—I think it was that damned brute of a butler—hit me an awful bash on the head. That's all I know, except Sophie's gone.'
"Where did you meet Miss Urbanokoff, and how long have you known her?" Sturdevant demanded. "Believe me, I'm not asking from idle curiosity," he hastened to explain, as MacCampbell shot him a look of resentment.
"I met her on the France coming over two months ago," the young man answered. "We were both sailing from Paris. I was scheduled to visit my brother in Manitoba, but—hang it all, man!—I was desperately in love with her, and I've stayed on in New York. I've seen her every chance I had, and I think she got to care for me, too; but lately she's been strange—distant. Half the time she'd refuse me permission to call, and several times she's broken engagements with me. I'd come here by her invitation, and that damned shaggy brute of a butler would tell me she was out."
"Sturdevant heard him in silence, plucking at his neatly trimmed white beard perplexedly.
"Damned if I quite know what we're going to do with you, Mr. Colin MacCampbell," he said. "I suppose we'll have to take you along with us; it won't be safe to leave you wandering around; you're apt to get your head caved in completely if we do."
"Sir Colin MacCampbell," the young man corrected him. "MacCampbell of Dunwoodie."
"Knight or baronet?" Sturdevant asked.
"Baronet."
"Um. And you want to marry Mlle. Sophie?"
"Well, that simplifies matters considerably," Sturdevant commented. "I think you'll have a chance to do some fighting for your princess, young man."
"Princess?" the other echoed. "She's no princess. She's a queen—the Queen of Hearts!"
"Why, so she is," Sturdevant agreed laughingly, "and we're three aces. Aces always did take queers. Eh, Loomis?"
"Right-o," I agreed as we crept through the hall and up the broad stairs.
"As we reached the first landing the hum of a number of voices speaking in concert reached us. By the time we were in the upper hall we perceived the talk was going on in a front room. We stole down the passage, pausing just outside the zone of light shining through an arched doorway.
"Inside the room the occupants were displayed like characters in a play seen through a theater's proscenium arch. Beside a polished table stood the girl Sturdevant and I sought, lovelier, if possible, than her photograph. Slim and straight as a hazel wand she stood in her simple evening frock of white and silver, a single strand of pearls encircling her soft throat. She was older than her pictured image, and lines of trouble, the etchings of war and revolution, showed in the smooth skin of her face. Three men in evening dress faced her across the room.
"But, messieurs," she was saying, "I do not want that I should go back to Goldovia. My people, they would govern themselves from out their own ranks; they have renounced my house as their governors and me as their princess."
"We heard MacCampbell catch his breath sharply, as the significance of the words sank in. Never had it entered his British mind that the girl of his dreams might be a princess of the blood royal.
"Bah!" the one of the men shot back. "The people—bah! They are dogs, to be governed with the lash. What do they know of government—of statecraft?"
"Republics are the dreams of fools, the uplifting of the masses, who exist of right only to serve their betters. Look at this America. This is a republic—a republic of fools. After a triumphant war of conquest what do they do? They renounce the victors' spoils; they disclaim all share in the conquered territory."
"It is the will of God," another of the trio added, "that the people be governed by their divinely appointed rulers."
"But the people themselves are their divinely appointed rulers in a republic," the girl answered. "Rulers exist for their people, not people for their rulers, Vladimir. They have said they want no crown, and I want no crown. I have found freedom and love away from my throne, Vladimir, leave my people to enjoy their freedom and me to enjoy my love."

"Bravo!" whispered MacCampbell in my ear.
"The government totters," replied the man addressed as Vladimir. "The red flame of bolshevism already glows against the horizon. Only the return of the monarchy can save our native land. The people are weak; the monarchy would be strong. You, yourself, have said rulers exist for their people, Highness. Forget this personal love, remember your suffering people and come save them, our princess." As he finished speaking, he and his two companions sank to their knees before her.
"The girl wavered, agony of love denied struggling for mastery over the call of spurious duty in her face. "I think it's time we took a hand," Sturdevant whispered. "There being but three of them and three of us, and our cause being just—" he quoted.
"Right-o! Rath-thur!" Sir Colin agreed enthusiastically, and leaped through the archway into the room.
"Co-leen!" the girl cried, her eyes lighting, then, "O-o-o-h!" Vladimir, springing to his feet, had whipped out a pistol and aimed it at MacCampbell's head.
"Quick as a panther, Sturdevant twisted the ivory handle of his walking stick, jerked it loose from the wood and bared the sword blade concealed within the cane. With the speed of a soldier and the precision of a surgeon he lunged, driving the keen steel through the muscles of his forearm. The pistol clattered to the floor and Sturdevant kicked it into a corner.
"Hands up!" he roared, flinging away his sword cane and yanking out a pair of automatic pistols, seemingly in a single gesture.
"Reach in my hip pockets, Loomis," he directed, "and get out the handcuffs. Lock these birds together. MacCampbell's too busy to be much help."
"Indeed, he was. As I snapped the manacles over the royalist conspirators' wrists, I caught a tail-eye-picture of Sir Colin MacCampbell, Bart., MacCampbell of Dunwoodie—with her Serene Highness, the Princess Sophie of Goldovia that was, clasped in his arms. And the princess was crying.
"Sturdevant cut away Vladimir's coat sleeve and bound up his wound with the real skill of an old campaigner. Then he addressed his prisoners: 'Sorry I can't offer you gentlemen better accommodations than a station house cell tonight,' he apologized. 'Tomorrow morning, bright and early, we'll hunt up a United States commissioner and get you a hearing. Then we can put you up at Ellis Island until your ship sails.'
"Ship?" echoed Vladimir.
"Ship? Yes," Sturdevant answered. "You've been conspiring against a friendly government, you know, so we'll just have you deported to the country of your origin. Several people in the republic of Goldovia will be delighted to welcome you home, I'm sure, Count Vladimir."
"Vladimir's face paled as Sturdevant finished, but he recovered his poise instantly. 'C'est le guerre,' he remarked fatalistically. He bowed politely. 'Adieu, Monsieur.'
"Not this time," Sturdevant answered. "You go first, gentlemen."
"The next evening Sturdevant and I stood in the private office of the Goldovian ambassador.
"Your Excellency," Sturdevant said frigidly, "I have the honor to report that pursuant to instructions from my government I proceeded to New York, located certain conspirators against the peace and government of the Republic of Goldovia, and arrested them. They are now lodged at the government immigration station at Ellis Island, awaiting deportation to Goldovia."
"An' ze woman?" the ambassador asked eagerly. "What of her? Zere can be no peace for my country while Princess Sophie is alive."
"Sturdevant bowed again, and laid a packet of papers on the ambassador's desk.
"Her Serene Highness, the Princess Sophie of Goldovia, is no more," he announced. "She is now Lady Sophie MacCampbell, wife of Captain Sir Colin MacCampbell, Laird of Dunwoodie. These documents—" he spread the formidable, red-sealed papers open before the ambassador's bulging eyes—"are, first, her formal abdication of all right to the Goldovian throne for herself, her heirs and successors, and, second, the certified copy of her marriage to Sir Colin."
"The ambassador's little eyes snapped with fury. 'An' you tell me zis?' he almost shrieked. 'I tell you, we must capture zat woman and shoot her. Zis marriage—bah! It amount to nozing. I weel have it break!'"
"Sturdevant smiled derisively. 'Yes?' he mocked. "Behind that marriage stand the laws of the United States of America and the British Empire. I fear, Mr. Ambassador, that the task of overcoming those obstacles will tax the power even of so mighty a country as the Republic of Goldovia."
"The ambassador gasped.
"I have sir, the honor to wish you a very good evening," said Sturdevant. (The End)

Is Your Alfalfa Field Ready to Be Planted?

With the rush of haying and harvest, we are liable to forget to keep that field free from weeds.

Keep all the weeds down and then when the rain comes, drag lightly and sow your alfalfa seed.

And when you do sow, be sure it is FARM BUREAU SEED that you use. Your work is the same, your lime cost is the same, your taxes are the same, so why take a chance with some seed that is a few pennies per acre cheaper?

All your work and expense will go for nothing if you do not have the BEST of seed.

We have Hydrated Lime—test 166%—and the new low price is only $11 per ton.
