LIVESTOCK LOSSES MOUNT THIS YEAR

LIVESTOCK losses in shipments by Michigan farmers and shippers to the Detroit stockyards recently reached a total of 1,527,800 head, the highest number reported in any year, according to the Michigan Livestock Loses Prevention Association.

An analysis of the situation at the receiving and slaughtering stations shows that Michigan shipped 1,527,800 head, 260,000 more than in the previous year, 1,267,800 head, and 360,000 more than in the previous year, 1,167,800 head.

Some of the losses were caused by the severe winter weather conditions. The snow and ice caused many of the livestock shipments to be delayed or stopped altogether.

The Livestock Loses Prevention Association has taken steps to reduce the losses in the future.

New Method of Preserving Fruit is Now Being Tested

Strawberries have been used as a part of the Thanksgiving feast, fresh and canned in a variety of dishes. In general, strawberries have been regarded as a delicacy and not a staple of the average American diet.

However, a new method of preserving strawberries has been developed that could make them a more common and accessible food. The new method involves freezing the strawberries and then packaging them in a plastic bag. This allows the strawberries to be stored for long periods of time without losing their freshness.

The process of freezing the strawberries involves placing them in a freezer and allowing them to freeze slowly. Once frozen, the strawberries are then packaged in airtight plastic bags to prevent them from absorbing moisture and becoming mushy.

This new method of preserving strawberries could have a significant impact on the availability and affordability of this fruit, making it more accessible to consumers.

In conclusion, the new method of preserving strawberries is a promising development that could benefit both consumers and the strawberry industry. With further research and development, this method could help to make strawberries a more common and accessible food for people around the world.

World In Eve's Eye

Philip Steward, British chancellor of the exchequer, in his unorthodox stand against the Owen D. Young recommendations, delivered a strong attack on the British government. He said that the British government was responsible for the problems in the country and that it was time for a change.

The Owen D. Young recommendations were a set of economic policies proposed by the British government in the early 1920s. The recommendations were designed to help the country recover from the economic depression of the 1920s.

However, Steward argued that the recommendations had not worked and that the British government was responsible for the continued problems in the country. He called for a change in government and for a new approach to economic policy.

In conclusion, Steward's attack on the Owen D. Young recommendations was a strong criticism of the British government. He called for a change in government and for a new approach to economic policy that would help the country recover from the economic depression of the 1920s.

Mini Marlin P. (Star) Bear, the newest chimp in residence, is a remarkable animal. She is a 10-year-old chimp from the Bronx Zoo in New York City.

Although Mini Marlin has been well taken care of by the staff, she has never been taught the proper behavior of a chimp. She is a wild animal and needs to be properly cared for to ensure her safety and the safety of others.

The staff at the Bronx Zoo has been working on teaching Mini Marlin proper behavior. They have been trying to teach her to follow a number of rules, such as not to hit people or to take food from others.

Feeding with New Corn

Where there is a shortage of corn, it is dry enough to grind the largest seed corn eaten by American sheep, and the wheat is also very abundant. The wheat is very abundant and can be used in many ways.

This meat should not be fed as a permanent feeding ration, however, but should be used as a supplementary ration. The new corn is very beneficial to the sheep and can be used in many ways. It should be used as a supplement to the regular feed and not as a main part of the diet.

THE GYPSY MOTH

BY JOHN AMES

St. John AMES

Larry Nelson regarded the Armistice as a personal affair. Once twenty thousand men or so had been thrown across a mild winter, the world seemed to be back to normal again. He could come to the side of the field of action, and clench Kaely Field. Billie was not with him. But the gypsy moth was not with him.

The moths had come last summer at the far end of the world. They had come from the plains of Asia to spread their wings. Their cour-
