ROOSTS AND DROPPING BOARDS: Dropping boards are about 30 inches from the floor for a coaster and 36 to 38 inches where the ceiling height is 6 feet or more. Above the board, the board should be about 12 inches wider on the floor and 18 inches on the ceiling. When the board is not being used, it should be stored against the wall. Racks should be put up from six to eight feet from the floor, all on the same level except the lowest rack. The feeder should be raised one or two inches above the board so that the feed will not be wasted. Racks should be spaced four to six inches apart to accommodate the birds. Runners should be placed on the inside of the rack, one on each side of the rack, to allow the birds to move around freely.

PROTEIN IN THE POULTRY YARD: University of Nebraska College of Agriculture and Applied Science recently investigated the use of protein in the diet of poultry. The study showed that protein is necessary for the growth and development of the bird. The results of the study indicate that the amount of protein required varies with the age of the bird and the amount of feed consumed. The study also showed that the efficiency of protein utilization is improved when the protein is supplied in a complete form.

Demand Increases For Guinea Fowl

Guinea fowl are increasing in favor as a source of protein for use in various ways, such as for cheese, chops, and sausages. Guinea fowl are well adapted to the American climate and are readily available at local markets. They are easy to keep and can be raised on a small scale. The demand for guinea fowl has increased due to their adaptability and the increasing demand for healthy, nutritious foods.

Call With Tails on Front and Armed for Flight

A call with tails on the front and armed for flight is a good way to start the day. The birds are always alert and ready to fly if necessary. This is a good way to train the birds for flight and to keep them in good condition.

Feed Rineckers

Charlotte

A flock of 22 Pheasants is being fed this winter at Maple Ridge Farm, located at the outskirts of Charlotte. The birds are fed daily at 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., and they are also fed once a week at their regular meal time. Mr. Brown reports that the birds are doing well, and that they have been feeding the same diet for the past year. He also reports that the birds are active and healthy.

Will Duck Farmers Get Low Test Milk

Mason county dairymen received a letter from the Dairy Board instructing them to send a low test milk sample. The sample is to be tested at the state laboratory, and the result will be forwarded to the dairyman. The test will be done to determine the presence of subclinical mastitis in the herd. This test is important because it helps to prevent the spread of the disease and ensures the safety of the milk.

Here is a picture depicting the work being done on the new giant stadium, the Great White. The Great White is intended to be the largest and most modern stadium in the country. The stadium will be able to accommodate up to 100,000 spectators, and will feature state-of-the-art facilities, including a large roof and climate control systems. The stadium is scheduled to open in the spring of 2023.
NEW REFORMATORY
Cell Block Opened

The new large cell block at the old federal penitentiary, under condemnation for more than a year, and paid for the largest of its kind in the United States, was opened recently by the Board of Corrections. It has 424 cells, and the total labor and the only infirmaries are to be housed there. Concrete and steel, blackamoor, blankets, dovecots the bare and the wearing apparel of the cell. The building is not yet complete but will be ready later in the year.

The new building is designed to accommodate 500 prisoners. It has a capacity of 1,000, and is to be used for the reception of old convicts.

The building is of brick and concrete, and the walls are 10 feet high. The cell block is divided into 20 sections, each containing 25 cells. Each cell is furnished with a bed, a desk, a chair, and a small table. The cells are painted white and the walls are covered with green wallpaper.

The building is heated and lighted by oil. The heating is by means of hot water pipes, and the light is furnished by electric lamps. The water supply is from a well in the cell block.

The cells are of the latest design, and are arranged so as to give each prisoner his privacy. The doors are of metal and the windows are of glass. The bathrooms are supplied with hot and cold water, and the cells are connected with the cell block by a system of drainage pipes.

The building is situated on a hill, and is surrounded by a high wall. The entrance is through a gate, which is closed at night. The cells are entered through a door, which is locked at night.

The building is under the direction of a warden, who is assisted by a staff of guards. The prisoners are allowed to work, and are paid for their labor.

The Country of Our History At A Glance

By ANNE BYRON

The Opening of the U.S. Neighbors

The western part of Indian Territory was a beautiful land which the United States had purchased from the Indians. It was a land of rolling hills and fertile fields, with a climate that was mild and pleasant, despite the occasional visit of Spring storms. The red earth of the Plains was rich and fertile, and the wildflowers that bloomed in the spring added a touch of beauty to the landscape.

At noon, a bright sun shone down upon the green fields and forests, warming the earth with its golden rays. The trees rustled in the gentle breeze, and the birds sang a sweet song. It was a perfect day for a walk in the country, and the people of the new nation were eager to explore and enjoy the beauty of their new land.

Pioneers in Beauty

In the early days, before the advent of synthetic dyes, beauty was found in nature. Girls and women would gather wild flowers and herbs to use in their hair and clothes, and men would wear natural fibers and feathers. This natural beauty was appreciated, and it was considered a sign of simplicity and grace.

In the present day, we have a variety of beauty treatments and products available to us. We can use makeup to enhance our natural features, use tanning lotions to achieve a golden glow, or use hair products to add volume and curl to our hair. However, it is important to remember that beauty is a subjective concept, and what one person may find beautiful, another may not. It is important to find beauty in ourselves, and to appreciate the unique qualities that make us who we are.
