What's in a Name?

The name of a shop is important. A recent advertisement asked, "How do you think you'd change your name if you owned a restaurant? "I'd call it 'Mimi's'" was the answer.

"Very good, little man," answered the owner of the shop. "That's what I call a name!"

The day was rainy. "You are so lucky," the owner remarked to the young child. "If my mother had had a shop, she would have called it 'Gigi's' or 'Rafi's' or 'Shoshana's.'"

"Yes, but Gigi and Rafi and Shoshana are all so different," the child pointed out.

"Yes, that's true," the owner agreed, "but they all have one thing in common: they are names that sound sweet and friendly."

What is the best way to choose a name for a shop? Some people suggest considering the type of food served, the location, or the target audience. What do you think? Do you have any suggestions for naming a shop? Share your thoughts in the comments section.

The Romance of a Business Girl

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

CHAPTER VI

It was a week later, and the excitement of the election was still in the air. The two women had been busily planning their future together, but now they faced a new challenge: the pressure of daily life in their new business.

"I suppose you'll be busy for a while," Mary said to her friend. "You know, running a business is never easy."

"Yes, but I love it," Rachel replied. "I love the rush of making decisions and the satisfaction of seeing my ideas come to life."

"I'm not sure I could handle that," Mary admitted. "I'm much happier working in a more structured environment."

"Well, you don't have to," Rachel assured her. "You can choose whether you want to work in a business or not."

"I think I might try it," Mary said, a smile creeping onto her face. "It might be challenging, but I might also find it rewarding."

"Good for you," Rachel said, stroking her friend's hand. "I'll be here to support you every step of the way."

"Thank you," Mary replied, her eyes sparkling with excitement. "I can't wait to see where this journey takes us."
