End of Litigation

Nolle pros means the same as nolle prosequi. It is an entry made on the record, by which the prosecutor or plaintiff declares that he will proceed no further. Nolle prosequi means literally "will not prosecute." It is a voluntary withdrawal by the prosecuting attorney of present proceedings on a particular bill.

School Notes

Tuberculosis killed 2912 in Michigan last year--and tuberculosis is preventable and curable. Order seals from the local school children.

Say "Happy New Year" to health with tuberculosis Christmas Seals.

The boys basket ball season opens this Friday at Lawrence. We have the best prospects we have had in years. While it is a little early to predict county championship in our class we are going to be in a position to give the best teams a real game. The alumni open the season at home a week from Friday. Admission will be very moderate to that game. Let us all work together for the good of the school and the community.

No home is safe from tuberculosis until all homes are safe.

Tuberculosis is childhood's deadliest disease.

Substantial progress is enjoyed in the grade school music work. The instruments for the rhythm band fill a long felt need.

Ask any school child for Christmas seals. If he does not have them he will procure them for you at the school.

Wayne Douglass, Mrs. Foulk and E. G. Schutt attended meetings at South Haven of the principals, English teachers and superintendents, respectively, Wednesday evening. These meetings will become a regular feature of Van Buren county village schools.

Fills Up On Michigan Baked Potatoes

From County Agricultural Agent Johnson

"The writer paid fifty cents for the prize winning 32 potatoes entered under the name of Early Everets, although the writer thinks they are Early Rose. When he announced that he was buying them to eat to the bystanders there were remarks concerning "extravagance" etc. However, he is writing these lines after having eaten a nine ounce potato, the pick of the bin, matured, mealy, no waste, of a flavor that beats any Idaho baker grown a hundred per cent, and which cost him about one and one-half cents. Practically a full meal when one half cents worth of butter and a little salt and pepper were added. The aroma filled the room and the potato filled the writer. Three cents per pound these cost. Where can you get as much food, mineral salts, smell, taste and satisfaction for 3c per pound. The cheapest food on earth at the price. Do not confuse this kind of a potato with the ordinary run. They are different. They are better and more economical. The fine thing about it is that this kind of quality usually goes hand in hand with high yield."

(The above are our sentiments and we would emphasize BUTTER too. Ed.)

U. S. EXPENSES DOUBLE INCOME

According to dispatches from Washington the treasury department has supplied information showing that from July 1 to October 26, not quite four months, the government's expenditures have been about double the national income. Receipts, aside from those obtained through borrowing, amounted to $680,433,000, while expenditures totaled $1,360,651,000. Governmental expenditures for the year are already $251,000,000 greater than for a corresponding period last year.

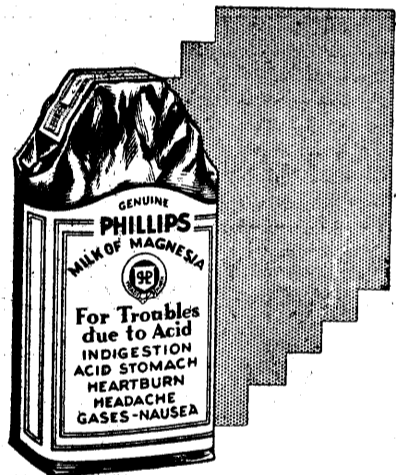

All of which promises that the coming congress will be a very busy body, indeed, if it is to solve this interesting and troublesome problem in finance. It is predicted at Washington that unless the coming congress finds new sources of revenue the deficit at the close of the fiscal year will be in excess of two billion dollars. With nothing yet set aside for the public debt sinking fund the deficit so far this fiscal year, with figures complete up to October 26, amounts to $655,961,851. The heavily increased expenditures are said to result from emergency measures, such as farm relief and the expanded building program, although there has been some increase in expenditures as a result of the normal growth of the country and therefore of governmental activities.

Survey of Scenic Highway Is Started

Preliminary surveys for the Scenic highway from Ludington through the Dunes to Big Sable park, and extension of US-10 to the Pere Marquette dock are being made by state highway department surveyors. The engineers will make maps of the areas to be traversed by both roads, to aid in the final location surveys to be undertaken later. The preliminary survey will take six weeks, it is estimated.

Detroit Heads Wabash

Walter S. Franklin, former president of Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, has been elected president of Wabash railway in place of the late William H. Williams. Mr. Franklin is assistant to the vice-president in charge of operations of the Pennsylvania railroad. He also has been elected a director and president of the Ann Arbor railroad, a subsidiary of the Wabash.

Reduce the Acid

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour. Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere. Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go, prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours. Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians in correcting excess acids.

MT. CLEMENS GETS TWO NEW PLANTS

Two new factories are coming to Mt. Clemens, it is announced by A. D. Brewer, executive secretary of the board of commerce. The manufacturing plants, although small, will add stability to the community through diversification of local industries. Cadillac Tool Company of 2016 Franklin street, Detroit, has moved to 150 Grand avenue. New equipment is being installed in the plant which will occupy 3,000 square feet of floor space. Skilled tool and die mechanics will be employed. The product is sold to Ford, Lincoln, Chevrolet and other Detroit automobile, brake and tube concerns. A. J. Glass is president. The announcement of the second plant which is to locate in Mt. Clemens will be made soon.

Airplane and Gas Taxes Are Upheld

Constitutionality of both the Airplane Registration law and the Three Cent Gasoline tax on airplane gasoline was upheld recently by Attorney General Paul W. Voorhies in an opinion requested by Maj. Floyd Evans, state director of aeronautics. The Registration Act requires plane owners to pay a fee of two and a half cents a pound on the weight of their ships with a fixed minimum and maximum of $10 and $100. Maj. Evans asked if these limitations were not illegal. The attorney general ruled that the legislature's power to fix a minimum and maximum tax was upheld in the test of the corporation privilege fee law. He ruled that the gasoline tax is legal because the money is used for state owned landing fields. These fields are as important to aviators, he pointed out, as highways are to automobile owners.

Walter Hastings Offers Collection to Traverse

An archeological collection, consisting mostly of Indian relics, collected in Michigan and Isle Royale, by Walter Hastings, conservation department publicist, and worth many thousand dollars, has been offered to Traverse City by Hastings providing the city will furnish a proper museum and use the collection as a nucleus for an assembly of Indian relics. This proposal was made to the Rotary club by Hastings and gives impetus to the plans of Con Foster for a building in Clinch park, of similar construction to the aquarium and zoo, which would house the outstanding collection of Indian relics in the state.

$4,000,000 for Selfridge

Completion of a construction and improvement program, which during the past few years involved an expenditure of $3,000,000, and which will be extended to $4,000,000 before the project is concluded, is rapidly approaching at the United States Army airport at Selfridge Field, near Mt. Clemens, according to Major George H. Brett, commandant. It is expected that the program will be completed before the end of 1932 and at that time the field with its equipment and holdings will be worth from $8,000,000 to $9,000,000, making it one of the finest army airports in the country.

Lumberjacks Will Receive Attention

The Iron River district, which has accomplished much for the relief of needy families and the unemployment, has turned its attention to the welfare of lumberjacks and made provision to care for all needy woodsmen who have been residents of the district for the last year or more. The old county infirmary building will be fitted up with sleeping coats and other conveniences for their benefit. The men will be supplied with food and if it is found necessary a cook will be employed to look after the culinary department. It has been announced no "floaters" will be admitted to the building.

STATE GETS LAND ON LAKE SUPERIOR

Acquisition of 1,568 acres of land from the federal government west of the village of Grand Marais and in the most spectacular sand dunes in the northern part of the state, was announced by the parks division of the conservation department. The announcement was made simultaneously with acceptance by the conservation commission of 28 acres of land near the village, given to the state for state park purposes. The land obtained near the village formerly was operated as a park by Burt township. It has 2,470 feet of frontage on Lake Superior and marks the northern terminal of M77. The land in the sand dunes, a mile west of the plot in the village, was obtained from the federal government through exchange. It has a four-mile frontage on Lake Superior and most of it is covered with massive sand dunes. The state has been desirous for several years of obtaining property in the vicinity of Grand Marais, but actual steps were not taken until sufficient property was available to make an adequate park. The land given by Burt township was accepted subject to administration when funds are available.

Gets $2,000,000 Order

Chicago Yellow Cab Company has bought from the Checker Cab Manufacturing Company, Kalamazoo, 1,000 yellow cabs at an aggregate price of $2,000,000 to replace old cars now in service.

Allegan Highway Work To Relieve Unemployed

A. R. Morris, superintendent of state highways in Allegan county, states his apartment will give jobs to men out of employment on 27 miles of road this winter and that he expects work will start in the course of a few weeks. The work as now outlined for reconstruction and improvement follows: Three miles south on M 40 commencing at Annis corners, two miles south of Allegan, resurfacing and widening; three miles south of Fennville on MS9, resurfacing and ditching; nine miles between Allegan and Martin on M118, resurfacing and ditching; five miles between Wayland and Moline on US181, widening, grading and ditching; seven miles between Glenn and South Haven on US31, widening roadbed, grading and ditching.

Court House Bonds Are Up to Voters

Fate of Macomb county's new twelve-story court house now rests with outcome of a special election set for Dec. 21. Voters will pass on a proposal for a $250,000 bond issue to complete the building. The county board of supervisors authorized the election after legal opinions stated this is the only legal method of raising the money. This action has become necessary because of a shortage in the building fund brought about by delinquent taxes. The building is now in its final stages of construction. Work has been finished on all 12 stories of the exterior, with exception of the roof. At the present time the county has about $20,000 left in the building fund. October construction bills total $22,000.

Starts Dam Construction

The coffer dam across the Huron river, three miles southeast of Ypsilanti, at the site of the proposed power dam to be built by the Ford Motor Company, has been completed and construction of the permanent dam will be begun immediately. The dam is to be part of the development project upon which the Ford company has been working through the past summer. It is understood that a factory for the building of starters and generators for Ford cars would be erected near the site of the former United States Pressed Steel company's factory on the river bank at the southern limits of Ypsilanti.

Approves Rail Merger

Consolidation of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton, the Detroit and Ironton, and the Toledo-Detroit railroads has been authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The D., T. and I. will take over the tracks and all assets of both of the other companies, whose corporate existence will cease. The action of the Commission overrules the opinion of its examiner who conducted a hearing some time ago, and recommended that the unification be denied.

Will Distribute Lime

Muskegon's harbor has been selected as the new western Michigan distribution center of the Inland Lime and Stone Company, subsidiary of the Inland Steel Company of Indiana Harbor, Ind. Stone will be handled by the Great Lakes Foundry and Sand Company of Detroit, over the Construction Materials Company dock. It will be shipped throughout western Michigan by rail at a considerable saving to foundries and blast furnaces previously receiving the stone by rail from Indiana Harbor or Detroit.

ADDITION STARTED TO REFORMATORY

Work has begun on a $200,000 addition to the recently completed mammoth dormitory at the Michigan reformatory, five stories high, and said to be the largest penal institution unit of its kind in the United States. The wing will be a duplicate as to architecture, will tack on the main building at the north end, but will run east and west, thus forming an L-shape completed structure. The building material is largely cement blocks, made inside the walls of the institution, and inmates are furnishing most of the labor.

The expenditure having been approved, and the money set aside by the state administrative board at Lansing for a new $300,000 receiving hospital unit for the Ionia state hospital for the criminal insane on the highlands directly across the river from the reformatory, it is planned to begin work on this structure in the very near future.

The proposed unit will provide accommodations for 200 patients and will relieve the overcrowded conditions at the hospital, the only hospital for the criminal insane in the state, which is now filled to 15 per cent above normal capacity. The present population is 700 patients, 80 of whom are women. This will be the first major project undertaken at the hospital, so far as relieving congestion is concerned, since 1914, when the building for women was built.

Jobless Will Work On Ionia Hospital

Immediate construction of an addition to the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Ionia will be authorized by the administrative board as an aid in unemployment relief. The structure, which will cost $255,000, will be used as a receiving building. Its erection was authorized by the legislature of 1929, but no work was undertaken because of a lack of funds. It is expected the board will order contractors to obtain a large part of their skilled and unskilled labor from the Ionia county unemployment relief committee.

3 RULES big help to BOWELS

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin, and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Lost! 18 lbs. of FAT in 15 Days!

Well Known Saginaw Woman Jubilant—Reduced Hips Three and a Half Inches—Reduced Bust Four Inches—Feels, Oh, So Light and Full of Pep!

Suppose you weighed 186 pounds and every time you looked in a mirror tears came into your eyes as you gazed on a huge double chin, heavy arms and legs, large hips and bust. And suppose this over-fat condition made you too heavy for your own feet—until you felt constantly all dragged out, stomach upset with gas and indigestion, and terrific headaches. And then you tried one thing after another—and you're all ready to give up in despair.

Such was the dilemma of Mrs. Frank Cole, 602 N. Jefferson Ave., Saginaw, Mich. She read about Bonkora, the one safe, natural way to take off excess poundage by cleansing wastes from the intestines and removing retained moisture from fatty tissues. But let her tell the story: "I am so grateful for what Bonkora has done for me that I almost want to shout it from the housetops. I weighed 186 lbs. After taking just 2 bottles of your wonderful medicine, I am down to 168. I have had to take in all my dresses, for I have lost 4 inches in the bust and 3 1/2 in the hips. And I am feeling better than I have for years. I couldn't digest a thing. I used to suffer from gas in the stomach—constant dizzy spells and from such terrible headaches that at times I could hardly see. I slept poorly. I felt tired all the time and could scarcely do my work. Now all that is gone. I seem to be able to eat anything I like without distress. I sleep well every night and get up feeling fine. I can now work hard all day and never feel tired. I look so well, my friends ask me what on earth I have done to myself. And I tell them, I owe it all to Bonkora." You may not lose 18 pounds in 15 days. But if you have excess fat you can lose it in the famous "3 easy stages," as shown in this picture. For the next week, before meals, take a little Bonkora, the new Battle Creek treatment. It has a glass of water. No need to starve. Eat as much as you want. The big secret is selecting for each meal the proper combination of foods that do not clog the system and turn to fat. An almost endless choice of appealing dishes, showing you how to select in the correct combination those foods you probably like best, furnished free. Bonkora, the safe and effective method to reduce—recently perfected by a skilled chemist—contains only the choicest and most efficacious medicaments of Nature. NO thyroid or other drug that may jeopardize your health. Simply purchase a bottle of Bonkora, the new Battle Creek treatment, at your druggist's today—unhealthy fat will quickly disappear and with it, bloat, gas, and other stomach ills. You'll feel younger, yes, you'll look younger, too, those bright eyes, and that clear skin and stunning figure which only perfect health can impart. Big bottle of Bonkora $1.00 at all good druggists.

They Play, Too—

These students of the Overbrook School for the Blind, Philadelphia, Pa., do not miss out on sports. They play football, but the game for them is mostly confined to kicking and catching the pigskin. Captain Stephen Artymowicz is shown kicking.

But He Got Away!

Lieut. Commander

Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, a survivor of the Shenandoah disaster, is commander of the largest vessel of the air, the new navy dirigible Akron. Now 38 years old, Commander Rosendahl began his aviation career in 1923 as a student naval aviator at Lakehurst. His new ship has a cubical content almost double that of the Graf Zeppelin, and one-third larger than that of the British R-101 which was destroyed in France last year.

After spending eight years in retirement, Mae Marsh, film favorite of other days, is going to tackle the talkies. Her daughter, Mary, wants to hear her voice on the screen.

STATE FARM LAND AREA DECREASES

A decrease of 916,337 acres of farm land in Michigan from 1925 to 1930 is shown in a report just issued by the agricultural engineering department at Michigan State college.

Seventy-five per cent of the reduction, the report shows, is in nontillable land, where farmers have failed to properly care for the land once it was cleared. Since 1920 a decrease of 1,914,000 acres is shown.

Three southern counties and portions of two others show increases for the five-year period, the report shows. They are Kalamazoo, Cass and St. Joseph and slight increases were shown in parts of Berrien and Calhoun. The average increase for these counties was 4.3 per cent. St. Joseph, however, showed a 7.8 per cent increase.

The land area in farms declined from 49 per cent in 1925 to 46.5 per cent in 1930.

Ottawa Farmers Buy Much Grain

Ottawa county had no overproduction of grain this year, according to County Agent C. P. Milham. Milham's report, to the contrary, shows that farmers spent more than $800,000 for grain and grain products for feeding cattle and poultry, equivalent to at least $225 for every farmer in the county.

The major portion of the products purchased included 275,000 bushels of corn, 200,000 bushels of oats and barley and 3,000 bushels of wheat. Other products included bran, middlings, cotton seed, oil meal, poultry and dairy feeds.

Figures also show a large decrease in the acreage of all farm crops in the last 10 years except alfalfa and barley. Milham advises the growing of more alfalfa as an acre of alfalfa will produce more than 500 pounds of protein a year.

Farm Institute Program Ready

A tentative program has been announced for the second annual farmers' institute in the Armory Dec. 9 under auspices of the Holland Chamber of Commerce, co-operating with the agricultural agents of Ottawa and Allegan counties, Michigan State college and the Holland Merchants' association.

Dick Boter, president of the commerce body, and Mayor E. C. Brooks will welcome the farmers and visitors. Plate lunch will be served at noon by the Merchants' association and music will be furnished by the Holland High School band.

Speakers at the morning session will include County Agent C. P. Milham of Grand Haven, who will talk on practical farming and Prof. Howard Rather of M. S. C., who will discuss crops. At the afternoon session John Y. Beaty of Chicago, editor of Bankers Monthly, will speak on the business outlook. A. D. Morley of Allegan on practical hints in horticulture, and Prof. James Hays of Michigan State college on the dairy outlook.

The Michigan State college poultry truck, equipped with an educational exhibit of modern poultry equipment and methods of poultry management, accompanied by a speaker, will be present throughout the period of the institute.

Henry A. Geerds has been named general chairman.

Evert Exchange Club Drops National Ties

The Exchange club has voted to reorganize under the name of the Evert Service club. All connection with the national organization will be dropped and the new club will function as a purely local organization. The present officers will hold over until the last meeting in December.

The purposes of the new organization are fourfold: To exemplify the real meaning of service in business and professional life; to provide a medium for the exchange of ideas, methods, information and business courtesies; to promote good fellowship between members and their families and to provide means for this purpose; to take an active part in humanitarian, civic, state and national affairs and supporting movements tending to make the town, state and nation a better place in which to live. The membership is to be limited to 30.

Feeds for Lambs

The addition of corn silage to a ration of shelled corn and alfalfa hay increased the rate of gain and reduced the cost per pound of gain, it was found in experimental studies at the Michigan agricultural experiment station at East Lansing. The addition of linseed meal to a ration of shelled corn, alfalfa hay and corn silage resulted in more rapid daily gains and a slight reduction in cost of gains. The addition of linseed meal to a ration of oats, corn silage and alfalfa hay increased the daily gains and reduced the cost per hundredweight of gain.

A ration of barley, corn silage and alfalfa hay proved nearly equal in all respects to a ration of shelled corn, silage and alfalfa hay. A ration of oats, corn silage and alfalfa hay produced the least rapid and economical gains.

Set Farmers' Week Dates at College

Selection of the dates Feb. 1 to 5 for one of the largest meetings of farmers in the United States, and a general plan for the daily programs has been announced by the Farmers' week committee at Michigan State college.

The activities this year will be continued throughout the five days and full programs will be held on Friday, which in previous years has been "get away day." Morning and early afternoon sessions will be devoted to department meetings, and general programs and features will occupy the other hours.

Nearly all of the agricultural clans in Michigan schedule their annual meetings to be held at East Lansing during the week. This year will be no exception, and crops, soils, fruit, livestock, economic and social groups will gather to discuss their special problems.

Last year's experience with crowds which were too large to find places in Demonstration Hall has led to the scheduling of two similar entertainment programs to be held on succeeding nights. These features are planned for Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

Farmers Grow Good Alfalfa Seed Crop

Enough Michigan grown alfalfa seed was produced this year to plant most of the fields needed by the thousands of state dairymen who now work at a disadvantage because they have no alfalfa hay to feed their cows, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State college.

Farmers in Michigan have increased the acreage planted 800 per cent since 1919 and the state now is the leader in the group east of the Mississippi river, but the amount of hay produced here is still far short of the amount needed to feed local dairy herds. Alfalfa, as a hay crop, yields better, has a higher feeding value per ton, and sells for higher prices than competing crops.

Hardigan, Grimm, Cossack and Ontario Variegated are the varieties recommended by the college crops department, but common Michigan varieties will be satisfactory for seedlings which have a place in a crop rotation and are to be plowed down in two or three years.

While most of the alfalfa seed producing sections were harvesting a light crop this year, Michigan farmers secured unusually good yields.

Agriculture on Maps

A graphic summary of American agriculture, including 360 maps and charts based principally on the census and other data gathered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, has just been published. Copies of this may be obtained free upon request to the Nebraska Farmer as long as the Department of Agriculture's supply lasts. The maps show the increases and decreases in the principal crops and kinds of livestock between the years of 1909 and 1924 and other maps show changes in the period of 1904 to 1928. Some of the illustrations present physical conditions in agriculture land utilization and crops, farm animals and tractors, farm expenditures, co-operative marketing and purchasing, number and size of farms, value of farm property, mortgage debts, taxation, labor, population and roads.

State Farms Have 10 Hunting Clubs

Michigan now has ten hunting clubs designed after the original Williamson plan, which affords protection to both hunter and farmer.

Under the plan farmers of the club issue tickets to guest hunters, using judgment as to the type of nimrod they allow on their property. Farmers usually assess no fee for the hunting privileges, although it is permissible if they care to do so.

The clubs primarily were formed to prevent trespassing of hoodlums and other undesirable who menace property and game.

Few Young Horses

There is a shortage of good young horses and mules in the United States, according to the Horse Association of America. In 1920 there were 6,500,000 horses under four years old. In 1930 there were less than 2,000,000 of that age—a shortage of more than 4,000,000. It is estimated by the Horse Association that the United States will lose more than 850,000 horses in 1931, while raising only a little more than 500,000.

Feed Pigs With Manure Spreader

One of the eastern Iowa farmers has figured out a new way of delivering feed to a large bunch of feeding hogs. This farmer piles the manure spreader high with corn, drives to a clean, grassy slope in the pasture, and evenly distributes his load. A few lusty calls bring the hundreds of healthy hogs from the grove and the field, and in a short time the entire herd is fed. This method feeds practically all the pigs at once, eliminating the crowding and fighting attendant upon the old method of shoveling from the wagon.

POULTRY

BUYER NOW RULES EGG MART

There's a reason why egg prices have not advanced as sharply or as rapidly this fall as most poultrymen and farmers had expected. That reason, according to Michigan State college poultry specialists, has been supplied by the average American consumer.

With pork, beef, lamb, mutton and veal selling at much lower prices than a year ago consumers are not eating as many eggs as last fall when the poultry product was substituted extensively for high-priced meats.

Commenting upon the market situation the United States bureau of agricultural economics declares the "most disturbing factor in the egg situation today is the consumptive demand." Continuing, the bureau's economists state:

"The statistical position of the market was distinctly encouraging a few months ago, but has become less encouraging as the season has progressed. The cause for this lies principally in the failure of eggs to move into consumption during the past few months as rapidly as they did a year ago, this in spite of somewhat lower prices.

The receipts of fresh eggs have held close to last year's level, so that the lessened consumption has been reflected in a smaller movement of eggs out-of-storage.

Since the peak holdings in storage stocks were reached on July 1, net reduction in stocks up to Oct. 1 amounted to only 1,548,000 cases, compared with 2,024,000 cases from the peak in 1930 up to the same date, and a 5-year average net reduction of 2,065,000 cases. This smaller net reduction is even more unfavorable when it is considered that the peak holdings this year were reached on July 1 compared to Aug. 1 for both last year and the 5-year average.

"Consumption during October continued the unfavorable trend of August and September, and with receipts of fresh eggs for the period slightly above, corresponding receipts of last year, the additional reductions in total stocks made in October was, judged by reports from leading storage centers, likewise less than a year ago."

PULLET EGGS

One of the by-products of produce houses buying eggs on grade is the addition of the term "pullet eggs" (as used commercially) to the knowledge and vocabulary of farm folks.

Many have felt this fall that the produce houses were using the classification of "pullet eggs" to take an unfair advantage of producers. Whether the city market justifies the sharp discount we are unable to say, but it does seem unfair to pay 20 cents for eggs weighing twenty-four ounces and more per dozen and only 10 or 11 cents for those weighing up to twenty-two ounces, which is what many houses have done this fall. It seems that those produce houses that classify all eggs under twenty-two ounces per dozen as pullets have pushed the limit higher than general practice in egg buying in the United States calls for.

Either eggs weighing twenty to twenty-two ounces per dozen should go in the second class of hen eggs or pullet eggs averaging twenty ounces with a minimum of eighteen ounces eggs should not be cut so severely in price.

POULTRY FLOCKS REDUCED

Numbers of hens and pullets in farm flocks on October 1 were estimated by the U. S. Department of Agriculture at 6.2 per cent less than a year earlier while numbers of all young chickens decreased 5.2 per cent. Young chickens other than pullets increased one per cent. Number of eggs laid per hen continue to exceed the corresponding time in 1930, more than offsetting the decrease in numbers of hens, so that total production per flock has been larger than last year as well as above average. Prices for fresh eggs continue fairly strong, but may start their seasonal decline before November is over.

ZEELAND TO HOLD POULTRY EXHIBIT

After a lapse of several years, a poultry exposition again will be held at Zeeland. The dates are Dec. 29 to 31 and the show will be staged in the high school gymnasium under the direction of Otto Pino, agricultural instructor.

Local poultrymen will hold three poultry schools in conjunction with the show. Talks on poultry problems will be delivered by Profs. J. A. Hannah and J. A. Stafseth of Michigan State college and C. Phillips of the Wayne Milling Co.

Prizes will be awarded in four classes. Any one may enter the standard and production classes, but only poultrymen, 4-H or school clubs may exhibit in two special divisions. The board of supervisors has appropriated funds to stage the exposition.

BIG EGG INCOME

An average of 760 eggs is produced every second the year round in the United States, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The chicken and egg income in one year for the whole country is estimated at $1,175,000,000.

One of our local customers who bought 500 of our Larger Leghorn chicks last April is now getting up to 161 eggs per day from his flock of 200 pullets, and 50 hens.

Another customer reports up to 161 eggs per day from 200 pullets. Still another reports up to 44 eggs per day from 60 April hatched pullets.

You buy baby chicks for the eggs they will lay. Why not buy your 1932 Leghorn chicks from a strain that has been consistently trapnested and bred for size and high egg production for more than 12 years. This, together with the fact that we have made three direct importations of breeding stock from Tom Barron, Cathforth, England makes our Larger Leghorns your best bet for largest possible profits in 1932.

Governor Buys First Seals

BUSINESS OF STATE and a roomful of important callers at the executive office in Lansing wait while Wilbur M. Brucker, Governor of Michigan, buys the first 1931 tuberculosis Christmas seals from his salesman, Wilbur H. as Mrs. Brucker interestedly watches the transaction. Sale of the seals, by means of which anti-tuberculosis work in each of Michigan's 83 counties is financed, began Thanksgiving Day and will continue until Christmas.

Governor Brucker, who is honorary chairman of the State Christmas Seal Committee, has issued a personal appeal to the people of Michigan to support the work of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association and county tuberculosis societies by buying Christmas seals this year. Emphasizing particularly the critical importance today of work to prevent tuberculosis, which he termed "the foe of childhood," he said:

"Until tuberculosis is wiped out, no child--yours or mine, and no matter how favorably placed in his home--is safe from the danger of tuberculosis infection and disease. We must not sacrifice boys and girls to a disease which can be prevented and cured. Let us act against this foe of childhood by purchasing tuberculosis Christmas seals."

The tuberculosis death rate in Michigan far exceeds the death rate from any other communicable disease in children under 20 years of age, and is among the three leaders both in the age group from birth to 5 and from birth to 15. The Association and its affiliated societies are launching at the present time, by means of funds secured in the sale of Christmas seals, a concerted statewide campaign to discover the thousands of Michigan children known to have the childhood type of tuberculosis.

WEEK OF DECEMBER 6

Weather conditions for the greater part of the week beginning December 6th promises to be more or less open for this time of year in the most parts of Michigan. We are of the opinion there will be more than the usual amount of sunshine. This naturally will have a tendency to make the days, at least, moderate for the season. In fact, the general trend of the temperature will be rising from about Monday or Tuesday to readings above the normal for the second week of December. The very beginning of this week will register temperatures cool for the period, but each day will see a more or less moderation, at least until the last day of this week.

The state will be getting over the effects of a storm center at the very opening of this week which will leave the greater part of the first half of this week with generally clear weather—or as clear as Michigan skies can be when the sun is so far down in the south.

We do not look for any general cloudiness and storms in this state until close to Thursday and conditions, even then, are not expected to be very severe, at least, not as far as precipitation is concerned. There may be some scattered showers or snow flurries shortly after the middle of the week, but we believe the most prominent feature of this storm period will be the strong winds. The latter part of the week will be quite windy and threatening, but our opinion is there will be more bluster and threatening conditions than actual severe storms, unless it should be by the wind.

As far as roads are concerned marketing conditions for the farmers will be very good and even farm work, we believe, will still be active on many farms due to the expected weather conditions. We have reference to corn husking and similar outdoor labors in the fields.

Few People Fail to Read the Advertisements

Who are the people who claim that they do not read the ads in their papers? They think that they are telling you the truth, but ask them and they will recite the name of their motor car, their hat, their suit, their shoes, their tooth paste, their favorite cigarettes, ad infinitum—with the accent on the "ad." In other words, they are all advertised products.

They could no more escape the presence and the power of the printed word than they can evade eating or sleeping. The advertisements are a definite part of contemporary American life. Their messages are vital to daily existence. They have a definite association with the pocketbook, than which there is nothing more intimate and personal.

The important things are not merely to "read the advertisements" but to read ALL of them. The one advertisement which you did not read may contain information that you would have given a great deal to possess. Certainly it is as important to know that there is a sale at your dry goods or clothing store, that your shoe dealer may have something of special interest to tell you, that your grocer and meat dealer will have special prices on certain days, that your druggist has several specials, as it is to read that congress will hold a special session.

THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Copyright 1931, Central Press Association

Mary saw Frazier only occasionally. She always could plead extra work and her mother's loneliness; particularly with the recent loss of Bonnie from the family. She enjoyed being with Martin well enough—it wasn't that. But what was the use? She knew what he wanted—and to what disappointment it would ultimately lead. She couldn't consider Martin for a husband, though she made a brave effort.

For a time, he was patiently considerate of her turbulent home affairs, but there came an evening when he protested:

"Mary, I want to be fair, but aren't you going to give me some little hope soon? Why wait, ma chere? Marry me and be happy. I'll make you happy—you'll see, loving you the way I do." His arms were about her, insistent, his face close to hers; and she knew that his lips would claim hers at her slightest gesture of resignation. There flashed through her mind, instantaneously, that with one word—tomorrow, greater wealth would be hers than Bonnie possessed, that she would be treasured and cared for the rest of her days, that she need never again be concerned for the comfort of Mom and the boys.

But there was no love in her heart for Martin—almost a revulsion at his too-nearness. Her body was rigid in his arms and she pushed her hands lightly against him as in fear.

"I'm sorry, Martin. I can't love you. I must stop seeing you like this."

"Don't say that, dear," he begged with alarm. "I'll promise to wait longer. Only try to love me, just a little, won't you? And you will let me be with you sometimes?"

"Not if you are going to insist upon my loving you, Martin."

"Oh, Mary, let me take care of you," he began all over. "You're working too hard, I can see that. Working and worrying. Let me help you. I'll take all the worries out of your precious little hands and put beautiful rings on them as there should be." He held her hands together in his own.

Mary was sorry for him. There was no longer any doubt in her mind that he loved her. Had he been posing, she would have discovered it long ago. He had had many opportunities to reveal any insincerity of purpose. She appreciated that if Martin loved her and couldn't have her, he was just as pitiable as she was in her unrequited love for Dick.

"Somehow, Martin, I don't care about rings on my fingers. For so long I have had to meet the continual problems of existence, that personal adornment doesn't bother me."

"You don't need it, anyway. You are sweet enough without being dolled up. But that isn't what I meant. Whether or not you wear rings, your busy hands need to rest. That is what I want you to do—rest and look beautiful for me, and be happy."

It didn't sound like a difficult obligation, surely. But those three words involved so much more than just appeared on the surface. Idleness never could take the place of work for Mary; she did not flatter herself that her beauty warranted a man's eternal admiration—and that word "happy" embraced a world of conflicting emotions no possibilities.

If only it were so easy as it sounded. Life would be a simple entity. But Mary had experienced enough to know that you could not take life and adjust it—no matter how nicely you arranged it—and then sit back with utter complaisance that nothing could disturb your scheme.

It was early in March that Bonnie came to Mary with a desperate problem that eventually involved the fortunes and happiness of several people.

CHAPTER LXVII

Foster had gone to Washington for two days. Mary was absorbed in the demands of a particularly busy day when she was surprised to have a visit from Bonnie. Her sister seldom came to the office, and then only when she joined her husband to keep an early engagement or business appointment. She never came to see Mary purposely and had only the briefest exchange of greetings with her when she did see her.

"Hello, there," Mary welcomed her brightly.

"Hello. How's everything?" Bonnie's voice was strangely flat, Mary thought.

"Oh—fine. Have a chair. I'll be finished with this letter in a minute. It has to go out special right away."

Bonnie made herself comfortable and fired a cigarette. She watched Mary's industriousness through the cloud of smoke, and frowned.

When Mary flipped the sheets from the machine, affixed her employer's name and her own signature to the message and addressed an envelope with an efficient minimum of gestures, Bonnie remarked, "You just eat up work and look for more, don't you? How you stand the grind, I don't know. Why, I wouldn't stick here in this office every day, year after year, as you have, for all the money in the street."

Mary laughed with good humor. "Well—that's just the difference, you see. I don't think I'd care to change places with you, either."

"Well, you wouldn't right now," Bonnie exhaled a final blue cloud and flung the stub into a tray.

Mary looked at her quickly, with instant concern. "What's the matter, honey?"

"Plenty. If I tell you, will you promise to help me and not tell Ronnie a word?"

"Why—if I can, and if he shouldn't know."

"No ifs about it. You will just have to help me, and if he ever knows, it will be just too bad for me."

Mary was alarmed. "What is it, then?"

"Well, it's a long story, but the short of it is—I've got to have an extra thousand or two or I'll lose my happy home."

What strange contradiction was this? Bonnie, who had thousands at her command, needed money to keep her home! "What do you mean? Your regular allowance was paid last week and—"

Bonnie interrupted impatiently. "Oh! I've lost all that and plenty more."

"Lost it? How?"

"Playing bridge with Laura Jameson's set."

"Oh, Bonnie, that's foolish. But your husband—"

"I'll tell you. Ronald Foster is a mean old miser, if you want to know it. We've had more than one row over money this winter."

"But he gives you a huge allowance—"

"It may look huge to you, but I can't keep up with my crowd on it. And that's what Ronald can't see. How should he know? He never knew what it cost to keep a wife. The thing that makes him see red is my playing bridge for big stakes. Of course, I lose all the time. I only play for the fun of it, so I'm not going to labor at it to win money."

"But you shouldn't really, dear. And if Ronald objects, you have a double reason for quitting."

"But, Mary, it's no use to talk about that, now. I'm in an awful jam. I've owed some of the girls for two months and I just can't catch up. The last time I asked Ronnie for money, he made an awful scene. I'm really afraid of him when he's angry. He told me if I didn't stop gambling, he would leave me flat."

"Well, why didn't you stop?"

"Oh, you don't know what it means to have to be a good sport and keep up with your position in society. Laura Jameson is my best friend and she was giving some bridge parties for out-of-town guests—well, anyway, I got into it deeper than ever, and I'm frantic. Some of them have threatened to ask Ronnie for their money, and if he hears about it—Mary, really, he might kill me, he gets so furious." The tears stood in her blue eyes now.

Mary was surprised and puzzled. She couldn't understand Bonnie's being so weak and foolish; and she could understand Foster's conservative and sane viewpoint.

"But your allowance will be due the first of the month," she offered vaguely.

"Three weeks yet. Mary, I can't wait that long for money. You see, I've promised the girls so many times and then used the money for something else I needed, thinking I could pay them next time, or that I would be lucky and win it back. But it only gets worse. Can't you write me a check and not let Ronnie know about it—and I'll pay you back the first?"

"Oh, I couldn't do that," instantly. "But I'll give you what I have of my own, to help out."

Bonnie brightened at once. "How much?"

"I've managed to save about four hundred dollars—I saved half of my Christmas bonus after getting a coat for Mom and both the boys."

"Four hundred?" Bonnie scoffed. "I've got to have at least two thousand—and quick! I don't see why you can't draw it from Ronnie's account," she pouted. "Would you rather have him turn me out—or worse?"

"I think you should promise him to stop gambling and then ask him to help you."

"I've already done that until it's like crying 'wolf' to him. You don't know him, Mary, as I do. What makes me sick is that his own business is nothing but a gamble—all he has ever done—that he hounds me for a little pleasure."

"Oh, no, Bonnie. The brokerage business is not a silly gamble like playing cards. It takes brains to win in this shrewd business like Foster has—just as much as any business. I think he is right about wanting you to stop."

"You would, of course. But the question is, right now, are you going to help me or not? I'm desperate. I've promised to pay up on the fifteenth or there will be fireworks. Now, if you can't do such a simple thing as give me some of my own husband's money—what do you suggest?"

"It isn't so simple as that, Bonnie. If he wanted you to have it, I'd be glad to, but I can't be dishonest with him, even for you." Mary also reflected that it wasn't a matter of cheating him for three weeks, because there wasn't much chance that Bonnie ever would pay the money back. At least, she couldn't depend upon it. But, first and most important, she couldn't do even a very small dishonest thing to Foster, even to protect her sister. "There must be something we can do," she encouraged thoughtfully.

"There has to be. And there's no one else I can go to about it," helplessly.

"Well, let me think it over tonight, anyway. Not being used to laying my hands on several thousand dollars so easily, I can't tell you what to do. And I'm terribly rushed with work, honey. So if you don't mind, I'll get busy, and do the best I can for you."

"You won't say a word about it to Ronnie?" her sister pleaded.

"Cross my heart I won't. But you think it over, too, and see what you can do."

"I have thought it over until I'm dizzy, Mary. You don't know, I tell you, how serious it is." Her face was pathetic to Mary, who reassured her.

When she had gone, Mary felt weary and perplexed. What a problem for her to solve, next. As she turned to her work, her thoughts reached about desperately in her subconscious mind for a possible solution. She was baffled in every direction—save one. Martin Frazier was the only person she knew who had plenty of money and would grant her any favor she might ask. But could she ask it?

CHAPTER XLVIII

Opening Foster's mail the next morning, Mary glanced through a letter that so attracted her attention that she read it again more carefully. She frowned, thoughtfully. It informed her that Roth, Mabry & Company were offering a new stock to the public on March 15th at fifty dollars per share. Mary was accustomed to reading such statements; in fact, she had known of the new issue for a week. Roth-Mabry was a sound company, in good standing. There was, even now, a wide demand for the stock, before the issue date. It was already on the market on a "when issue basis."

An idea flashed across her mind. Why might not this be a solution to the problem—Bonnie's problem. She had always wanted to try buying stock—but never dared. She had nothing to lose, at least, she couldn't lose the little she had managed to save.

But necessity is often a hard driver. It compels people to do absurd and regrettable things, sometimes. Mary never would have thought of doing so hazardous a thing for herself. But Bonnie's happiness was in the balance. Even in her desperation for her sister, she had resolutely dismissed the thought of appealing to Martin for help. That would involve obligations to him which she could not assume.

This temptation mocked her, challenged her sportsmanship as well as her need. She could place her order for some of the stock now and hold it until the issue date without paying out a cent. From her experience and deductions, she was pretty confident that with the popularity and demand of the stock, the price would surely rise to fifty-three or more by the fifteenth of the month. She could sell out before she had to pay for it, at some profit, anyway.

There was even a chance of a big profit. Many others did it—why couldn't she? Even if the stock advanced only one or two points, it would be that much more added to what she already had to help Bonnie. For once, she would be a good sport. The chances were decidedly in her favor.

She picked up the morning paper, opened it to the stock reports. Yes, there it was, "Wellmade Products. . . fifty dollars w. i."

The paper trembled in her fingers at the mere thought of the venture. Her next consideration was, how many shares would she buy? No use to take a timid few. That would do her no good. She made some rapid calculations on a pad and gasped at her own audacity.

Two hundred shares with a three-point profit would give her six hundred dollars. That, added to her four hundred, would make a thousand for Bonnie. A five-point rise would make that much on the stock alone—no use to estimate higher. It was possible, but not probable. Her excitement mounted.

Two hundred shares at fifty dollars each would cost ten thousand dollars. Ah! that was a different matter. On March fifteenth she would owe ten thousand dollars that she didn't have in the world.

But Wellmade Products was sure to rise at least a point by that time and the demand for stock would be so great that she would have no difficulty in disposing of it. Hadn't she seen that happen over and over? She always had thought that if she ever had the money to back her in such a venture, she would be ready to risk the chance. So, why wait until she had the money—which might never be? She could make something now and let Bonnie have it. Then when Bonnie repaid her, she would have a nice nest egg with which to begin some real investing. She had a hunch that this was her chance. She could accomplish two results with one sporting gesture. Men played the market on hunches—well, she could, too.

She lifted the telephone from its cradle and dialed the number. Her voice quivered with excitement as she spoke her order. She felt like an adventurer starting out to sail the seven seas in a vessel that might sink at any moment—and she knew, actually, that she was just as unwise.

Mary was somewhat reassured, however, when Foster arrived in town later and upon reaching the office, asked her to call several of his best clients and advise them to invest in Wellmade Products. Frazier was one of these. He placed his order for a thousand shares and made Mary feel as if her venture on two hundred shares was very conservative. The difference was that on March fifteenth, Frazier would have the fifty thousand dollars to pay for his stock, while Mary would have only four hundred against her obligation of ten thousand dollars.

The following day was Saturday, and Bonnie insisted upon Mary coming out to Westchester for the weekend. That was because she wanted to know what Mary was doing to help her in her impasse—not prompted by any particular hospitality. She could not go to the office to talk with Mary when her husband was in town, for any unusual act of hers might arouse his suspicions.

The family had been to the Foster mansion once for dinner, but as Mom declared to Mary afterward, "It don't seem as if anyone could use that much space just to live in. I wouldn't feel at home at all in such a house." So it was not often that she saw her younger daughter these days.

Mary had been amused at the twins' behavior upon that occasion. For once, no disciplinary admonitions were necessary. The house, the servants, the dinner service and Ronald Foster, all avowed them to cherubic behavior. They didn't know quite what it was all about—that Bonnie had left their own home to stay in such a strange place, but it must be all right if Mom and Mary thought so. They were just too grateful that they were privileged to return to the cramped, cheery place where they could shout and whistle, romp and leap over bothersome stairsteps if they chose.

Bonnie sent her car for Mary on Saturday at noon, and the butler ushered the guest to her suite of rooms. Mary had attended none of Bonnie's many parties, for she preferred not to interfere with her sister's social connections. She couldn't afford to live up to her pace and saw no reason for meeting those who did. Instead of grasping at the slightest pretense to claim a right to her wealthy sister's favor and hospitality, Mary shunned the two very natural claims that were hers.

Mary did not share Mom's opinions about Bonnie's house. It was exactly the kind of home that she would like, and appreciate. Her tastes would have differed from Bonnie's somewhat, but the luxury and beauty of it appealed to her innate instincts. Looking about the handsomely appointed rooms to which she had been shown, Mary could scarcely believe that she had just taken a ridiculous chance with her life and honor to provide the owner of all this luxury with a paltry thousand dollars. It was as absurd as some impossible fairy tale. Hand-carved Spanish-period furniture, brocaded hangings, deep-piled carpet—a suite of rooms almost as big as the Vaughn house, for the use of one guest.

She had removed her hat and coat when Bonnie fluttered in, all sweet concern for her sister's comfort. She wore gold-brocaded pajamas with wide, flapping trousers and a sleeveless coat.

"Hello, old dear," she kissed her perfunctorily. "Have a nice trip out? Now make yourself at home, won't you? I guess you have everything to make you comfortable." Then, changing her amiable tone to one of anxiety, "Have you done anything, Mary?"

"Yes, honey, I think we can manage it all right, if luck is with us at all."

"What do you mean?"

"Never mind how I am going to manage. But I think I can get enough together by the fifteenth to tide you over until the first. Promise me, Bonnie, that you will stop this foolishness and get even on your accounts. There is no reason why you should be in debt and waiting a month ahead for your allowance."

"Of course, you wouldn't understand," Bonnie complained, but she did not advise Mary to "attend to her own little peanut stand" this time.

CHAPTER LXIX

Bonnie entertained that night, as she always did if she did not plan to go elsewhere. The three had dined alone in the warm-red-decorated splendor of the spacious dining room. Sitting at one side of the long, lace-covered table, with Bonnie and Foster at each end, all in their carved, high-backed chairs cushioned with red velvet—Mary felt like a movie actress on a make-believe set, in the act of dining in state for the erudition of the public.

Twombly moved between them, silently, over the plushy Oriental rug, holding the serving dishes for each of them, in turn, and in exactly the prescribed manner of conventional butlerism. He might have been an automaton with his utter passivity and conformity.

Foster was entertaining and gracious. He liked to have Mary around his home as much as he enjoyed her presence at the office. In fact, he wished mightily that she would visit them more often. The house seemed more comfortable and complete with her about, though she was quiet and even more reticent than usual. He preferred her to any of the other girls whom Bonnie had about much of the time.

During dinner he remarked to Mary, "That new issue of Wellmade Products looks promising, doesn't it?"

Mary flushed miserably and looked at him with sudden alarm. Did he know of her foolish gamble, she wondered.

"If only it turns out as well as it looks," she replied calmly. "A lot of people will be anxious until next Thursday."

"Well, I took a generous block myself, so I'll be in the lineup, to say nothing of my responsibility for the customers I sold. This was a good week for business—best for some time."

"Oh, you two, always talking business," Bonnie reproached them with a bored laugh. "I'm just glad I don't know a thing about the market, so Ronnie can't talk to me about it. I should think that both of you would have enough of it during office hours."

"We can't very well keep from our minds what is second nature to us, can we?" he smiled at Mary as if he enjoyed sharing something with her.

Mary thought, if Bonnie had taken the chance on the market that she had, she might not find it so easy to dismiss the subject from her mind. "I don't think it is even second nature with me," she replied, "it is just about my whole life."

"It wouldn't be a bad idea for you to get some tips from Mary and invest some money for yourself, Bonnie," Foster suggested.

His wife shot him a glance of disgust and contempt. He threatened to disown her because she wanted to gamble at bridge, then suggested that she should play the market! To her, it was all the same, for she would have refused to exert her mind over either. She would have lost in stocks with the same incognitance and indifference that she lost at bridge.

1700-YEAR OLD EGYPTIAN CITY BEING DUG UP

Ancient Karanis, desert city buried beneath centuries of debris and wind blown sand, is being excavated so thoroughly by the University of Michigan Egyptian expedition that visitors may traverse the streets and view the houses where 1,700 years ago some thousands of Egyptians went about their daily round of affairs, according to Dr. E. E. Peterson, in charge of the field work of the expedition, in an interview during a recent visit to the United States.

To preserve intact the remnants of this old culture, excavation is made carefully, means as primitive as those probably employed in building the city. Most of the diggers employed are natives from upper Egypt, numbering 40 men and older boys. The employment problem among the children of the region is largely eliminated by the use of from 300 to 400 in the removal of the excavated material.

These boys average from 12 to 16 years of age, although very few know themselves just how old they are. Although they move 250 to 300 tons of earth a day, their labors are not especially arduous, since they carry only about 10 pounds in the basket which they balance on their heads.

Incidentally Dr. Peterson scoffed at the idea that archeologists have anything to fear from mysterious deaths, such as the so-called "curse" of King "Tut," which was credited by superstitious persons with the death of Lord Carnarvon and others who died a few years after opening the tomb of Tutankamen.

Lord Carnarvon died of a streptococcus infection of a common type, he said, and cited a serious infection contracted by a Michigan worker from a flea bite as an example of how the field worker in Egypt is exposed to dangers of this sort without bringing in supernatural explanations.

Why the city of Karanis was finally abandoned is more or less a mystery. For hundreds of years it was an important grain growing center for Egypt and later Rome, and consists, in fact, of general levels of towns which were built on the same site.

Possibly overtaxation during the days when Rome became ruler of the Egyptian territory, made it impossible for the peasants round about to farm profitably, so that they dispersed and the city died away as a trading center.

Laxity on the part of public officials in the case of the canals, which brought water from the Nile may also have been responsible. These canals furnished the life blood of this desert region and when an able governor was in office he required the people to dig out the drifting sands and to remove the sedge grass which choked off the water flow.

'31 Cherry Queen To Paint Murals For College Hall

Selected from her art class as the one best fitted for the task, Miss Maxine Weaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Weaver of this city, and 1931 queen of the National Cherry Festival, will paint two murals on the walls of the new reception hall at Greenbrier college, Lewisburg, W. Va.

The reception hall is a new unit added to the Greenbrier campus and Miss Weaver's outstanding talent led to her selection to do two of the murals. She is engaged in illustrating "The Dance of the Dwarfs," by Grieg, which will take her until the first of the year, when she will start on the mural work.

State Films Are Much in Demand

The educational division of the conservation department continues to prove a popular one, Edward A. Hyer, head of the division, reports.

During the month of October the department's educational motion pictures were viewed by 107,565 persons. Fifty-two organizations borrowed the various films, showing them to 32,487 persons. The department's staff gave 17 lectures in conjunction with the pictures before an attendance of 4,770.

There are 14 members in the rotary school loaning circuit where the pictures were seen by 77,308.

Kazoo Health Officer For 23 Years, Resigns

Dr. Arvin H. Rockwell, for 23 years health officer and director of public health and welfare of Kalamazoo, and recognized as the dean of city officials in point of service, has tendered his resignation to the city commission to take effect January 1.

Dr. Rockwell, who is past 80, has been contemplating resignation for several months, deferring its presentation until he saw the department well housed and organized in the new municipal building.

During Dr. Rockwell's administration the health service has developed from a one-man service to a well organized department with six major branches. Dr. Rockwell graduated from the University of Michigan in 1883.

Have You Ever Thought of This

By LONORE KENT

"If only there were some way to make that unsightly radiator more attractive! I've worked so hard on the rest of the room and am happy about the way everything looks—except that awkward heater. I guess it's just one of those things that people have to endure in summer because they are useful in winter."

"Why not camouflage it for the summer?" I asked. "Make it an asset instead of a liability."

"How could I?"

"Well, you have a lovely casement window there and if you screened the radiator with a little stand and covered it with wallboard, you'd have a lovely place to put that model ship of yours, or your jewel tree, or the Japanese garden."

Lois had perked up her ears. "Why that's a lovely idea. Tell me how to do it."

"First of all, I'd get a board and four upright pieces and have a carpenter make a substantial little stand and cover it with wallboard. Then I'd decide about the finishing."

"What color should it be?" Lois asked.

"Well, that depends on the rest of the room. If the color scheme needed to be accented, that would be a good place to do it, but your room is so harmonious and inviting now that I think it would be well to have the wallboard of the same tone as your taupe walls and the shelf on the top match the gray-green of your woodwork. When that is done, you can give it personality by glueing a gay print on the front panel or by stenciling a design on it in deep shades of green."

"Yes—or you could use decalcomania designs or silhouettes," Lois was eager. "And I'm not going to stop with the radiator in this room. I'll have the bathroom radiator covered. That will make the shelf I've been needing and a stand over the radiator in my bedroom will make a place to keep my favorite books. And the one in the dining room—"

"—will make a lovely place for your ivy pots. Well, I see where you'll be busy planning these till I get back next time."

"You bet I will—but hurry back so we can plan some more."

M. S. C. IS GIVEN CLASS A RATING

Michigan State college has been placed on the list of educational institutions accredited with class A rating by the American Association of Colleges and Universities.

The association granted M. S. C. accredited rating at its biennial meeting at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Placing the college on the list of class A institutions climaxed a two-year campaign on the part of officials of the school to gain a rating equal to that of the leading universities of the United States and Canada.

Michigan State college graduates and undergraduates now will be admitted to any university in this country without sacrifice or credits, as was the case prior to the association's action.

Portland Boy, 3, Has Many Grandparents

Earl Zimmerman, 3, of Portland, has more than the usual number of grandparents. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Zimmerman.

Mrs. Emma Burhans is his great-grandmother, Mortimer Reed is his great-grandfather, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burhans are great-grandfather and great-grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Burhans and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fandel, the latter of Lansing, are grandparents. One great-grandmother, Mrs. Joseph Gaedart, died since the boy's birth.

Staff of Zeeland Annual Completed

The student council of the Zeeland high school has selected the following to complete the staff of the Stepping Stone, high school annual:

Business manager, Willis Van Farrow; advertising manager, Clarence Yntema; publicity, Gladys Moredyke and Elizabeth Hofmann; subscription, Henry Vandenberg and Hugh DePree.

This is the first year the annual will be published by the council instead of the senior class.

Lansing Senior Heads Council at C. S. T. C.

Edward J. Killoran, Lansing senior at Central State Teachers college, was elected president of the student council. Killoran, president of the senior class, also was president of the junior class last year, and is one of Central's outstanding athletes.

Dale Adams, LaPlace, Ill., was chosen vice president; Margaret Barnes, Mt. Pleasant junior, was elected secretary, and Robert Northway, Mt. Pleasant, is treasurer.

LIST OF FOOD SHOWS WAY TO ECONOMICAL MEALS

The marketing list used by the home management practice houses of the home economics division of Michigan State College in attaining a 25c per person per day level for meals will provide a usable working scale for any housewife interested. The menus used covered a period of nine days and were planned for eight college women. Enough calories, proteins, iron, calcium and phosphorus were contained in the series for the average adult woman, but only .8 of the total amount of nourishment required by an adult man engaged in moderately active work.

Every item used in the preparation of the meals is included in the list, according to Miss Irma H. Gross, under whose direction the houses are operated in connection with the home economics department. The marketing list for eight women for nine days follows:

Dairy—Half pound cottage cheese, thirty-two quarts milk, three and one-half dozen eggs, three and two-thirds pounds of butter, one pound American cheese.

Fruit—Five pounds grapes, one pound prunes, one No. 2 can pineapple, twelve pounds apples, six bananas, two lemons, one No. 1 can pineapple, one pound dried apricots, one pound raisins, three pounds pears, one-half package date.

Meats and Fish—One pound codfish, 2 pounds round steak, two and three-fourths pounds bacon, one-half pound salt pork, three pounds breast of lamb, eight pork chops, one pound can salmon, three pounds pot roast, one soup bone, one and one-half pounds hamburger.

Vegetables—Three heads lettuce, two stalks celery, six pounds carrots, one cucumber, three No. 2 cans peas, three and one-half No. 2 cans tomatoes, two eggplants, five and one-half pounds onions, one pound lima beans, one green pepper, two cabbage, one small jar pickles, one can tomato soup, three pounds sweet potatoes, one pound fresh tomatoes, two and one-half pounds parsnips, one and one-third pounds navy beans, one No. 2½ can beets, one-half pint celery relish (home made), twenty pounds potatoes.

Miscellaneous—One cake yeast, one-third pound loaf sugar, seven and one-half pounds granulated sugar, five and one-half pounds white flour, one-fourth pound cream of wheat, three ounces tapioca, one-eighth pound black tea, two and one-half pounds brown sugar, two-thirds pound Crisco, one-third large can molasses, one quart Mazola, two ounces vinegar, one-half pound rice, one-half pound macaroni, one-half pound peanut butter, five white bread, one pound graham flour, two-thirds pound coffee, one-third pound chocolate, one-third package corn flakes, one dozen Mary Ann cookies, one dozen coconut bars, four whole wheat bread, two ounces baking powder, one-third pound cocoa, one pound corn meal, one and one-fourth pounds crackers.

Roast Beef with Dumplings—Boil until tender; season, then lift out beef and remove to the oven to brown. Add sufficient water to remaining seasoned broth to make at least two quarts. The kettle must be large enough to boil the dumplings without crowding. Sift together one cup of flour, two level teaspoons of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Add sufficient sweet milk to make a stiff batter. Drop by teaspoons into boiling broth and boil fifteen minutes in a tightly covered kettle.

Brown Bread—One-half cup sugar, two teaspoons soda, four tablespoons hot water, finish filling cup with molasses, three cups sour milk, five cups graham flour, one teaspoon salt, one cup raisins, two teaspoons baking powder. Bake one hour in moderate oven.

Quince-Apple Sauce—Pare and slice a quince in thin slices; cook fifteen minutes in boiling water. Add one and one-half quarts of tart apples, quartered, with water enough to cover. Cook until tender. Add one cup of sugar or sweeten to taste.

Sunshine Creams—Soften a tablespoonful of gelatine in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Boil together one cupful granulated sugar and half a

Our Country—Its History

By ANNE BYRON

WHEN WASHINGTON BECAME PRESIDENT

The United States, which Washington was unanimously called to preside over in 1789, was a far different country from the United States of today.

The mass of the population was scattered along the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Georgia with a mere handful representing the interests of the United States in the virgin territory beyond the Alleghenies and in the Ohio and Cumberland River valleys.

What is now a land of factories and cities was then a vast stretch of forests and farms. Over 90 per cent of the inhabitants were tillers of the soil.

Politically the United States was far from a democratic republic in 1789, and socially it had very aristocratic tendencies.

The wide gulf which today separates fabulous wealth and sordid poverty did not exist in the United States in those early days. And it was amidst these conditions and circumstances that congress, the judicial body, and President Washington laid the foundation of this great present day government.

Having been inaugurated after due ceremony, accepting the oath of office in the federal building, on which site the present subtreasury now stands in New York city, the president delivered his inaugural address to the members of congress assembled.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

HOW TO CHOOSE YOUR BEAUTY HELPS

I have been talking to you in times past about the fundamental laws of beauty, cleanliness, stimulation, etc. Then I told you about the different kinds of beauty and how you should combine them into a perfect ensemble.

This week I want to come down to telling you how to choose the actual beauty helps—the creams, the lotions, etc., that you use to improve your good looks. So few women really know what they are putting on their faces nor why they are doing it. I want to give you a picture of what these beauty agents really are when you take off their wrappings and trimmings.

I wonder how many of you, when you go to a beauty counter, have a preconceived idea of what you want. Sometimes I wish all beauty preparations would be put up in plain packages so that people would never buy them for their pretty boxes or attractive jars, but only because of what is inside of them. The package cannot improve your skin, no matter how decorative it is.

Walk over to your dressing table and see what you have on it, then ask yourself just why. There should be nothing on it except what you need for your beauty care, and the number of articles should depend upon your particular type and condition of skin. Some women need only two or three jars, while others need a dozen. There is nothing quite so discouraging as to see a woman's dressing table crowded with three times as many jars and bottles as she needs. She may be doing her skin just as much harm by using the wrong things as she would be if she did not use any at all. I know women who buy every beauty preparation they hear about simply because they want to be sure they do not miss anything. This type of woman buys by impulse instead of by logic. Her dressing table represents her temperament and not her judgment.

There are other women who are "penny wise and pound foolish" about their good looks. They feel that everything they spend on themselves is selfishness. They would think nothing of an extra two or three dollars spent on food that is soon eaten, but they let the wrinkles come in their faces, simply because they think they cannot afford to guard against them. They are wrong, all wrong—the way to a man's heart is really much more through his eyes than through his stomach, and when you take care of your own good looks you are doing much more for your family than if you overfed them. Many people eat too much, anyway.

So you see, the problem is to strike a happy balance, get what beauty aids you need—no more and no less, and be sure you know what is inside of the bottles and jars that are lined up on your dressing table.

What Does Your Hand Writing Tell?

By JANET WINTON

Script His Recommendation

The accompanying excerpt is from a handwriting which reveals an interesting combination of traits.

Habits of mind, mood and manner in the average person are rarely harmoniously balanced. Here, however,

*a longing

is charm of personality, an intelligent degree of emotional control and both imagination and the ability to reason logically.

Among the most interesting peculiarities of script is that of joined words. And like most handwriting characteristics, it is unconscious, a muscular reflex of a type of mental action. It is usually found in the scripts of persons who have both constructive ability and fluency of expression. When found in the hand of a detail worker the boss should make a mental note of this oddity of script, to help him remember, when vacancy occurs higher up, to advance a deserving, capable and progressive spirit to a position where he can better employ his abilities and resourcefulness.

An underscored signature emphasizes force of personality. However, such a writer is far from grasping. He is decisive, but knows his place. In other words, he is tactful, while poscupful of water to the thread stage, pour slowly over the well beaten yolks of two eggs, add the gelatine and the juice and grated rind of an orange. Whip till almost congealed, then fold in a cupful of whipped cream and the whites of the eggs, stiffly beaten. Serve in tall, slender glasses, topping each with a cherry.

sessing mental processes which have been trained to deal with matters of fact.

An interest in cultural subjects is shown, literature and music in particular. Such a writer has a sense of proportion and design and must be a smart dresser, judging from tall lower case "r."

Slow Motion Symphony

Writing which moves leisurely, reflects a plodding intellect. The erect position shows emotional sluggishness. And so, though the writing here is heavy in pressure, an indication of physical strength, such writers' appetites and passions are either unawakened or undeveloped.

Closely dotted "is" indicates a lack of imagination. The fact that these are accented stresses that they have one track minds and are inclined to be dogmatic and assertive.

They themselves are inclined to be lazy, which fact may or may not inspire them to take things for granted. But the fact remains that they do.

*audiences

Notice, please, how the initial letters of words start off with introductory strokes, a sign of conventionality. Such writers are instinctively antagonistic toward anything modern.

The cut-out finger of a pair of worn-out kid gloves, slipped over the end of a brass curtain rod, will help in slipping the curtain on easily.

Do not wash your hair brush in hot water. It will soften the bristles. Use lukewarm water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added.

Before frying doughnuts or croquettes try fat with a small piece of bread. When it browns the fat is ready.

The Fiery Tongue!

By Frank Glew

When anger points its fiery tongue,
Straight at your mind and heart,
Arouse your trusty tolerance
To quell its piercing dart.
For anger is an enemy
That crushes faith and peace;
Your joy will never be secure
Until your tempers cease.
In combat, be it field or gym,
The man who really wins,
Is he who keeps his senses cool
From the time the game begins.
In business, it's the pleasant man
Who lands the choicest deal;
For those who serve you with a smile
Are the salesmen who appeal.
In friendship, it's the gentle pal
To whom in strife we turn,
And for whose poise and self-control
The fiery-hearted yearn.
In home, the men who really live,
Whose memories are so sweet
Are those whose patience, love and cheer
No anger can defeat.
In life, we always homage pay,
And we elevate by choice,
The men who firmly wend their way
BUT WHO NEVER RAISE THEIR VOICE.
