November 8th marked the closing of the school month for Pine Grove. We were fortunate in having a perfect attendance and no tardiness. We extend a hearty invitation to all in the vicinity to attend our Sunday School at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. We have interesting classes and very good attendance.

Last Wednesday evening, about twenty neighbors came in to surprise Mr. and Mrs. Homer Connery. After a pleasant series at bridge the guests served refreshments and finally departed hoping that the Connerys have a happy time in the Sunny south and return again for more happy home warmings here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Feely plan to spend the winter in Jackson.

We recommend all to see the picture "Gentlemen of the Press" at their earliest convenience. One party who saw it was so impressed with the hardships of the editors that he immediately came in and paid us $10.

The Jolly Pedro Club surprised, Mrs. Clara Burgett November 9 it being her birthday. After a pleasant evening of cards, delicious refreshments were served. After which they all departed wishing Clara many more happy birthdays.

Farm Barn Burns

Early last week Wednesday morning John White awoke to find his barn in flames. He rushed out and loosed two cows but six others with hay, feed and tools were destroyed and the two cows he got out were so badly burned that they died later and it seems miraculous that Mr. White escaped.

This is the third barn besides his house that Mr. White has lost by fire on this farm which leads one to suspect that some enemy is working overtime.

The barn and contents carried a small insurance, probably not enough to pay for cows not to mention the barn and other things and the inconvenience.

If this is the work of an enemy we hope he will be discovered and made to suffer for the crime.

Annual Potato Show

Preparations for the Second Annual Potato Show for Southwestern Michigan are going forward in fine shape. Officers are finding a decided gain in interest shown by communities and exhibitors who participated last year. The Michigan State College will have 120 feet long of space devoted to a study of Certified Seed, Spraying, Storage while the State Department of Agriculture will have a fine demonstration of proper grading and packing, and will conduct a grading contest open to all in which $100.00 in prizes will be awarded. The Armory overhead will be festooned with lacopedium rope sprayed with red ruscus while the tables will be covered with white trimmed with green. Concessions for showing potato machinery, spraying outfits, fertilizers mulch paper, storage plans etc. are going rapidly. The first night is to be "Kalamazoo Night" to which consumers of potatoes and garden growers in the towns and cities are especially invited. As the whole thing is educational nature there is no admission. It costs nothing to get in or out. On this night Kalamazoo county people will ballot for their county Potato Queen. There are thirteen candidates in site and they promise to have a merry time. The Decatur High School Orchestra of 59 pieces will furnish the music. This aggregation were first place in state contests so long they were barred from competing farther in their own class, set a grade higher and won high honors. They went to Iowa last summer and placed third in the national contest. Mrs. Aileen Bennett of Paw Paw is the leader and has built this orchestra up for several years.

W. R. C.

Mrs. Mary Pelong entertained 24 guests at dinner Thursday, Nov. 7. Guests from Allegan were Mrs. Grace Daley, president of C. J. B. S. W. R. C., Mrs. Allaine Lindsley, Mrs. Catherine Pew.

Following dinner Pres. Mary Pelong held the regular meeting of the local W. R. C. at the home of Mrs. Orissa Markillie.

Mrs. Allaine Lindsley, past president of C. J. B. S. W. R. C. acting as inspector. Mrs. Lindsley found the books correctly kept and praised the ladies for their excellent work.

A pleasant social hour followed the meeting.

The Knocker

Though painful, often the song of the knocker is both interesting and amusing. It is more continuous than a movie, more persistent than a bill collector, more painful than having a tooth pulled and as sure as death and taxes.

If a merchant sells out he was no good if a new one comes in, he will either go broke in a short time or all the others will and when neither happens, as is the general case, he joins in the glad refrain "I told you so".

We have a good town in the best of communities, we do our best to keep our people here for we know they are good. We want only the businesses that can succeed and while few get rich, all are able to live as well as they should, pay their bills, and lend a helping hand to the unfortunate, and what more is success?

The people of our community are of the best because they appreciate favors and credits extended in times need. We have heard many in times past say so and so are fine but Arvin trusted when I needed it and I have no cause to change. And we hear it today of other merchants we still have.

While it may not be evident, this community is richer than ever before, the town is a little larger, trade is being attracted from greater distances and more people buy here than ever and for these reasons we feel that conditions warrant every stock and every business that we may attract and every one that cooperates in attracting trade is bound to be an asset instead of a menace to the ones already making that effort.

So in listening to the song enjoy the rhythm but forget the words, hope and work for the best and fret not of what the future may bring.

School Notes

Boys and girls practice is now in full swing. About half our high school student body is interested in athletics. Sure is a fine thing for the community.

An intensive study and analysis of reading is under way in all the grades. Thus we plan to improve the reading in the school. Next Tuesday, Marquis the Famous Mystifier will put on a 2-hour program for the benefit of the P. T. A. No other show of this kind will come to Gobles this year, and at 35c you can't afford to miss it. Next Tuesday at 8:00, the best show of its kind presented in Gobles for many years.

Next Friday afternoon we will have an assembly program at 2:45. Everyone is invited.

EDUCATED BEAR SIDESTEP TRAPS

Paul Houlmont, the state trapper having charge of the work of ridding the Triangle ranch district of the bear that have been killing the calves, was in Crystal Falls last week and he had a story of bear cunning that gives one an idea of the difficulty that the state men encounter in their contest of wits with Mr. Bruin.

It seems that efforts have been made to catch the bear by local workers and with traps that were altogether too small for the purpose of bear trapping. Many times these small traps have been sprung which means that a bear has stumbled into one of them, got his paws severely pinched but managed to free himself. That happening has served to educate the bear and it would appear that their education has been advanced nearly to the high school period in the bear education.

Mr. Houlmont has had the advice and assistance of George Premo, one of the best versed men in wild life in Michigan. Several large traps were secured from the department and were set in the most approved fashion with wooden entrances so arranged that as Mr. and Mrs. Bruin entered the front door he or she would be met with the jaws of the trap ready to catch and hold the bear.

But trappers didn't take into consideration the education that the bear had received. Instead of entering the front door the bear went around to the back door, and when a house without any back door was erected, the bear proceeded to make a back door for himself.

Mr. Houlmont hopes to correct the shortcomings of his trap arrangement so as to fool Mr. Bear and a contest of wits is now on in earnest.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

ANOTHER HIT SKIP DRIVER

CITY STREETS TRAVERSE CITY MEANDER LINE

After learning that the meander line of Grand Traverse bay runs through the middle of Traverse City's principal business street, the Grand Traverse county board of supervisors dispatched a plea to Governor Fred W. Green asking "an immediate settlement of the relicted land problem by legislative enactment or other action which will give to owners of adjacent property title to land to the water's edge."

The board's action was a protest against the governor's intention to have his relicted land commission report at the next regular session of the legislature, more than a year hence. The petition points out that approximately 75 miles of shore line in Grand Traverse county is affected and that owners of hundreds of acres of valuable resort property in the county cannot give title to their land.

Carl R. Pratt of Traverse City produced records to show that the meander line was surveyed in this section of the state about 1839, at the rate of 35 miles a day.

Neahtawanta Point and Old Mission Point, extensive areas on the Grand Traverse bay peninsula that have been resorts for 40 years, are cut off by the meander line, Pratt explained, while in Traverse City it cuts through Front street in the mercantile district several hundred yards from the bay, causing numerous business blocks to be held without ability of the owners to give a legal title.

Another "Pup" Game Refuge Is Announced

A third small game refuge near the Ogemaw game refuge, north of West Branch in the Ogemaw state forest, was authorized by the conservation commission recently.

The new unit contains two square miles or 1,280 acres. The experimental unit is for the protection of all wild life as were the other two, containing 2,650 acres, authorized by the commission in September.

These "pup" refuges are located from one to five miles away from the big "standard" refuge, and are being tried out in the hope that they will help increase the deer in heavily hunted territory faster than would be possible with a single large refuge unit.

If the new scheme seems to work the system of "pup" refuges will no doubt be extended to other "standard" refuges.

Must Obtain Permit To Import Animals

The importation into Michigan of game birds, game and fur bearing animals now requires a permit from the department of conservation. There is no charge for the permits.

Under the new law birds or animals imported without permit are subject to confiscation and the individual responsible for the introductions are subject to fines.

The department of conservation emphasizes there is no intention to interfere with reasonable importations, but it hopes to avoid the introduction of serious pests and to prevent the spread of new wild animal diseases into Michigan.

Asks Radio Levy For Grand Rapids

An installation fee of $2 would be exacted by the city for every radio set up in Grand Rapids if a proposed ordinance drafted by City Attorney Ganson Taggart to eliminate radio interference is adopted. It is estimated there will be about 4,000 installations annually. One hundred firms here will be compelled to pay an annual fee of $10. The income, it is estimated, would be sufficient to locate and remedy interference and to make necessary inspections of aerials, grounds, lightning arresters and power socket installation.

Beet Factories Start

Mt. Clemens Sugar Company commenced work on Oct. 21 on its 1929 sugar beet season with 275 men on the payroll. More than 110,000,000 pounds of beets will be handled. The season is expected to continue until Jan. 5. Beets are being shipped at the rate of 40 carloads a day from the southern part of Michigan, although 15,000 tons are expected from Canada.

Operations were started on Oct. 19 at the Caro plant of the Michigan Sugar Company, as the plant entered its thirty-first successive season. About 5,500 acres will be harvested from the adjoining territory in addition to those which will be received from territories in which sugar beet factories are idle this season.

STATE SELECTS HOSPITAL SITE NEAR ANN ARBOR

Construction of a new state hospital for insane, six miles southeast of Ann Arbor, will be started within a few weeks, Gov. Fred W. Green announced after the administrative board had approved the site selected by a special committee. The tract consists of 1,200 acres and will cost $179,400.

The chief executive said ground will be broken for the institution as soon as plans and specifications have been completed. He declared work will continue throughout the winter, if weather permits.

In Washtenaw County More than a third of the $24,000,000 appropriation made by the last legislature for new buildings and rehabilitation of old is to be used for the new hospital if present plans are unchanged. The lawmakers made $1,500,000 available for use on the institution this year and $2,000,000 additional next year. Another $5,000,000 has been appropriated for the following two years but this sum may be cut or increased by the next legislature.

As previously announced, the site is in York and Pittsfield townships of Washtenaw county. It comprises a number of farms close to US-23 and two of the several farm houses as well as a number of barns can be utilized. "Through our efforts and those of the budget director," the committee reported, "the original quoted price of $189 an acre has been whittled to $149.50, which in our judgment is reasonable and far below figures at which most land in that section is held."

In search for a site the committee members said they visited more than 20 recommended locations, ranging in price from $91 an acre to $1,000. The decision to select the Washtenaw county tract finally was reached unanimously, although for a while the two members of the special body could not agree.

The new hospital is to be erected because of the inability of the Pontiac institution to serve properly the metropolitan district. This hospital has been congested for years and at least 600 persons who have been held insane by the courts are now at liberty in that section.

Harry W. Musselwhite and W. F. Gallagher, members of the state hospital commission, made up the special committee.

Lansing Freight Increases

Lansing's freight volume for the first nine months of the year greatly exceeds that for the same period in 1928, according to figures disclosed by Charles T. Sherman, traffic commissioner of the chamber of commerce. A total of 1,534,010 tons was recorded for the three-quarter period of 1929, while the comparable period of 1928 recorded 1,296,960 tons. Both incoming and outgoing shipments are included. The number of cars used in 1929 was also larger than in 1928, the figures being 77,802 and 62,337.

State Motorists Pay $41,000,000 for Roads

Michigan's greatest highway year, both in point of finance and amount of construction completed, has come to a close. Frank D. Fitzgerald, business manager for the highway department, estimates that all records for mileage completed, revenue collected, and amounts paid to counties have been shattered. He fixes collections from motor vehicle owners, in gasoline, weight and other taxes, in excess of $41,000,000. This would compare with net receipts in 1928 of approximately $38,800,000. Completed mileage of paved highways will reach close to the 400 mark as compared with 348 miles last year, he said.

Counties have already been paid the largest amount prior to final settlement after the first of the year ever released by the state. They have received $6,500,000. It is estimated the weight tax will reach $21,000,000, perhaps more, which would entitle the counties to about $4,000,000 more. Final payments cannot be made until after the first of the year, as the apportionment is upon a basis of revenues from counties.

In 1928 net receipts from the weight tax, license transfers and so forth, was $20,066,647, and from the gasoline tax $17,547,104. Thus far this year the gasoline levy has yielded $17,202,351, and there are three months to go, indicating a total of over $20,000,000 for the year. The weight tax revenues have reached a point where $21,000,000 or more seems certain.

Resort Body Offers to Aid Traverse Festival

An offer of the Michigan Tourist & Resort Association to aid the Michigan cherry festival, Traverse City's great summer event, next year by making more money available, was conveyed to the county board of supervisors by Frank Blakely, field secretary of the association.

The tourist association, he said, desires its appropriation from the supervisors increased from $1,000 to $1,500. If this is done, the association will be given $500 more from the state advertising funds, under the act of the 1929 legislature providing that the advertising expenditures of the tourist association will be matched dollar for dollar by the state. This $500, Blakely said, would be turned back to Grand Traverse county to aid in advertising the cherry festival.

Community Chest Plan Likely to Be Adopted in Holland

Holland may follow the lead of other Michigan cities in the adoption of a community chest for financing its charities. The movement has been placed in the hands of a committee and is said to meet with its approval after a careful study of the field.

The committee will advocate its viewpoint that considerable time and expense will be saved by conducting one campaign in place of numerous annual drives.

Emery Is Selected For Officers' Board

Lieut. Col. John G. Emery, former national commander of the American Legion, has received appointment from Major General Frank Parker, commander of the sixth corps area, which comprises Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan, to serve upon a board of reserve officers to advise the corps area commander regarding the administration of reserve officers and to recommend the separation from the service of any officers no longer in a position to be effective. The board probably will hold its sessions in Chicago.

OLIVET BUYS LAND FOR PUBLIC PARK

An eight-acre tract of land adjacent to Brook Kedron in Olivet's downtown section, has been purchased by the village for a public park. This land formerly was covered by the mill pond, but since the laying of the Indian creek drain and dredging of the stream the land on either side has grown into an unsightly waste.

Some weeks ago the village council caused a petition to be circulated to learn the sentiment of the taxpayers. A majority of the residents were in favor of the project and the purchase was made.

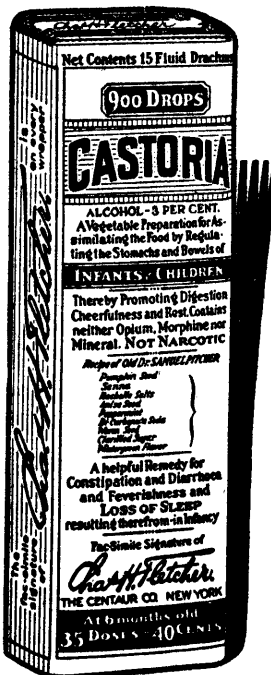

Work has been started to clear up the land in preparation for a skating rink.

To Identify Genuine Aspirin
THE increasing use of Bayer Aspirin every year is proof that it has no ill effects. It is the accepted antidote for pain. It always helps; it never harms. Quick relief when you've a headache, or cold, or are suffering from neuralgia or neuritis. Rheumatic pains yield, too, if you'll only give these tablets a chance. But you want genuine Aspirin, so look for the Bayer Cross on every tablet. The box always bears the name Bayer and the word genuine printed in red.

When BABIES are upset

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhoea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

Storm Damage Runs to Millions

Property damage at Chicago and along the Indiana and Wisconsin shores of Lake Michigan is estimated in the millions, following a storm that whipped the Great Lakes, taking a heavy toll of life. Photos show some of the damage caused at Long Beach, Ind., where the rampant waters of Lake Michigan ruined many resort homes.

Mother Wins Fight

The steadfast battle waged for nearly two years by Mrs. Josephine Kelly, above, mother of Leo Pat Kelly, killer of Mrs. Myrtle Mellus, Los Angeles society woman, at Los Angeles, in one of the west's most celebrated murder cases, has been crowned with success in the final decision of the supreme court overruling the decision of a judge that Kelly must hang for first degree murder. The court, instead, reduced the crime to manslaughter and sentenced Kelly to from one to ten years in prison.

FAST GROWING PIGS PRODUCE BEST PORK

Tests at the Michigan experiment station and similar stations in 11 other states in co-operation with the United States department of agriculture indicate the more rapidly a pig gains in weight the firmer is the quality of the pork.

The experiments have been in progress for 10 years. The results indicate that variations in firmness of pork are mainly due to feeds. Some feeds produce an oily pork, some a very soft pork and others a product that is satisfactorily firm. Consumers demand a firm pork.

Results of the experiments at the 12 state stations are summarized as follows:

1. Pigs with initial weights of 100 pounds or more and gaining at least one and one-third pounds daily on a mixture of ground corn (9 parts or 12 parts) and ground soybeans (1 part) self-fed, free choice with mineral mixture in dry lot, through a period of approximately nine weeks or longer, have produced firm carcasses in the majority of cases.
2. Pigs with initial weights of 100 pounds or less and gaining a maximum of one pound daily on a mixture of ground corn (9 parts or 12 parts) and ground soybeans (1 part) self-fed, free choice, with mineral mixture in dry lot, through a period of 15 weeks or less, have produced soft carcasses in the majority of cases.
3. Pigs with initial weights ranging from approximately 40 to approximately 70 pounds fed raw soybeans with corn and minerals in comparison with cooked soybeans with corn and minerals, both rations in dry lot, have produced carcasses of approximately the same degree of firmness at comparable finished weights.
4. Pigs with initial weights of approximately 50 pounds gaining a maximum of 50 pounds on rations of rice polish or rice bran with tannage and minerals during an eight-week feeding period followed by a gain of at least 70 pounds on brewers' rice with tannage and minerals during a period of eight weeks or more have produced firm carcasses in the usual cases.
5. Pigs fed low-fat rations varying widely in protein content, with dried blood the principal source of protein, have produced carcasses which were strikingly uniform in composition and firmness of fat. All rations were composed of hominy, dried blood, alfalfa meal and minerals.
6. Experiments have shown that when corn oil, peanut oil and soybean oil are present in the ration, either as naturally contained or as added, they have a softening effect on the body fat which increases with increase in the oil content of the ration. Cottonseed oil, on the other hand, has shown a distinct hardening effect when added to extent of 4 per cent of the mixture to basal rations of corn or hominy with supplements. When the amount of cottonseed oil is increased to 8 and 12 per cent respectively, a progressive decrease in firmness results. The 8 per cent addition of cottonseed oil produced hard or medium hard carcasses and the 12 per cent addition medium-soft or soft carcasses, as compared to hard carcasses on the 4 per cent addition.

Hogs and Cows Do Better on Liberal Quantities of Water

Good feeders have long recognized the value of liberal quantities of water to all classes of livestock. Hogs "do better" and are more thrifty, and cows give more milk when they drink freely. One justification of the old slopping method of feeding hogs was the fact that it encouraged them to drink great amounts of water.

Experiment station tests and farm experience have established beyond question the value of warm water for stock during winter weather. In one test with fall pigs, the use of automatic heated waterers saved $1.00 per pig in feeding costs. A cow producing five gallons of milk a day will drink about 20 gallons of water. If she is compelled to drink that amount of ice water, much of her energy is required to heat it to body temperature, and her production suffers.

Tank heaters and automatic waterers help solve the problem of warm water in winter. Some of the automatic waterers can be used to heat water in cold weather and to keep it cool in summer.

Some Pointers About Hog Flu

Good hygiene is the treatment to apply for hog "flu," says the bureau of animal industry, U. S. department of agriculture. This disease, sometimes called infectious bronchitis, is especially widespread in sections where hogs are raised in large numbers. Swine affected with flu should be put in warm, clean, well-bedded quarters with plenty of fresh air and given plenty of fresh drinking water. Little or no feed should be given for 24 hours. Thrifty, growing hogs seem to be more susceptible than the unthrifty ones, and the disease attacks a large portion of the herd suddenly. Spasmodic breathing, or thumps, and complete loss of appetite are the first symptoms. The cause of hog flu is unknown.

Powell, McNitt on Tuber Show Card

Herbert E. Powell, state commissioner of agriculture, and State Senator Earl McNitt of Cadillac are to be the principal speakers at the third annual West Michigan Potato and Apple show at Big Rapids Nov. 20-22, County Agent E. E. Twing, secretary-treasurer of the association, announced.

Tentative plans call for an opening day program consisting of a band concert by the Big Rapids High school band, address of welcome by Mayor Dan W. Rowe of Big Rapids, with a response by J. Frank Morford of Big Rapids, president of the association.

The R. E. Olds community singing contest is scheduled under the supervision of R. W. Tenny director of short courses at Michigan State college. E. S. Compsor, a prominent farmer of this vicinity, will preside. County Agent Twing is to preside at the first afternoon meeting and the program includes a concert by the Ferris Institute Girls Glee club and addresses by George Harrison of Manton; P. G. Lundin, assistant state boys' and girls' club leader at Michigan State college, and State Commissioner of Agriculture Herbert E. Powell.

The second morning's meeting is to be presided over by Ralph Beibeshemer, Wexford county agent. Prof. H. C. Moore of the certified seed inspection service of Michigan State college will discuss the future of the certified seed industry. The scope and possibilities of a national potato council will be the subject of a talk by F. B. Hibst, manager of the Michigan Potato Growers exchange at Cadillac.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Rainbow quartet will be a feature of the second afternoon program. County Agent H. L. Barnum of Missaukee county will preside. Senator McNitt will explain the McNitt potato grading amendment and its influence on Michigan's potato crop. W. F. Callander, chairman of the crop reporting board of the United States department of agriculture, will discuss the benefits of the crop reports.

The growers' banquet will be held Thursday evening. The principal address will be given by George Farrell, chief of the United States department of agriculture's extension work in the northwest. Farrell's topic is "The Future for Agriculture."

A West Lincoln, prominent Mecosta county orchardist, will preside over the apple program Friday morning, the closing day. Don Hootman, Michigan State college extension horticulturist, will give an illustrated lecture on "Busy Bees Bring Bulging Baskets."

New Product Enters Michigan Hort Show

Products of Michigan orchards, gardens and apiaries will have to move over and make room for a new entrant at the twenty-first annual state horticultural show, November 15, 16, 17, when all species of nuts native to the state will compete for prizes for the first time.

The show will be held in demonstration hall and the two main rooms will be used to give space to entries of fruit, flowers, vegetables, honey and nuts.

Two contests, vegetable judging and identification and judging of apples by Smith-Hughes students will be conducted during the show. An educational exhibit prepared by the state department of agriculture will be on display.

Students in the horticultural department at Michigan State college are in charge of the local arrangements for the show. H. E. Chickering, Belding; M. J. Backofen, Battle Creek, and G. H. Poesch, Monroe, are the officers of the students' horticultural club.

Committee chairmen for the show are L. A. Zillman, South Haven; R. R. Toles, Romeo; W. J. Woodman, Paw Paw; H. E. Chickering, Belding, and F. E. Dorman, Cedar Springs.

Cow in Bancroft Wins Gold Medal for High Production

A Gold Medal record for high production has recently been completed by the purebred Jersey cow, Majesty's Dagarda Blue Belle 595,429, in which she yielded 643.80 pounds of butterfat and 12,138 pounds of milk in 300 days, with calf. Her milk averaged 5.31 per cent butterfat for the test, and her total production is equivalent to 804 pounds of butter and 5,643 quarts of milk. Blue Belle was started on this test when she was 5 years and 7 months of age and yielded more than 59 pounds of butterfat per month the first eight months of the 10. In her best month her production of butterfat was 81.5 pounds.

Blue Belle has proved to be an unusual cow, for in less than a year she has presented her owner with two calves, qualified for a Gold Medal awarded by the American Jersey Cattle club, and when shown at the West Michigan Parish show in August, 1929, took the senior and grand championship honors. This is quite an honor for a cow that had just qualified for a Gold Medal.

This excellent producer is owned and was tested by R. D. Bancroft of Alto, Mich. Mr. Bancroft's purebred Jersey herd has been making some fine butterfat records for some time. At present he has four cows on official production tests.

Poultry

TWELVE-HOUR DAY FOR HENS

We are not starting an argument for either union or non-union hens but just a request to their owners so that the hens will have a chance to earn their way in the best manner possible.

Egg production is the backbone of the poultry business. There are but few farmers that would keep many hens if the only returns were from birds sold for meat.

Winter eggs are the ones that bring the highest prices. They are the hardest ones to secure for the cold weather and the short days encourage hens to eat only sufficient feed to maintain their bodies without exerting themselves to the point of producing eggs to help pay the expenses. That is one reason for asking for the twelve-hour day for hens.

The use of lights in the poultry house is the only method for increasing the winter days so that they can be stretched to the twelve-hour limit. Experience has shown that maximum egg production can not be secured when the hens have to sit on the roost for a longer time than twelve hours without having a chance to fill up. On the other hand, if lights are used to make the day much longer than twelve hours and the nights much shorter, the hens are apt to "go to pieces" from overwork.

In using lights in the poultry house it is well to start their use when the days begin to shorten so that there is not twelve hours of normal light. Most people prefer to use morning lights, rather than evening, as the scratch grain may be put in the litter in the evening and the lights turned on with some type of a mechanical arrangement. If one method is started, it should be continued through the season so that the birds will be given regular attention.

Pullets should be well matured and up to weight when the lights are started. If the lights are kept on for too many hours, there may be a tendency to force production to such an extent that the birds will become underweight and then go into a partial molt. It is always well to be satisfied with the results that can be obtained from a twelve or thirteen hour day, rather than to push the pullets too fast.

DON'T OVERLOOK GREEN STUFF

In the fall and winter, when we can no longer go to the garden and secure nice crisp radishes, you probably remember how good it seems to bite off a big piece of cabbage stalk.

Hens are a good deal like us in their desire for something that is green and succulent.

"Green stuff" not only tastes good but it is good for the system, whether it be bird or owner. It keeps the digestive tract operating on a regular schedule and enables us to make better use of our other food. The food nutrients are readily digestible so that it supplements the remainder of the ration.

There are two types of succulent feed that are generally available for chickens. Some people meet at least a part of this need by storing cabbage and root crops. These are chopped up and fed to the hens and pullets. Other people meet the need by sprouting oats.

Oat sprouters may be constructed or good ones may be purchased at reasonable rates. Some people prefer oats that have just nicely started to sprout rather than those with sprouts of considerable length. The latter, which are usually called germinated oats, may be more easily prepared than sprouting oats as they take less room.

Where no better equipment is available, fairly good results may be obtained by using several candy buckets. Oats may be soaked in one bucket overnight, then drained the following morning and set to one side until evening, when another batch is started. At that time the oats in the first bucket are emptied into another pail. Moving them helps to give them air and the stirring insures that they are all getting uniform treatment and heat. This method may be continued until a constant supply is available.

CINDERS FOR CHICKEN YARD

When they are available, the use of cinders in a small yard adjoining the poultry is the best possible floor for an outside winter sun parlor. If a layer of six or eight inches of cinders can be placed in a small protected yard, it will encourage the hens to loaf outside during cold but sunny weather. Such space should be protected by a windbreak. If the cinders can be placed south of the poultry house and wings of lumber, corn fodder or other windbreak material be extended a few feet south at each end of the house, an almost ideal winter sun parlor is provided.

Cinders are especially valuable for this use because they absorb heat readily from the sunshine and cause any snow or ice to melt much more quickly than on soil, lumber or concrete. They also are warm to the touch, which encourages the hens to remain outside when a concrete or soil floor sends them back into the house.

Money Made by Indians

Included in a collection of coins put on display by a bank in New York are specimens of the only two known issues of paper money made by American Indians. One of these, a note of a bank operated by the Arapaho Indians, is said to be the only known note of the only known Indian bank. The other, a dollar bill, issued by the Cherokee nation in 1862, is the only known specimen of the sole issue of money by American Indians.—Detroit News.

Bathing in Japan

An interesting commentary on the personal cleanliness which prevails in Japan is found in an apology from a native to a visitor because of what he feared would seem personal untidiness. The apology, translated, was as follows: "You see in the summer time we are too busy to bathe more than twice a day." The visitor asked: "How often do you bathe in winter?" The reply came with a typical Japanese smile. "Four or five times daily."

Causes of Indigestion

Acute indigestion is caused by eating decomposed canned food or tainted meats, food that is hard to digest, eating too rapidly and not chewing the food properly, or excessive indulgence in spirituous liquors. Swallowing liquids which are either too hot or too cold and overeating, also cause the trouble. Persons most liable to acute indigestion are those who live in bad hygienic surroundings, those who are subject to gout or rheumatism, or those who have chronic indigestion.

Really Drunken Animals

It is now an established fact that a good deal of drunkenness exists in the animal world, among the chief offenders being the bees. Lombroso has asserted that intoxicants were the cause of crime among many animals, and has cited instances of the sheep and goats of Abyssinia, which go out on regular sprees, eating (to them) the intoxicating beans of the coffee plant, and thoroughly enjoying the condition they find themselves in!

True to Form

An old actor-manager died, or at least his relatives thought he had died, and arrangements were made for the funeral.

On the appointed day one of his old colleagues arrived to pay his last respects, but to his astonishment, the would-be mourner was informed that "deceased" had come to life after a period of coma.

"Just like Bill," said the visitor; "he was always a terror for rehearsals."

Lama's Life Secluded

"The Great Immortal White Lama" of Mongolia is comparable to the Dalai Lama, the most important living Buddha on earth. In him, it is claimed, there has entered a larger portion of the Buddha than any other. Guarded by 10,000 monks, the Dalai Lama lives in utter seclusion in a monastery towering to the sky. Upon his death the priests cut a hole in the top of his head so that the divine spirit can escape into another body.

Test of Her Character

By ADELAIDE D. HUFF

(Copyright.)

JUST to think," Constance Mason whispered in Paul's ear, "just to think that six weeks ago we had never even seen each other, and now

Paul Forestor's arm tightened around the girl and he kissed her soft brown hair gently.

"It was the magic of the sea," he said, "and we were both in holiday mood. When people go vacationing

"Aren't you glad?" asked Constance, looking up quickly and trying to scan his features in the soft moonlight. "Don't you believe you'd have loved me wherever you had met me? Did it take the sea and holiday?"

"Hush, dear," he said almost irritably.

For the twentieth time in their short acquaintance Constance wished that she did not love him. He was so moody and so difficult to understand and always he seemed to be afraid of love, suspicious of her sincerity or something. What was it? she wondered, uneasily.

"Do you really love me?" he asked after a moment. "Would you stick to me through thick and thin—no matter what you heard about me?"

"Forever," the girl answered solemnly, but Forestor continued:

"What would you advise a man to do who had married the wrong woman?"

"You—married" she exclaimed, her voice breaking on a sob, as she wrenched herself away from him.

"Constance, don't," he pleaded, catching her by the wrist. "You must love me. Suppose the man had never heard that woman. What then?"

"Any children?" she asked after a moment in a tone quite devoid of emotion.

"One," he answered, dully.

"I'd tell him to go back and do his duty; if there had been no child I should have said the same thing, but since there is I say it with ten times the emphasis. Goodby, Paul. Let me go, please."

She freed herself and ran swiftly into the house, slamming the door behind her.

Late that night the doorbell rang and a messenger brought a special delivery from Forestor.

"Take it away. I don't want to see it," she told her astonished mother.

"Why, Constance, what's happened?" Mrs. Mason exclaimed in surprise.

"I thought you and Paul were out somewhere and now here I find you—"

"If you love me, mother, do go away," the girl pleaded, her voice breaking.

"I will if you'll promise to read that letter," she said.

With a jerk of impatience Constance took the envelope in her hands and ripped it open as Mrs. Mason quietly left the room. Only her sense of honor made the girl unfold the pages and glance at them.

"My own precious girl" (it began)

"It was a horrible test, but I had to do it, to satisfy myself that you were really true and splendid. But Constance, I am not married and never have been. It was my fool, idiotic way of testing your character. I've been caught once, and I've been afraid of everyone since then.

"When I was twenty-five I met a girl in the Adirondacks whom I loved desperately and it was not until after we were engaged that she told me that she was married and had a husband and child in New York city. She wanted to put them aside like tossing off an old dress, but I knew only too well that later she would be willing to shed me in the same light-hearted fashion.

"After that I concluded that all girls were alike. Then when I met you some devil made me test you in the way I did. But Constance, you came up to the mark. I adore you more than I ever did and now if I can only win you back I shall have no fear of losing you for I know how truly fine you are. All my doubts died when you sent me packing.

"Won't you let me come back? If I have been cruel, forgive me. You don't know the years I've suffered and brooded over this thing and I'll spend a lifetime making it up to you. I could be so happy with you now. I don't think I shall ever be the same person again now I've found a girl I can trust. Whatever you do to me I shall always love you. PAUL.

"P. S.—I shall be in the swing on your porch at eight o'clock tomorrow evening. If you don't want to see me I have only myself to blame, but if you should have enough mercy you'll find a new man awaiting you."

When Constance had finished reading the letter her emotions went into reverse and she danced around the room like a young lunatic. But it was a rather subdued Constance who met Paul the next evening.

"If you ever try a stunt like that again," she warned him, but he was too irresistibly joyful to listen to her.

"I was certain I'd lost you," he said, as he held her in his arms.

"You came terribly near it," Constance returned soberly. "If I hadn't loved—"

But she got no further, for with bowed head Paul sealed her words with a kiss and all the misery of the previous evening fled away on the wings of love.

Love-Making Added to

Arts Lost to Mankind

"Love-making is fast becoming a lost art. It is being practiced with about as much enthusiasm as a hungry man pounces upon a charlotte russe; with as much finesse as a butcher carves a steak," says Paul Mirand, author.

"Love, the sublime passion, the most intense, absorbing and tender of all the emotions is, as a result, in danger of dying a slow, reluctant death."

"It is a great tragedy, but we must face it. We have neither the time nor the place for love-making. Love-making requires leisure and an appropriate setting, and in this modern day we have neither. It is true that love—a fundamental emotion of mankind—can never exactly be done to death. Men and women will always fall in—and out—of love; but it is regrettable that love, so divine, and love-making, so delightful, should become such negligible quantities in our daily lives.

"Love-making once used to be a great art—one which was conducted with artistry, talent, skill and finesse. Today not only men, but women also, are too busy making money to take time to make love."

Thrifty Music Lovers

"Paid" for Their Seats

When Mme. Nellie Melba once was on tour of Australia, some of the leading citizens in a little town she visited decided there was no reason why they should pay to hear her sing, says an article in London Tit-Bits. And so, dressed in their best, they walked to the hall, then slipped around to the side of the building, where they found a ladder leading up to the roof of the hall.

Up they climbed, and placed themselves around an open skylight, through which they heard the concert perfectly. While it was in progress the caretaker remembered he had left the ladder out, so he put it away in a shed. After the concert the party on the roof discovered that their "exit" had disappeared. There was a 25-foot drop, and none of them, in their Sunday best, cared to risk it. So they were forced to sit on the roof in a biting wind, until about 4:00 a. m. they attracted the attention of a policeman, who rescued them.

The Choo-Choo Desire

In the London Saturday Review Mr. Sterndale Bennett records this interesting human phenomenon:

"I have known at least two great scholars (one an Aristotelian, the other a constitutional historian) who would race for railway bridges, to see the trains pass underneath and arrive deliberately early at a terminus (when making a journey), so that they might gaze in admiration at the engine and even proudly mount the footplate and talk with the driver."

We have felt that way ourselves. Small boys who wish to grow up and become locomotive engineers are at last completely justified.—New York Post.

Insulted Again

The two artists met each other at the varnishing day exhibition.

They discussed art together and were unanimous in blaming the judges for not having selected their immortal works to be hung on the walls.

"Well, I can't grumble. I'm not doing so badly," remarked one of the pair at last.

"How's that?" asked the other. "Got a commission?"

"Yes, from a millionaire. He wants his children painted badly."

"Oh," remarked his companion, "then I should say that you're the very man for the job."

Looked Like It

The car was unusually crowded, and an inoffensive-looking little man accidentally stepped upon another's toe.

"You clumsy fool!" roared the injured man, clapping his foot and massaging it very gently. "You might have broken my instep."

An abject apology failed to appease him in the slightest.

"Do you think my feet were made for an idiot to walk on?" he demanded.

"It almost seems as if they were," was the quiet rejoinder.—London Answers.

Ants Aid Prospectors

One way of prospecting in New Mexico is by examining the character of the anthills encountered in the mountain and their vicinity. Any mineral content of the land is likely to be revealed by the piles of soil brought to the surface by the ants, which often reach rather considerable depths in with explorations under the surface. An examination of these pyramids will reveal the character of the material to be found immediately below and in this manner finds of great value have been made.

Speed of Meteorites

The fact that more meteorites are seen in the afternoon and evening than in the morning hours shows that their velocities must be, in general, greater than that of the earth, otherwise they would not overtake the earth in such great numbers. There is reason to believe, says Nature Magazine, that meteorites are different in their origin from shooting stars, that they are not true members of our solar system but are drawn into it from interstellar space by the attraction of the sun.

Name "Peony" Traced to Legend of Mythology

In the days of the Greek gods and goddesses, the peony first came to the world's attention. Leto, Apollo's mother, was the one to introduce it. Apollo was known as the god of healing and his son, Aesculapius, was the god of medicine.

It seems that a pupil of Aesculapius named Paeon was the physician of the gods, and to him Leto first gave the plant which he employed to cure Pluto of a wound received at the hands of Hercules during the Trojan war.

The fact that his pupil could surpass him in effecting such a cure made Aesculapius angry, with the result he attempted to kill Paeon, but Pluto, indebted to Paeon for his own life, rescued the physician of Mount Olympus from death by changing him into the plant that had saved his life. Until this day that plant bears Paeon's name and is known to us as the peony.

The history of the peony in China and Japan is of a sentimental nature. Fittingly enough, the words "Sho Yo," meaning "Most Beautiful," were applied to the herbaceous peony, while the tree peony held sway as the "King of Flowers."—Kansas City Star.

Only Dame Nature Can Freshen Mind and Body

"The earth is the great reservoir of physical forces, and whilst no scientist has yet been able to discover how intimate or how perfect is the connection between the mental and the physical, there exists, no doubt, a correlation between the processes by which the body and the soul are kept healthy and vigorous by drafts on the great reserves of nature.

"One grows tired of books and cloyed with all manner of art. Then comes a hunger and a thirst for nature. Real thought gathering is like berry gathering—one must go to the wild vines for the racy-flavored fruit. Art and nature are really the antipodes of each other—one is original, the other second hand. When we go from the library or the studio to the woods or fields, we go to get back what art has robbed us of—the freshness of nature. The suggestions of nature come—out of the mysterious, invisible generator; but art merely reflects its suggestions back upon nature."—Maurice Thompson.

Reveals Simple Method of "Invisible" Writing

An ex-convict who spent 15 terms in prison, recently visited the office of the London Daily Chronicle, and left a letter purporting to reveal a secret method of invisible writing by means of which prisoners were able to communicate with friends outside. In the letter he claims that this was the method employed by two prisoners who committed suicide when, as stated at the time, they were able to a request to friends to forward them poisoned sandwiches under the system which enables prisoners on remand to receive food from outside. The letter continues: "In this letter is the method under which they sent out their messages. Can you find it?" The explanation and a test of the trick were finally volunteered. In the blank spaces of the letter the ex-convict had penned an invisible message by dipping the pen nib in his mouth and writing with saliva. Lightly done, this cannot be seen by the naked eye. To reveal the writing all that had to be done is to rub ordinary ink over the blank space, blot in quickly and the invisible words stand out like ordinary penmanship.

Daddy Stork the Victim of "Eternal Triangle"

Fratricide is not uncommon in the snake world. Snake will eat snake, and very often does; but it must be said in justification that a snake must be very hungry and see no prospect of food at all before he will deliberately reveal the writing all that had to be done is to rub ordinary ink over the blank space, blot in quickly and the invisible words stand out like ordinary penmanship. German naturalists have observed the murderous passion in some birds especially storks. One celebrated ornithologist tells of a stork which "eddy" emitted on the water. While the mother stork was young and woo the lady stork tolerated the stork's attentions. The band was on the guilty party's shoulder when

Beginning of Superstition

The word "superstition" is derived from the Latin "superstitio," excessive religious belief, possibly originally a standing over a thing in amazement or awe; from "superstare," to stand above or over. Superstition is closely allied with the so-called ethnological phenomena known as survivals. Among the ancient peoples—as, for instance, the Assyrians—it was part of the official state religion to prophesy concerning the future from the flight of birds, the nature of dreams and similar occurrences, and where such customs and the correlated beliefs persist they may be regarded as survivals. Among them, perhaps the most persistent in the country districts is the belief in ghosts and in the influence of the moon. In parts of Europe the effects of the "evil eye" are still feared, while in the United States the horseshoe, caul, four-leaf clover, etc., are still regarded as emblems of good luck.

"Daddy, Start the Razor"

Nine-tenths of the bright sayings of children are duds, which is unfortunate, because once in a while a child achieves something droll or striking. As, for example, the child who had been out in the family's new car and had seen the windshield cleaner work. It was one of those cleaners that clean a semi-circular space on the window in front of the driver. The child did not refer to it, and no one noticed that he was at all interested. The next day he was taken for a drive was rainy and the windshield began to steam up. "Daddy," said the boy, "start the razor."—New Bedford Standard.

Going Quite Strong

Breakspeare was walking slowly across the street when a car booted violently, and he found himself almost embracing its radiator. At the same time he recognized the owner's face. It was an old acquaintance. "Well, Alfred," he stammered. "Fancy our meeting like this! How long did it take you to learn to drive?" "About six," replied his friend cheerfully.

"Six weeks" asked Breakspeare. "No. Idiot," was the answer; "six cars, of course."

Dairy Waste Utilized

The possibilities of the use of the wastes of the dairy were realized only a few years ago, but it has now developed into an extensive industry. Casein is now used in many cases as substitutes for horn, ivory, ebony, pearl, amber and tortoise shells. Many of the staples and novelty articles, such as beads, buckles, buttons, combs, cigarette holders, cuff links, dominoes, dice, toilet articles, fountain pen barrels, penholders, pipe stems, etc., now contain casein products.

Wide Pronunciation Choice

There are 19 ways of pronouncing the name of Miami, if a record kept by George B. Joyner, Pathfinder Magazine reader at Whitney, Fla., is to be relied upon. From bits of conversation overheard at recent tourists' gatherings in Florida's mecca, Mr. Joyner lists the following:

"Mi-a-mer, My-er-muh, Mi-armor, My-aim-ah, My-am-l, May-hammer, My-ammy, Me-ammer, M-ammer, Me-yammer, My-yamer, Me-ah-mah, My-ah-ahm, Me-ammy, May-yammy and M'ammy."

WEEK OF NOVEMBER 17

Generally pleasant and cold weather will rule the greater part of the state of Michigan during the opening days of the week of Nov. 17.

Locally heavy rain or snow storms are almost a certainty within 48 hours either side of Wednesday, the 20th.

With the passage of the low area center across the state there will be a rapid falling off of the temperature.

Each Year More Mothers Treat Colds Externally

The Dangers of "Dosing" Colds Now Avoided by Use of Modern Vaporizing Ointment

When Vicks VapoRub was introduced, mothers especially were quick to appreciate it, because it is just rubbed on and cannot upset children's delicate stomachs as "dosing" is so apt to do.

As more and more mothers adopted this modern external treatment, the fame of Vicks spread until today it is the standby for colds—adults as well as children's—in over 60 countries.

Just rubbed on throat and chest, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster, and at the same time its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

Ever-increasing demand for this better method of treating colds is shown in the familiar Vicks slogan. Made famous when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly"—later raised to "21 Million"—there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized.

CHATTY GODDESS OF GAB

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," ETC.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PUBLISHING CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

"Because he can't afford to. Silly! It takes a bond salesman years and years to build up enough business to make a good salary! And they all have to be well dressed, because the only people they meet are well-to-do, well-dressed business men.

He went on. But Chatty was only half listening to her. Her eyes were fixed on the darkness outside the rain-spotted windows.

Chatty nodded at her. She felt sick to her very marrow bones.

"That's why I feel all right about going places with George," Billie's voice ran on. "I know he'll never ask me to marry him in a dozen years—he doesn't even imagine he's in love with me any more than I do with him.

"Doesn't he go around with anyone but you?"

Billie shrugged her shoulders. "I don't know... but I don't think so. Sara says she wishes he never would come here.

The next night was Saturday, and at half-past seven Mrs. Chatterton and Chatty set out for what they called their "weekly spree."

They always went to market first, and wound up with a moving picture. There was a man just ahead of Chatty when she stepped into line before the ticket window of the Stella Maris theater on West River street at half-past eight.

When he picked up his change and turned to leave the window Chatty saw who he was.

He saw her, too, and he gave a start of surprise. But he did not speak, although he knew her.

"Well, I won't let him get away with that," thought Chatty.

"How are you tonight?" she asked him, and she looked straight into his eyes when he spoke.

"That's Billie's man—George Mayhew," she said to Mrs. Chatterton, when she joined her. "Out with a blonde!"

CHAPTER VIII

The picture, a Marian Davies comedy, was just coming to its close and the theater was in half darkness.

Chatty was not able to see very well as she and her mother followed the usher down the aisle to their seats.

And it was not until she had been sitting there for two or three minutes that she made out George Mayhew and his girl sitting next to her.

A second afterward the lights flashed up as the first show came to an end, and Chatty turned her head and took a long deliberate look at George's girl.

She was almost as pretty as Billie Langenau, and she was beautifully dressed. Her coat was trimmed with a great soft, snowy collar of white fox fur, and as she put up her little hands to take off her hat Chatty saw that upon one of them was a dinner ring of big diamonds and smaller sapphires.

The bead bag that lay upon her lap was one of those frightfully expensive ones that are made in France, and that cost more than a girl like Billie Langenau would earn in a week.

The faintest odor of violets came from her as she moved, and floated in the air around her.

"—and we played contract bridge all afternoon," Chatty heard her say to George Mayhew, in a soft little voice. "I was so tired that I left at five and went home to lie down until it was time for you to come for me."

Chatty could not hear what George said to her in answer. But his voice sounded as if it were full of pity and sympathy, and Chatty set her teeth in the darkness that suddenly settled down over the house once more.

"I wonder if he's sorry for Billie when she works all day and then goes home and gets her own dinner," she said to herself.

She wondered, too, what Billie would say when she told her that George had been stepping out that evening with a beautiful and blonde Clinging Vine.

"I hope Billie hasn't gone to bed," she said to her mother, when they were going up the stairs to their flat. "I'm going to knock on the door, anyway, and see if she's still up... I want to tell her about her George!"

Her hand went out towards the Langenau's door as she reached the landing. But before she could knock on it Mrs. Chatterton had put out her own hand and stopped her.

"Now, WHY would you do that?" she asked. "Now, why would you, if you had a young man, would you want someone to come and tell you that he had been out spending the evening with another girl?"

Chatty had not told her mother about Billie's marriage. For she knew that if she did Mrs. Chatterton would forbid her to go to Billie's flat when George Mayhew was there... and she was looking forward, eagerly, to the Sunday night supper party that Billie had been planning for "some of the boys from the office."

"No... I guess you're right, mother," she said now, and followed Mrs. Chatterton into their own hallway. "It would just make Billie unhappy to know about it, although she keeps telling me that she and George are just the most ordinary friends, and nothing else... But I won't tell her. I promise you that."

Mrs. Chatterton took off her hat and coat.

"It's nice to have Saturday night come around," she said, walking into the Front Room, which had taken on its week-end look of neat coziness.

The sewing machine was covered and he kicked the floor at every step as he went to his own room and to bed.

Mrs. Chatterton shook her head as she sank into her arm chair beside the little grate.

"I just feel, sometimes, that I don't know Pud any more. He's growing up so fast," she sighed, wearily. "I don't know anything about him any more."

She was right... But, if she had only known it, there were things more serious than cigaret smoking that she did not know about him!

Billie decided to have her Sunday night supper on the first Sunday in May.

There were three girls in the Van Nuys company's office besides herself and Chatty—and she invited them all.

"What the use talking to her? You know she's going to tell it!"

with a lace-edged cloth, and Chatty could almost make herself believe that it looked like a tea table. The half-finished dresses were hung out a sight in the closet, and the big table that held the reading lamp had been pushed into the middle of the room.

The Front Room looked like almost any nice family's living room at times like these, and Chatty loved it.

"If David Jordan ever asks me if he can come to call on me, I hope and pray it'll be on Saturday or Sunday night," thought Chatty, sinking into a chair by the yellow-shaded lamp, and stretching herself luxuriously.

"I always say there's no use in telling people disagreeable things, anyway," he mother was going on with the subject of Billie Langenau and the faithless George. "Honey catches more flies than vinegar," as they say, Chatty—and Billie would only dislike you for telling her about that man of hers. Let him tell her himself... It's her business and his. Certainly it's not yours—"

She stopped suddenly, and a look of fear swept into her face.

"Did you hear a noise out in the kitchen?" she asked, jumping up from her chair. "I did—Chatty, I heard someone out there! Pud, is that you?"

As she spoke there came the sound of a chair being pushed along the floor, and all at once Pud came walking out into the tiny hall that ran between the kitchen and the front room.

He stood in the doorway, grinning at the two of them. He had been having something to eat, and there were crumbs in one corner of his mouth.

"Yeah, it's just me," he said cheerfully. "I heard you both come in, but I didn't peep. I was havin' a great time listening to you."

He chuckled.

"What's the use of talking to Chatty like that, mother?" he asked, blithely. "Whatever it is you don't want her to tell—why, you know, she's goin' to tell it—She'd talk the nose off a brass monkey, she would!"

Chatty stared at him in amazement. "What's the matter with YOU?" she asked, dumb-founded. "Why should you jump on me like this, Pud Chatterton?"

"I'm not jumpin' on you," the boy answered, the cigaret on his lower lip moving up and down with every word he spoke. "Only you're always bawlin' me out for things, and you're not so wonderful, yourself—"

"PUD! How long have you been smoking those things?" Mrs. Chatterton, her tired blue eyes wide with horror, walked up to him and took the cigaret from his mouth.

She threw it into the dying coal fire that still glowed in the steel-rodged grate.

"Not sixteen yet, and smoking those nasty things!" she cried. "Never let me see one in your mouth again until you're through high school!"

"Oh, buzwhah!" Pud grumbled, and he kicked the floor at every step as he went to his own room and to bed.

Chatty stared at her, unable to move... She sat where she was, her glass half way to her lips, like a figure carved out of marble.

party—not with drinks like these," Winnie's brassy little voice broke in, close beside her. "This is going to be a Sunday school festival. Come here, Jim!"

She beckoned with one hand to Jim Bowen, the youngest man in the crowd—a handsome, blue-eyed youngster, who had been the captain of the football eleven at the state university the year before.

"Jim, will you find out from Billie if they're serving plain orange juice cocktails because they don't believe in liquor, or because they don't know where to get it?" she said to him in a stage whisper, drawing his black, shining head down to her curly, dyed one.

"Because if they want liquor—and I hope they do, or I'm just going to pass out with disgust—I know where they can get some," she added, pulling him still closer to her with one arm that was covered with wide, jingling silver bracelets. "There's a kid that works down here in Tomlinson's drug store that sells me alcohol for a dollar a quart! And I can get him on the telephone in a jiffy. Go and ask George Mayhew if it's okay to do it."

She gave him a little push in the direction of George and Billie, who were pouring out some more of the little orange juice "cocktails."

Chatty stared at her, unable to move... She sat where she was, her glass half way to her lips, like a figure carved out of marble.

RUTHVEN LAUDS STUDENT BODY

Defense of the students at the University of Michigan was the substance of the first speech made by Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, in the state, since his elevation to the presidency. He blamed newspapers for drawing an unfair picture of the university student "because he prefers not to flaunt his virtues."

Dr. Ruthven spoke before a Parent-Teacher association meeting at Saginaw. He asserted that the undesirable element in the university body was smaller than the same type of persons in the general population.

"But," he continued, "unfortunately it is usually the representatives of this relatively small group who are responsible for the acts which make 'news' and thus, in the public eye typify the university student."

The new University of Michigan executive disclaimed for his faculty any responsibility for the moral training of the students, but said the institution was entirely responsible for the educational training.

"The faculties can fix educational standards and maintain them. But the tendency to hold the teacher or the institution responsible for the morals of the students is to a considerable extent unjustified," he asserted.

Smoking on the part of women students was condoned by Dr. Ruthven as a matter of manners rather than of morals.

Big Rapids Woman Re-Elected Head of State W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Stella B. Roben of Big Rapids was re-elected to the presidency of the state W. C. T. U. by the delegates of the fifty-fifth annual convention. Mrs. E. L. Calkins of Ypsilanti ran a close race, receiving 112 votes to 152 for the winner.

Mrs. Dora Whitney of Benton Harbor also was nominated but withdrew after the first ballots.

The white ribbons witnessed a pageant "In Review," along with nearly 500 other folks at Carnegie gym. The pageant showed the progress of prohibition. A telegram was sent by the convention to President Hoover expressing appreciation of his efforts toward law enforcement.

Name Selected for New Portland School Paper

The "Port-Light" is the name of the new Portland public school paper, first copy of which was published recently. The name was suggested by Robert Holtz, freshman, in a school-wide contest.

West Staters to Plan State J-Hop

Charles Ladd of Muskegon, president of the Michigan State College junior class, has announced the committees for the annual J-hop, traditional social event held in the winter term, to begin preparations for the biggest party of the year. An early meeting of the committee chairmen will take place and plans will be completed before this term ends.

Many western Michigan students are on the list of about 50 juniors who will make arrangements. The hop committees include:

Publicity—James S. Haskins, Howard City; Jean Cadwalder, Owosso. Finance—Karl Jepson, Mulliken, chairman; Madeline Dulso, Grand Rapids. Music—John Woodman, Paw Paw. Favors—Ford Growell, Grand Rapids; Robert O'Connor, Hastings. Programs and Invitations—Bud Smith, Eaton Rapids, chairman. Reception—Gerald Breen, Holland, chairman; Elizabeth Krause, Rockford. Decorations—Glen Veneklassen, Zeeland.

Poems That Live

TO ARAMANTHA

(That she would dishevel her hair)
Aramantha, sweet and fair,
Ah, braid no more that shining hair!
As my curious hand or eye
Hover round thee, let it fly.

Let it fly as unconfined
As its calm ravisher the wind,
Who hath left his darling, th' east,
To wanton in that spicy nest.

Every tress must be confessed;
But neatly tangled at the best;
Like a clew of golden thread
Most excellently unravelled.

Do not, then, wind up that light
In ribbons, and o'er-cloud in night,
Like the sun in his early ray;
But shake your head and scatter day.
—Richard Lovelace (1618-1658).

Waistline Is as Elusive as Ever

By LUCY CLAIRE

The raised waistline appears to be as elusive as ever. The difference is that it has now begun to move up and down above instead of below the hip-line. The normal waistline we have been so long expecting does not prove to be quite so normal, after all. Normal would be about two inches above the hip bone, but Paris is moving it from normal to two inches below or two or three inches above. So you can place your waistline at the most becoming point, so long as you place it within an inch or two of normal.

In the costume at the left of the sketch Worth places the waistline at normal. The ensemble is of black broadcloth, with tuck-in blouse in a contrasting color of large meshed tulle in a check design. Both skirt and two-thirds jacket are in panels joined with silk cord in openwork effect, the panels hung from a yoke. The fur collar is upstanding around the neck in the smart vogue of the season. A black felt hat and black kid pumps complete the costume.

Flounce Breaks Hipline
In the model by Lelong, at the center, we find the waistline posed at the top of the hips and broken by a flounce. The same type of fabric is used for coat and frock. The coat is a heavy mixture of brown, white and mauve, while the frock is of a thinner weave in more subdued coloring of the same tones. Brown astrakhan is used for collar and cuffs. The shoes are of brown kid and the hat of brown felt, matching the brown in the fabric.

Molyneux's afternoon frock of blue georgette, sketched at the right, shows practically no change in the waistline. It is posed at the top of the hips, slightly lower than that in the Lelong model, and with a bloused effect. Two pleated flounces are set low on the skirt, breaking the long, straight line, but otherwise practically retaining the straight line silhouette. Blue kid shoes, a blue hat and eggshell hose and gloves complete the costume.

CHARLOTTE PUPILS TO AID DESTITUTE

The Charlotte Hi-Y club has started auspiciously this year and 10 new pupils have been elected to membership. As the club lost 12 members through graduation this year, the election brings the roster to 24.

The club has set for its project this year a Christmas party for Tennessee mountain children in the locality of Asheville, N. C. Although details of this undertaking have been worked out they will not be announced until later.

The club has planned a meeting between its members and the local Y. M. C. A. organization when area conferences and other problems confronting the two organizations will be discussed.

Several Charlotte business men were recent guests of the club at a roast pig supper. The men were told the club desires to take a quantity of Christmas gifts for the children of the Asheville region, pack them in a car or two, and with the club members in other cars, make a trip to the mountains. The members want to have the fun of gathering the presents, planning and executing the party, and get the reaction derived from spreading joy where it will be most appreciated.

Members have been in correspondence with a Mr. Burnett, in charge of all missionary work for the Methodist church, and he has informed them the project is unprecedented and would be thoroughly appreciated.

C. S. T. C. Attracts From Many Areas

Out of the 83 counties in Michigan 65 are represented in the enrollment of Central State Teachers college. Four states other than Michigan are represented.

Barring the home county, Isabella, Saginaw leads in enrollment with 56, closely trailed by Gratiot with 52. Three counties, Montcalm, Shiawassee and Tuscola, are tied for fourth place with 32 students apiece.

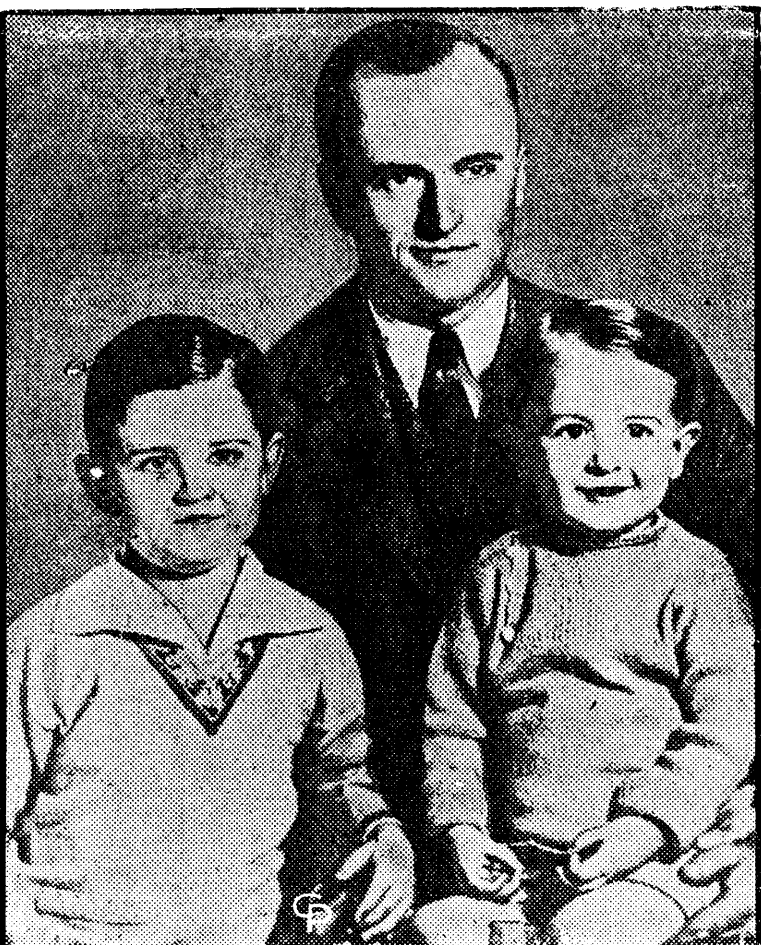

Bay county comes next with 25, followed by Huron and Sanilac counties with 23, Ionia and Wexford with 20 and Clare, Clinton, Genesee, Mecosta and Osceola with 18 each.

Other counties and states at C. S. T. C. rank in order of representation: Emmet 16, Gladwin 15, Antrim 14, Manistee 14, Wayne 14, Benzie 13, Ingham 12, Kent 12, Grand Traverse 11, Mason 11, Muskegon 11, Lapeer 10, Presque Isle 10, Midland 9, Missaukee 8, Oakland 8, St. Clair 8, Charlevoix 7, Arenac 6, Newaygo 6, Otsego 6, state of Ohio 5, Alpena 4, Cheboygan 4, Kalkaska 4, Lake 4, Leelanau 4, Ottawa 4, Schoolcraft 4, Alcona 3, Crawford 3, Livingston 3, Macomb 3, Oscoda 3, Barry 2, Cass 2, Chippewa 2, Iosco 2, Monroe 2, Ogemaw 2, Roscommon 2, state of Indiana 2, Allegan 1, Baraga 1, Branch 1, Gogebic 1, Iron 1, Luce 1, Menominee 1, Montgomery 1, Oceana 1, state of Illinois 1, state of Tennessee 1.

There are 157 students from Isabella county.

As Lost Flyer Bade Sons Goodbye

The Parent Problem

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

USE BRAINS IN READING NEWSPAPERS

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.
"Murders, divorces, robberies! That's all the newspapers print!" remarks the fretful parent. "Yes, isn't it awful what our children are exposed to?" another parent adds. In the next breath they begin to talk, perhaps for half an hour—and probably right before their children—about the crimes which they had followed closely every day.

And what a glorious time they have, dwelling in minute detail upon the gruesome way that Mrs. Hippy put her scissors through her husband's head; upon the shocking conduct of the deacon toward his wife as it was given in the court room, and upon the way the robber on the street had covered the bank teller with a pistol while his partner seized $5,000. Then these crimes remind them of others they read about. When their memories run dry of such awful things, Mrs. Toodles, sighing with a saintly air, concludes: "And that is the kind of stuff our papers print for us and for our children!"

Junior Toodles, who sat by breathlessly, taking all the conversation in, ran out to play.

Parents who go on ranting with good Sister Toodles may be the very ones who generally read the columns which relate to crime before they turn to other news. They may not have time to see the editorial page, to turn to the section on home helps, to follow the nation's sporting heroes, to scan the news about our government, to learn what new discoveries have been made to lighten human burdens and to satisfy our human needs. They may not find the information in the paper aimed to feed and clothe the family more effectively, to care for our children more intelligently, to guide us in reducing human pain and sickness and in lengthening life. They have failed to read about the opportunities for enjoying leisure time, for appreciating the beautiful in nature, art and music, and for learning about some of the latest useful books. So very pessimistic, they saw nothing in the daily paper to afford an interesting, wholesome conversation with the family.

Of course, you and I wish the newspapers were not so filled with crime and with suggestions of unhappiness. We also wish there were not so many such things going on to be described as news.

If parents who are most distressed about such matters which they vigorously condemn, would quit reciting them to one another and their children, this sort of news would decrease tremendously.

There is no law forbidding you to use intelligence in reading the newspaper. Read the wholesome, good things in it. Talk about them in your children's presence, and they are pretty sure to imitate you. If you look for such things you will be surprised at what you find.

Write to the editor and tell him what you consider best in his newspaper. He is just as human as you are, and as much delighted by a little praise. We treat the editor about the way we treat our children. When we don't like what they do we wear ourselves out telling them about their faults; but for the things in their behavior that we like we rarely say a word.

If you want your newspaper to improve, praise the good things which you see in it.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

DISCIPLINE YOUR CHERISHED WANTS, DON'T BE SELFISH

Loving some one "terribly hard," or being "madly in love," as one girl puts it, does not entitle one to get the loved one, no matter who is hurt. Some people seem to think that simply because they want a thing so very much it should be given to them.

Things don't work that way in this world. Many, many times one will find that the thing one wanted most, wanted so that it seemed they could not do without it and ever be happy, is the one thing that they cannot have.

One finds after awhile that there is nothing one cannot do without—and even be reasonably happy without.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am an attractive blonde and am madly in love with a boy who goes with another girl. He seems to pay no attention to me. Please give me some advice for drawing his attention to me. I am madly in love with him. V. Z."

How about the girl he is going with? She may be madly in love with him, too. Why break her heart to mend yours, even if it could be done? I think if I were you I would pretend that I didn't love him until I got over it. It is always hard, I know, to stifle one's love, but it can be done and you will feel much better than if you selfishly broke up the friendship of this boy and his girl.

"Dear Virginia Lee: It is true that everyone has their faults. My outstanding fault is despicable and almost inexcusable. I think I like a boy for about two or three weeks. Then I can't enjoy his company and don't care to be with him again.

"I would give anything to overcome this and have honestly tried, but find it impossible. You have given others splendid advice and I'm sure you can help me. Won't you suggest something? Bobbie."

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

THIS WAGGING WORLD

The Lindberghs made safe landings, and again all is well. But I do not hesitate to confess that I am one of those Americans who views with considerable dread each new dangerous venture of that boy.

Flying over the West Indies, the Caribbean and the jungles of Central America and Mexico is a dangerous adventure because of the lack of emergency landing spaces.

Lindbergh is still Lindbergh, despite the circumstance that many Americans lost interest in him when he married and settled down to a job. I still consider him our most romantic hero, with the possible exception of John Paul Jones. And Jones, of course wasn't born in America, although he turned out to be one of the greatest of all Americans.

I still think that Lindbergh should be honored by having his likeness on a postage stamp and on a coin. And he should be made Secretary of Aviation.

However, the boy will live gloriously, whether the country ever offers him these honors or not.

It's good to learn that commercial flying in the United States increased 60 per cent during the first half of this year over the same period last year. That's a big increase. Transport planes flew eight million miles in this country during those six months. How many times around the earth is that? A good many times, I should estimate.

We are overtaking Europe in aviation, thanks to private enterprise in America. Our postoffice department has done some valuable pioneering but most of our advancement in aviation is due to the enterprise of those who want to make money out of flight.

Within another five years, American planes will lead the world as decisively as American automobiles now maintain their leadership. And don't worry too much about this country's aviation position in the next war. American planes will be there when the gong rings.

Things happen in the air so rapidly these days that it takes an industrious reader to keep abreast. Perhaps it is significant that Charles F. Mitchell, chairman of the board of the National City bank, recently went to Germany to talk Zeppelin financing with the Eckener group.

Zeppelins require much financing. Each ship costs a fortune, and it takes time to get the investment back. Mitchell has the money and the power to link Europe and America with regular airship service. It is well to have such a man interested in such a venture. So do we move forward.
