POULTRY

Why Poultry Houses are Damp

There is no doubt that poultry houses are damp, but what causes the dampness? There are several possible reasons for this:

1. Poor ventilation: Poultry houses are often not well ventilated, which allows moisture to build up inside the house.
2. Condensation: Moisture from the birds' bodies can condense on the walls of the house, creating dampness.
3. Leaking roofs: Leaking roofs can allow water to enter the poultry house, causing dampness.

Correcting these problems can help reduce dampness in poultry houses.

MORE WOMEN ENTERING LAW AT UNIVERSITY

The law, long considered perhaps the most unattainable of the professions, is gradually becoming a more attractive choice for a growing number of women. Several law schools have reported an increase in the number of female students. In many cases, this trend is attributed to the increased role of women in society, and the desire for women to have equal opportunities in all fields. The law provides women with a way to assert their rights and challenge the status quo. It also offers a means to effect social change and promote gender equality. The image of the traditional lawyer as a stern, male-dominated profession is changing, and women are playing a more active role in shaping the future of the legal profession.
WEEK OF JANUARY 24

Still weather conditions will come to an end with the beginning of the week of January 22nd in most of Michigan. With snowing and freezing conditions still prevalent in the state for two or three weeks. Near the Great Lakes, however, the bitter cold will be broken at certain times, while in the interior, mild weather is expected to pass over the region from north to south.

Another thing to remember that will hasten heating conditions, but yet cause great discomfort to many, is the fact that ice-snow storms, side from some local winds, are likely to occur. One can be assured that the authorities are somewhat vague about this proposal, as they are working on keeping the trains running.

There may be a sharp drop in the temperature on Monday, which will be marked by the arrival of the cold. In some places, the cold will be felt, while in others, it will not be as severe. However, we do not expect there will be a change in the weather in Michigan before the early part of next week.

Homecoming Days at U. M.

University of Michigan students are paradise for the bored individual, similar to a stage by a number of other college and university. There is always great interest in the students' doings. February 5, 7, and 9, Monday, and February 10, Tuesday, will be the annual meeting of the students. The annual meeting will be held, and later in the evening, the students will be arranged around the outside of the meeting. The students will be made to look like a number of athletic events will be held at the same time and a great variety of courses will be offered during the week.
