BORED PERLS \- MICHIGAN CORN

The shadow of the darkest cloud in the history of Michigan agriculture is creeping across the state as reports of strong corn blight continue to reach the agricultural center. Every county will be covered by the shadow, -- the shadow of the destruction of next year, of Michigan's best crop of corn.

In the meat and dairy districts this is a problem which A. C. Corbin, director of the Bureau of Agricultural Industry of the Michigan department of agriculture, sees ahead of the crop which may yield 1,000,000,000 bushels of corn. The corn blight is expected to bring a loss of 1,000,000,000 bushels of corn, or $100,000,000, to the state's farms and grain elevators.

The most serious concern is that corn, which constitutes 50 per cent of the total value of all Michigan crops, will be seriously injured by the blight. The state department of agriculture estimates that the blight has injured 75 per cent of the corn crop in the state, and at least 15 per cent of the crop will be lost.

The blight is a disease that has attacked corn for many years, and this is the first time it has appeared in such large quantities. The blight is expected to continue and possibly to spread to other crops.

Poultry

NEWLY DISCOVERED Poultry

Discovered for the first time in Illinois, a new species of poultry from the United States has been found to be a rather common bird. It is a small, brown, sparrow-like creature, which is easily recognizable by its brownish color and its short, stubby tail. The bird is not yet identified, but it is believed to be a new species of pheasant. The bird is expected to become a popular pet, and it is hoped that it will be studied further in the near future.
